UNKNOWN, Paddle Your Own Canoe. Published anonymously in the Editor's Drawer of Harper's Monthly for May, 1854, with this prelatory note: "They have a very expressive term at the West, in speaking of a young man who would be the architect of his own fortune, that he must 'paddle his own canoe.' A lady of Indiana has expanded the curt advice into a piece of original and sparkling verse." The poem consisted of seven eight-line stanzas, each closing with the same refrain. It has been attributed to Sarah K. Bolton, Sarah Tittle and Edward P. Philpots. Mrs. Bolton was only thirteen years old at the time, and it is difficult to see how Philpots could qualify as "a lady from Indiana." The probability is that all three wrote verses with this refrain. (See Notes and Queries, 25 May, 1901, p. 414.)

INDEPENDENCE DAY

Independence forever!

JOHN ADAMS. Adams died July 4, 1826. He had been aroused on the morning of that day by a discharge of cannon, and asked the cause. On being told it was Independence Day, he murmured "Independence forever!" After says previously he had given these words in answer to a request for a toast to be offered in his name on the Fourth.

It is my living sentiment, and by the blessing of God it shall be my dying sentiment.—Independence now and Independence forever!

JOHN WATSON. The closing words of the eulogy upon the death of John Adams, American Magazine, 1826, 1827.

eulogy was in memory of both Adams and Jefferson, who had died on the same day, 4 July, 1826.

Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America; and a greater perhaps never was, nor will be, decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, that those United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States.

JOHN ADAMS, Letter to Mrs. Adams, 3 July, 1776.

The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore.

JOHN ADAMS, Letter to Mrs. Adams, 3 July, 1776.

While Gen'l Howe with a Large Armament is advancing towards N York, our Congress resolved to Declare the United Colonies Free and Independent States. A Declaration for this Purpose, I expect, will this day pass Congress. . . . It is gone so far that we must now be a free independent State, or a Conquered Country.

ABRAHAM CLARK, Letter to Elias Dayton, Phila., July 4, 1776. Clark was a member of the Continental Congress from New Jersey.

The United States is the only country with a known birthday.

JAMES G. BLAINE, America's Natal Day.

F. J. DICKMAN, Review of Lecture by Rufus Choate, (Providence Journal, 14 Dec., 1849.) "Glittering generalities!" They are blazing abstractions.

EMERSON, Ode, July 4, 1857.

Let independence be our boast,
Ever mindful what it cost;
Ever grateful for the prize,
Let its altar reach the skies!

JOSEPH HOPKINSON, Hail, Columbia!

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bonds which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Declaration of Independence: Preamble.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with inherent and inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, First Draft of Declaration of Independence (Writings, xix, 278.)

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. . . . We, therefore, . . . do . . . solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be free and independent States. . . . And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, We mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Declaration of Independence, as adopted by the Continental Congress, in session at Philadelphia, on the evening of July 4, 1776. Printed as a broadside and sent to the colonies 6 July, 1776.

Among the natural rights of the colonists are these: First a right to life, secondly to liberty, thirdly to property; together with the right to defend them in the best manner they can.

SAMUEL ADAMS, Statement of the Rights of the Colonists, etc., 20 N^o, 1772. (Writings of Samuel Adams, i, 496.)

All men are born free and equal, and have certain natural, essential, and unalienable rights.

JOHN ADAMS, Constitution of Massachusetts, 1779. (Works, vi, 465.)

To-day her thanks shall fly on every wind,
Unstinted, unrebuked, from shore to shore,
One love, one hope, and not a doubt behind!
Cannon no cannon shall repeat her praise,
Banner to banner flap it forth in flame;
Her children shall rise up to bless her name,
And wish her harmless length of days,
The mighty mother of a mighty brood,
Blessed in all tongues and dear to every blood,
The beautiful, the strong, and, best of all, the good.

JOHN PIERPONT, The Fourth of July.

Jefferson's Declaration of Independence is a practical document for the use of practical men. It is not a thesis for philosophers, but a whip for tyrants, it is not a theory of government, but a program of action.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Indianapolis, 13 April, 1911.

Sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish, I give my heart and my hand to this vote.

DANIEL WEBSTER in a eulogy upon John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, 2 August, 1826, Webster introduced a speech supposed to have been made by Adams in favor of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. The phrase was derived from the record of a conversation between Adams and Jonathan Sewall in 1774. "I answered that the day was now cast, I had passed the Rubicon. Sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish with my country, was my unalterable determination."

"Ring!" he shouts; "ring, grandpapa, Ring! oh, ring for liberty!"
UNKNOWN, Independence Bell.

INDEX

I certainly think that the best book in the world would owe the most to a good index, and the worst book, if it had but a single good thought in it, might be kept alive by it.

HENRY BRUNER, Letter to S. A. Aldrich, 2 April, 1868.

3. Se essential did I consider an index to be to every book, that I proposed to bring a bill into Parliament to deprive an author who publishes a book without an index of the privilege of copyright, and, moreover, to subject him for his offence to a pecuniary penalty.

LORD JOHN CAMPBELL, Lives of the Chief Justices of England: Vol. 12, Preface.

An index is a necessary implement, and no impediment, of a book, except in the same sense wherein the carriages of an army are termed impediments. Without this a large author is but a labyrinth without a clew to direct the reader therein.

THOMAS FULLER, History of the Worthies of England: Norfolk Writers: Alan of Llyn.

2. One writer, for instance, excels at a plan or a title-page, another works away at the body of the book, and a third is a dab at an index. GOLDSMITH, The Bee. No. 1.

He writes indexes to perfection.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. Letter No. 7.

3. The index tells us the contents of stories and directs us to the particular chapters.

MASSINGER AND FIELD, The Fatal Dowry. Act iv, sc. 1.

4. Index-learning turns no student pale, Yet holds the eel of science by the tail.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. 1, l. 279.

A mere index hunter, who held the eel of science by the tail.

SMOLLETT, Perigrine Pickle. Ch. 43.

The most accomplished way of using books at present is twofold: either, first to serve them as men do lords,—learn their titles exactly and then brag of their acquaintance; or, secondly, which is, indeed, the choicer, the profounder and politer method, to get a thorough insight into the index, by which the whole book is governed and turned, like fishes by the tail. For to enter the palace of learning at the great gate requires an expense of time and form, therefore men of much haste and little ceremony are content to get in by the back door. . . . For this great learning we are wholly indebted to systems and abstracts, in which the modern fathers of learning, like prudent uncles, spent their sweat for the ease of us their children. For labour is the seed of idleness, and it is the peculiar happiness of our noble age to gather the fruit.

6. But don't you go and make mistakes, like many dazed fools I've known, For dirt is dirt, and snakes is snakes, but an Injin's flesh and bone!

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Phil Blood's Leap.

7. As monumental bronze unchanged his look; A soul that pity touched, but never shook; Trained from his tree-rocked cradle to his tier The fierce extremes of good and ill to brook Impassive—fearing but the shame of fear— A stoic of the woods—a man without a tear.

CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. i, st. 23.

8. His erect and perfect form, though disclosing some irregular virtues, was found joined to a dwindled soul. Master of all sorts of woodcraft, he seemed a part of the forest and the lake, and the secret of his amazing skill seemed to be that he partook of the nature and fierce instincts of the beasts he slew. . . . Thomas Hooker anticipated the opinion of Humboldt, and called them "the ruins of mankind."

The interest of the Puritans in the natives was heightened by a suspicion at that time prevailing that these were the lost ten tribes of Israel.

10. Lo, the poor Indian! whose untutor'd mind Sees God in clouds, or hears him in the wind; His soul proud Science never taught to stray Far as the solar walk or milky way; Yet simple nature to his hope has giv'n, Behind the cloud-topp'd hill, an humbler Heaven;

To be, contents his natural desire; He asks no Angel's wing, no Seraph's fire; But thinks, admitted to that equal sky, His faithful dog shall bear him company.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epics. 1, l. 99.

11. The only good Indian is a dead Indian.

GENERAL PHILIP HENRY SHERIDAN. On the authority of Edward M. Ellis, who stated that he was present at old Fort Cobb, Indian Territory, in January, 1869, when, after a fight with the Indians, a Chief named Old Tech-a-way was presented to General Sheridan as "a good Indian," and Sheridan remarked, "The only good Indian I ever saw was a dead Indian."

12. You can make an Injun of a white man but you can't never make a white man of an Injun.

GENERAL WILLIAM T. SHERIDAN.

I find no sweeter fat than sticks to my own bones.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself, Sec. 20.

I know I am solid and sound,
To me the converging objects of the universe perpetually flow,
All are written to me.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself, Sec. 20.

INDUSTRY

6 In the ordinary business of life, industry can do anything which genius can do, and very many things which it cannot.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit.

7 The dog that trots about finds a bone.

GEORGE BORROW, The Bible in Spain, Ch. 47.

Quoted as a gypsy saying.

The sleeping fox catches no poultry.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

8 Industry is a loadstone to draw all good things.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

9 To be busy at something is a modest mind's holiday.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. II, ch. 5.

10 Pray to God and ply the hammer.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. II, ch. 35.

The sound of your hammer at five in the morning, or nine at night, heard by a creditor, makes him easy six months longer.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to My Friend, A.B.

11 Diligence is the mother of good fortune. (La diligencia es madre de la buena ventura.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. I, ch. 46.

Diligence is the mother of good luck.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

12 She is so diligent, withouten slowness
To serve and plesen ev'ich in that place,
That all her loven that loken on her face.

CHAUCER, Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 482.

13 Industry is the soul of business and the key-stone of prosperity.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge, Ch. 27.

14 My constant attendance, I never making a St. Monday, recommended me to the master.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography, Ch. 1.
Never turning a Monday into a holiday by drinking too much Saturday night and Sunday.

15 At the working men's house hunger looks in, but dares not enter.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1737.

16 Plough deep while Staggards sleep,
And you shall have Corn to sell and to keep.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1756.

A diligent Spinner has a large Shift.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1756.

Industry need not wait.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1739.

The need key is always bright.

7. If you have great talents, industry will improve them; if you have but moderate abilities, industry will supply their deficiencies.
SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, Discourses on Painting. No. 2.
8. The best of me is diligence.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 37.
9. Nothing is achieved before it be thoroughly attempted.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. II.
10. The hope, and not the fact, of advancement, is the spur to industry.
SIR HENRY TAYLOR, The Statesman, p. 187.
11. Thanks to my friends for their care in my breeding,
Who taught me betimes to love working and reading.
ISAAC WATTS, The Steward.
12. In books, on work, or beautiful play,
Let my first years be past,
That I may give for every day
Some good account at last.
JOHN WARR, Against Idleness.
How many great talents never grew up under care.

INFLUENCE

I.—Influence: Apothegms

13. Every life is a profession of faith, and exercises an inevitable and silent influence.
AMEL, Journal, 3 May, 1852.
14. A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump.
New Testament: 1 Corinthians, v, 6; Galatians, v, 9.
15. He raised a mortal to the skies;
She drew an angel down.
DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 169.
I thank God that if I am gifted with little of the spirit which is said to be able to raise mortals to the skies, I have yet none, as I trust, of that other spirit, which would drag angels down.
DANIEL WEBSTER, Second Speech on Foot's Resolution, 26 Jan., 1830.
16. It has been said that "common souls pay with what they do, nobler souls with that which they are."
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.
17. Every man who speaks out loud and clear is tinting the "Zeitgeist." Every man who expresses what he honestly thinks is changing the Spirit of the Times.
ELBERT HUBBARD, Pig-Pen Pets: The Bee.
18. Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion?
Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 31.
19. The salutary influence of example.

23. They'll take suggestion as a cat laps milk.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act II, sc. 1, l. 288.
24. It is your human environment that makes climate.
MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.
25. II.—Influence: Its Power
The sexton tolling his bell at noon,
Dreams not that great Napoleon

Stops his horse, and lists with delight,
Whilst his files sweep round yon Alpine height;

Nor knowest thou what argument
Thy life to thy neighbor's creed has lent.
EMERSON, Each and All.

1 This learned I from the shadow of a tree,
That to and fro did sway against a wall:
Our shadow-selves, our influence, may fall
Where we ourselves can never be.
ANNA E. HAMILTON, Influence.

2 Thou canst mould him into any shape like soft clay. (Argilla quidvis imitaberis uda.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. II, epis. 2, l. 8.

His soul is so enfeather'd to her love,
That she may make, unmake, do what she list,
Even as her appetite shall play the god
With his weak function.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act II, sc. 3, l. 351.

3 I shot an arrow into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For, so swiftly it flew, the sight
Could not follow it in its flight.
I breathed a song into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For who has sight so keen and strong,
That it can follow the flight of song?

Long, long afterward, in an oak
I found the arrow, still unbroke;
And the song, from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend.

LONGFELLOW, The Arrow and the Song.

You never can tell when you send a word
Like an arrow shot from a bow
By an archer blind, be it cruel or kind,
Just where it may chance to go.

ELIA WHEELER WILCOX, You Never Can Tell.

4 Pluck one thread, and the web ye mar;
Break but one
Of a thousand keys, and the paining jar
Through all will run.

WHITTIER, My Soul and I. St. 38.

III—Influence for Good

5 The weak and the gentle, the ribald and rude,
She took as she found them, and did them all good.

E. B. BROWNING, My Kate.

None knelt at her feet confessed lovers in thrall;
They knelt more to God than they used—that was all.

E. B. BROWNING, My Kate.

6 Even so he turned
The saddest things to beauty. With his face
Came calm and consecration.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Balder the Beautiful. Pt. II.

7 The work an unknown good man has done is like a vein of water flowing hidden underground, secretly making the ground green.

CAROLINE, Essays: Vorlesungen von Emil's Memoirs.

8 So our lives in acts exemplary, not only win Ourselves good names, but doth to others give Matter for virtuous deeds, by which we live.
CHAPEMAN, Bussy D'Ambaut. Act I, sc. 1.

9 Thou art the framer of my nobler being;
Nor does there live one virtue in my soul,
One honourable hope, but calls thee father.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Zapolya. Act I, sc. 1.

10 Blessed influence of one true loving human soul on another.

GEORGE ELIOT, Janet's Repentance. Ch. 19.

11 O may I join the choir invisible
Of those immortal dead who live again
In minds made better by their presence: live
In pulses stirred to generosity,
In deeds of daring rectitude, in scorn
For miserable aims that end with self,
In thoughts sublime that pierce the night like stars,
And with their mild persistence urge man's search
To vaster issues.

GEORGE ELIOT, O May I Join the Choir Invisible.

12 It costs a beautiful person no effort to paint her image on our eyes; yet how splendid is that benefit! It costs no more for a wise soul to convey his quality to other men.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

It is for man to tame the chaos; on every side, whilst he lives, to scatter the seeds of science and of song, that climate, corn, animals, men, may be milder, and the germs of love and benefit may be multiplied.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

13 The very room, coz she was in,
Seemed warm f'om floor to ceilin'.

J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'. St. 6.

Before her ran an influence fleet,
That bowed my heart like barley bending.
J. R. LOWELL, Hebs.

14 No life
Can be pure in its purpose or strong in its strife

And all life not be purer and stronger thereby.
OWEN MERRITT, Lads. Pt. II, canto vi, sec.
46.

15 So it often happens that more good is done

...our knowledge than by us intended.
 ...Capitol: Proteger, l. 44.

To deale let the vain design,
 To raise the thought and teach the heart to thine!

POPE, Moral Essays, Ep. II, l. 249.

O, he sits high in all the people's hearts:
 And that which would appear offence in us,
 His countenance, like richest alchemy,
 Will change to virtue and to worthiness.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, Act I, sc 3, l. 157.

He makes a July's day short as December,
 And with his varying quickness cuts in me
 Thoughts that would thicken my blood.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale Act I, sc 2, l. 169

For, when the power of imparting joy
 Is equal to the will, the human soul
 Requires no other heaven

SHELLEY, Ocean Man Pt. III, l. 11.

Though her mien carries much more invitation than command, to behold her is an immediate check to loose behaviour; to love her is a liberal education.

REINHOLD STEINER, The Yeller No 49. Of Lady Elizabeth Hastings Swinburne called this passage "the most exquisite tribute ever paid to the memory of a noble woman," and Augustine Birrell, in Obituary Notes, echoes the opinion.

Such souls,

Whose sudden visitations thum the world,
 Vanish like lightning, but they leave behind
 A voice that in the distance far away
 Wakens the slumbering ages.

HENRY TAYLOR, Philip Van Artevelde, Pt. I,
 act I, sc. 7.

Whose powers shed round him in the common
 strife,
 Of mild concerns of ordinary life,
 A constant influence, a peculiar grace.

WORDSWORTH, Character of the Happy Warrior, l. 45

Controls them and subdues, transmutes, betwixt
 Of their bad influence, and their good receives.
 WORDSWORTH, Character of the Happy Warrior, l. 17.

debt; which takes away vigour from our arms, wisdom from our councils.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Economical Reforms, House of Commons, 11 Feb. 1780.

You made me what I am to-day,
 I hope you're satisfied,
 And though you're not true,
 May God bless you,

That's the curse of an aching heart.
 HENRY FINX, The Curse of an Aching Heart.
 (1913)

I was once a step above her,
 But she brought me to her level,
 So I drink the death of Daisy—
 Little angel—little devil!

E. J. APPLETON, Little Angel, Little Devil

Each man, in corrupting others, corrupts himself; he forbids, and then imparts, bad-news

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum Epist. xciv, 58

V—Influence: In Battle

We must have your name There will be more efficacy in it than in many an army,

JOHN ADAMS, Letter to George Washington, 1798, when war with France seemed imminent.

But how many ships do you reckon my presence to be worth?

ANTIGONUS, when told by his pilot that the enemy outnumbered him in ships.
 (PLUTARCH, Apothegms of Kings and Great Commanders, Antigonus II.)

The saying of old Antigonus, who when he was to fight at Andros, and one told him, "The enemy's ships are more than ours," replied,
 "For how many then wilt thou reckon me?"

PLUTARCH, Lives: Pelopidas.

As that great captain, Ziska, would have a drum made of his skin when he was dead, because he thought the very noise of it would put his enemies to flight.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy:
Democritus to the Reader.

Oh, for one hour of blind old Dandolo,
 The octogenarian chief, Byzantium's conquering foot.

BYRON, Childe Harold Canto iv, st. 12.

Napoleon was called by his men "Caut Mlle."
 EADSWORTH, Confessions of Life: Considerations on the History of the French Revolution, was worth a hundred thousand men.

It is very true that I have said that I considered Napoleon's presence in the field equal to forty thousand men in the balance. This is a very loose way of talking; but the idea is a very different one from that of his presence at a battle being equal to a reinforcement of forty thousand men.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Memorandum, 18 Sept., 1848 (STANHOPE, Conversations with the Duke of Wellington, p. 81.)

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. iii, l. 219. (Pope, tr., l. 293.) Referring to Ajax.

² Whenever I stamp my foot in any part of Italy, there will rise up forces enough in an instant.

POMPEY, when asked where the forces were to come from to resist Cæsar. (PLUTARCH, Lives, Pompey.)

³ Where, where was Roderick then?

One blast upon his bugle horn
Were worth a thousand men.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake, Canto vi, st. 18.

Oh for a blast of that dread horn
On Fontarabian echoes borne!

SCOTT, Marmion, Canto vi, st. 33.

O for the voice of that wild horn
SCOTT, Rob Roy, Ch. 2.

⁴ Your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, Act iv, sc. 3, l. 186

⁵ Is not the king's name twenty thousand names?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, Act iii, sc. 2, l. 85.

The King's name is a tower of strength.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, Act v, sc. 3, l. 12.

⁶ Lord John is a host in himself.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, to Samuel Rogers, 1839, referring to Lord John Russell.

⁷ Oh for a single hour of that Dundee
Who on that day the word of onset gave!

WORDSWORTH, Sonnet in the Pass of Killicrankie. "Oh, for an hour of Dundee," was the cry of Gordon of Glenbucket, at the battle of Sheriffmuir, 13 Nov., 1715. "Dundee" was the terrible Grahame of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee. (MAXON, History of England, i, 184.)

VI.—Influence: Homer's Golden Chain

⁸ Make ye fast from heaven a chain of gold
(Ζωστήν χρυσέην ἐκ οὐρανόθεν.)

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. viii, l. 12.

Lay ye down the golden chain
From Heaven, and pull at its inferior ends

Both Goddesses and Gods.

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. viii (Gifford, tr.)

By the golden chain Homer meant nothing else than the sun.

PLATO, (KRITCHER, Magnus Sive de Arte Magica.)

⁹ And this is that Homer's golden chain, which reacheth down from heaven to earth, by which every creature is enured, and depends on his Creator.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, Pt. iii, sec. 1, mem. 1, sub. 2. Referring to God's love for the world.

¹⁰ Now lately heaven and earth, another world
Hung o'er my realm, link'd in a golden chain.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. ii, l. 1004.

And fast by, hanging in a golden chain,
This pendent world, in bigness as a star
Of smallest magnitude close by the moon.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. ii, l. 1051.

¹¹ This gift which you have . . . is not an art, but an inspiration; there is a divinity moving you, like that in the stone which Euripides calls a magnet, but which is commonly known as the stone of Heraclea. For that stone not only attracts iron rings, but also imparts to them a similar power of attracting other rings; and sometimes you may see a number of pieces of iron and rings suspended from one another so as to form a long chain. And all of them derive their power of suspension from the original stone. Now this is like the Muse, who first gives to men inspiration herself: and from these inspired persons a chain of other persons is suspended, who take the inspiration from them.

PLATO, Ion, Sec. 533. This simile has come to be known as "Plato's rings."

¹² To be imprisoned in the viewless winds
And blown with restless violence round about
The pendent world.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, Act III, sc. 1, l. 124.

¹³ Together link'd with adamantine chains.

SPENSER, An Hymn in Honour of Love, l. 89.

I gnawed my brazen chain, and sought to sever
Its adamantine links.

SHAKESPEARE, The Revolt of Islam, Canto iii, st. 19.

¹⁴ For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

TERRELL, Morris D'Ardur, l. 305.

¹⁵ The chain that's fixed to the throne of Jove,
On which the fabric of our world depends,
One link dissolved, the whole creation ends.

EMERSON, Waller, Of the Danger His Majesty Enjoins, l. 68.

INGRATITUDE

Earth produces nothing worse than an ungrateful man. (Nil homine terra pejus ingrato creat.)

ALPHABETUS, Epigrams. No. 140, l. 1.

And having looked to Government for bread, on the very first scarcity they will turn and bite the hand that fed them.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts and Details on Scarcity.

We set ourselves to bite the hand that feeds us.

BURKE, Cause of the Present Discontents.

The wicked are always ungrateful.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 23.

Hell is full of the ungrateful.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Ingratitude is the daughter of pride.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 51.

Ingratitude's a weed of every clime,

It thrives too fast at first, but fades in time.

SAMUEL GARTE, Epistle to the Earl of Godolphin, l. 27.

A man is very apt to complain of the ingratitude of those who have risen far above him.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

An ingrate is sometimes less to blame for his ingratitude than the one who did him the favor. (Tel homme est ingrat, qui est moins coupable de son ingratitude que celui qui lui a fait du bien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULT, Maximes. No. 96.

Too great haste in repaying an obligation is a species of ingratitude. (Le trop grand empressement qu'on a de s'acquitter d'une obligation est une espèce d'ingratitude.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULT, Maximes. No. 226.

One finds few ingrates as long as one is capable of bestowing favors. (On ne trouve guère d'ingrats tant qu'on est en état de faire du bien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULT, Maximes. No. 306.

Ah, how have I deserved, inhuman maid, To have my faithful service thus repaid?

GEORGE LYTTLETON, Progress of Love.

Besotted base ingratitude.

MILTON, Comus, l. 778.

You love a nothing when you love an ingrate. (Nihil amas, quoniam ingratum amas.)

PLAUTUS, Ferns, l. 128. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

We should not treat living creatures like shoes, or pots and pans, casting them aside when they are bruised and worn out with service.

FRANCIS, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. v, sec. 5.

One ungrateful man does an injury to all who are in suffering. (Ingratus unus miseri omnibus nocet.)

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 774.

184

They whom I benefit injure me most.

SAPPHO. (The Songs of Sappho, MARION MILLS MILLER, tr., p. 204.)

They whom I most have helped
Were 'neath the Dog-Star whelped
By Shamelessness and Spite:
The hand that feeds they bite.

He is ungrateful who denies that he has received a kindness; he is ungrateful who conceals it; he is ungrateful who makes no return for it; most ungrateful of all is he who forgets it.

SENeca, De Beneficiis. Bk. iii, sec. 1. See also BENEFITS: BENEFITS AND INJURIES.

Blow, blow, thou winter wind,

Thou art not so unkind

As man's ingratitude:

Thy tooth is not so keen,

Because thou art not seen,

Although thy breath be rude.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 174.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,

Thou dost not bite so nigh

As benefits forgot:

Though thou the waters warp,

Thy sting is not so sharp

As friend remember'd not.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, 7, 184.

This was the most unkindest cut of all;
For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,
Quite vanquish'd him; then burst his mighty heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 187.

You also, O Brutus, my son. (Et tu, Brute fili.)
JULIUS CÆSAR, on being stabbed by Brutus.
(SUTONIUS, Lives of the Cæsars: Julius.)

Et tu Brute! Then fall, Cæsar!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 77.

See what a rent the envious Casca made.

Ingratitude! thou marble-hearted fiend!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 281.

Monster ingratitude!

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 310.

All the world's vengeance of heaven fall

On her ingratel top!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, no. 4, l. 164.

What ingratitude!

Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand
For lifting food to it?

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 14.

He gives his daughters his estate:
The daughters give him—what? The gate.

UNKNOWN, Our Book Review Department:
King Lear.

I hate ingratitude more in a man,
Than lying, vainness, babbling, drunkenness,
Or any taint of vice.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 388.

When ingratitude bars the dart of injury,
The wound has double danger in it.

R. B. SHERRIDAN, The Critic. Act iv, sc. 3.

He that's ungrateful, has no guilt but one;
And other crimes may pass for virtues in him.

EDWARD YOUNG, Busiris.

I—Injury: Apothegms

The injuries we do and those we suffer are seldom weighed in the same scales.

ÆSOP, Fables: The Partial Judge.

Injuries come from them that hath the upper hand. (Inimicus potentiorum vincit.)

BACON, Of Church Controversies.

He that injures one threatens an hundred.

(Multis minatur, qui uni facit injuriam.)

BACON, Ornamenta Rationalis. No. 15.

He threatens many that hath injured one.

BEN JONSON, Poet of Sycophants. Act II.

Patient meekness takes injuries like pills, not chewing, but swallowing them down, ironically suffering, and silently passing them over, while injured pride makes a noise . . . at every scratch.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. II, sec. 12.

To ruminate upon evils, to make critical notes upon injuries, and be too acute in their apprehension, is to add unto our own tortures, to feather the arrows of our enemies, and to resolve to sleep no more.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. II, sec. 12.

Injury may be done by two methods, by fraud or by force. (Duobus modis, id est aut vi, aut fraude, fit injuria.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 13, sec. 41.

It is better to receive than to do an injury. (Accipere quam facere injuriam praeferat.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. V, ch. 19, sec. 56.

It is more wretched to commit than to suffer an injury. (Miserius est nocere quam ledi.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epist. xcv, 52.

What a fool

An injury may make of a staid man.

KRANE, Oslo the Great. Act III, sc. 1.

Who would have thought that a man would be so injured? (Nonne nocentem?)

PLAUTUS, Fabulae. Bk. I, fab. 26.

A strong sense of injury often gives point to the expression of our feelings. (Plerumque dolor etiam venustus facit.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Bk. III, epist. 9.

It is the mark of a good man not to know how to do an injury. (Vivi boni est nescire facere injuriam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 711.

Whom things have injured they also hate. (Quos laeserunt, odierunt.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. II, sec. 43.

It is a weakness of human nature to hate those who have injured us. (Infirmitas humani ingenii est odium in eos habere qui laeserunt.)

The injuries that they themselves procure must be their schoolmasters.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act II, sc. 4, l. 306.

His heart-struck injuries

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act III, sc. 1, l. 17.

A readiness to resent injuries is a virtue only in those who are slow to injure.

SHEDDEN, A Trip to Scarborough. Act V, sc. 1.

The injury is long to relate. (Longa est injuria.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. I, l. 341.

It costs more to revenge injuries than to bear them.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims. No. 303.

No one is injured except by himself. (Nemo leditur nisi a seipso.)

UNKNOWN Latin Proverb.

II—Injuries: Their Forgiveness

The fairest action of our human life

Is scorn to revenge an injury;

For who forgives without a further strife,

His adversary's heart to him doth tie.

And 'tis a firmer conquest, truly said,

To win the heart than overthrow the head.

LADY ELIZABETH CARY, The Tragedy of Morian. Chorus (1613) This attribution of authorship has been disputed.

Forgiveness to the injured doth belong,

But they ne'er pardon who have done the wrong.

DRYDEN, Conquest of Granada. Pt. II, act I, sc. 2.

A worthy man forgets past injuries. (Nobis vultus revere dantur irae.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache. l. 1164.

Christianity commands us to pass by injuries; policy, to let them pass by us.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard. 1741.

A brave man thinks no one is superior who does him an injury; for he has it then in his power to make himself superior to the other by forgiving it.

FORE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

The remedy for injuries is to forget them. (Injuriarum remedium est oblivio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 750. Quoted

by SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. xlv, 28.

He who has injured thee was either stronger or weaker. If weaker, spare him; if stronger, spare thyself. (Aut potentior te, aut imbecillior te fuit; si imbecillior, parce illi; si potentior, tibi.)

SENECA, De Ira. Pt. II, sec. 3.

INJURY AND BENEFITS

1 An injury graves itself in metal, but a benefit writes itself on the wave. (L'injure se grave en metal, et le bienfait s'écrit en l'onde.)

JEAN BÉTAUT, Maximes (c. 1611)

On adamant our wrongs we all engrave,
But write our benefits upon the wave.

WILLIAM KING, The Art of Love, l. 971.

All your better deeds

Shall be in water writ, but this in marble
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act v, sc. 3.

Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 45.

Here lies one whose name was writ in water

JOHN KEATS, his epitaph dictated by himself for his monument in Rome.

2 Some write their wrongs in marble, he, more just,

Stoop'd down serene and wrote them in the dust,

Trod under foot, the sport of every wind, Swept from the earth and blotted from his mind.

There, secret in the grave, he bade them lie,
And grieved they could not 'scape the Almighty eye

SAMUEL MADDEN, Boswell's Monument

For men use, if they have an evil turn, to write it in marble, and who doth us a good turn, we write it in dust

SIR THOMAS MORE, Richard III and His Miserable End

Write injuries in the sand, but benefits in marble (Ecris les injures sur le sable, Mais les bienfaits sur le marbre)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

Write injuries in dust, benefits in marble

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1747.

3 Injuries are writ in brass, kind Graccho,
And not to be forgotten

MACHINGES, The Duke of Milan. Act v, sc. 1.

4 How bitter it is, when you have sown benefits to reap injuries! (Sed ut acerbum est, pro bene factis cum malis messim metas)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 718. (Act v, sc. 2.)

5 A benefit cited by way of reproach is equivalent to an injury. (Un bienfait reproché n'est toujours bien d'offense)

RACINE, Iphigénie Act iv, sc. 3.

6 What is more wretched than the man who forgets his benefits and claims to his injuries?
(Quid autem ea miserum, ea beneficia ex-cidunt merent injuriam?)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. lxxxi, 28.

7 Kindnesses are easily forgotten; but injuries?

—what worthy man does not keep them in
mind?

TRACKEYAT, Love, the Physician.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jaculis Prudentium.

To let the world wag and take mine ease in mine inn.

JOHN HERRWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. I, ch. 3. (1546)

In this proverbial saying, inn does not mean a tavern or public house, but one's own home. The original meaning of inn was a private house or dwelling-place.

There most beauteous inn,
Why should hand-fa-vor'd grief be lodged in thee?

When triumph is become an alehouse guest?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act V, sc. 1, l. 13.

Hence "inn," a private house, is contrasted with tavern.

Shall I not take mine ease in mine inn?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act III, sc. 3, l. 92.

Thou'rt right that men take their ease in their inn.

THOMAS MANINGTON, The Wolden. Twelfth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act II, sc. 5, l. 3.

II—INNS: Their Praise

You may go to Carlisle's and to Almack's too,
And I'll give you my head if you find such a host,

For coffee, tea, chocolate, butter, or toast;

How he welcomes at once all the world and his wife,

And how civil to folks he ne'er saw in his life.

CHRISTOPHER ANSTEV, New Bath Guide, p. 130. (1767)

He who has not been at a tavern knows not what a paradise it is. O holy tavern! O miraculous tavern!—holy, because no carking cares are there, nor weariness, nor pain; and miraculous, because of the spits, which of themselves turn round and round!

ARMING, (Longfellow, Hyperion. Bk. III, ch. 2.)

Now moving o'er the changing scene
Farther behind the tavern screen

Collect; with elbows idly press'd
On hob, reclines the corner's guest,
Reading the news to mark again
The bankrupt lists or price of grain.
Puffing the while his red-tipt pipe
He dreams o'er troubles nearly ripe,
Yet, winter's leisure to regale,
Hopes better times, and sips his ale.

ing outmastered the meter.

RICHARD REALT, Indirection

I wonder if ever a song was sung but the singer's heart sang sweeter!

I wonder if ever a rhyme was rung but the thought surpassed the meter!

I wonder if ever a sculptor wrought till the cold stone echoed his ardent thought!

Or, if ever a painter with light and shade the dream of his inmost heart portrayed!

JAMES C. MARVELL, Incompleteness.

She with one breath attunes the spheres,
And also my poor human heart.
HENRY DAVID THOREAU, Inspiration.

But if with bended neck I grope,
Listening behind me for my wit, . . .
Then will the verse forever wear,—
Time cannot bend the line which God hath writ.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU, Inspiration.

She comes not when Noon is on the roses—
Too bright is Day.
She comes not to the Soul till it reposes
From work and play.
But when Night is on the hills, and the great Voices

Roll in from Sea,
By starlight and by candle-light and dream-light

She comes to me.

HARBERT TRENCH, *She Comes Not When Noon
Is on the Roses*.

Immersed in sense, with fivefold bonds confined,

Rest we content if whispers from the stars.
In waifings of the incalculable wind Come blown at midnight through our prison-bars.

WILLIAM WATSON, Epigrams.

Great God! I'd rather be
A Pagan suckled in a creed outworn;
So might I, standing on this pleasant lea,
Have glimpses that would make me less forlorn;

Have sight of Proteus rising from the sea,
Or hear old Triton blow his wreathed horn.
WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. I,
No. 33.

INSTINCT

I—Instinct: Definitions and Apophthegms

6
The not ourselves, which is in us and all around us. . . The enduring power, not ourselves, which makes for righteousness.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma.

An unfathomable Somewhat, which is Not we.
CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. I, bk. I, ch. 2.

That which is imprinted upon the spirit of man by an inward instinct.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. II.

8
Instinct is untaught ability.

BAIR, Science and Intellect, p. 256.

Instinct is intelligence incapable of self-consciousness.

JOHN BREKIDING, Thoughts and Images.

My natural instinct teaches me
(And instinct is important—O!).

You're everything you ought to be,
And nothing that you oughtn't O!
W. S. GILBERT, Princess Ida. Act II.

A good man, through obscurest aspirations,
Has still an instinct of the one true way.

GORTER, Faust: Prolog in Himmel: Der Herr,
I. 88.

We heed no instincts but our own. (Nous n'écoutons d'instincts que ceux qui sont les nôtres.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. I, fab. 8.

12 Man's natural instinct is never toward what is sound and true; it is toward what is specious and false

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. III, p. 126.

13
By a divine instinct men's minds mistrust
Ensuing dangers.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act II, sc. 3, l. 42.

14
I'll never
Be such a gosling to obey instinct.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act V, sc. 3, l. 34.

Beware instinct.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act II, sc. 4, l. 299.

15 Instinct is a great matter; I was now a coward on instinct.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act II, sc. 4, l. 300.

You ran away upon instinct.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act II, sc. 4, l. 331.

Upon instinct.—I grant ye, upon instinct

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act II, sc. 4, l. 389.

16
A few strong instincts and a few plain rules.

dependence*. Pt. II, No. 12.

High instincts before which our mortal nature
Did tremble like a guilty thing surprised

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality. St.
9.

II—Instinct and Reason

17
Reasoning at every step he treads,
Man yet mistakes his way,

Whilst meaner things, whom instinct leads,
Are rarely known to stray.

COWPER, The Doves.

A moment's insight is sometimes worth a life's experience.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Professor at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 10.

19
It is the instinct of understanding to contradict reason.

JACONI THE ELDER, (CARLYLE, Novels.)

20
Instinct preceded wisdom

Even in the wisest men, and may sometimes
Be much the better guide.

GEORGE LILLO, Petal Curiosity. Act I, sc. 2.

1 How instinct varies in the grovelling swine,
Compared, half-rear'ning elephant, with thine!
Twist that and reason what a nice barrier!
For ever separate, yet for ever near!

POPE, Essay on Man. Ep. 1, l. 221.

2 Reason, however able, cool at best,
Cares not for service, or but serves when prest,

Stays till we call, and then not often near;
But honest instinct comes a volunteer;
Sure never to o'er-shoot, but just to hit,
While still too wide or short in human wit.

POPE, Essay on Man. Ep. 1, l. 85.

And reason raise o'er instinct as you can,
In this 'tis God directs, in that 'tis man.

POPE, Essay on Man. Ep. 1, l. 97.

3 Instinct and reason how can we divide?
'Tis the fool's ignorance, and the pedant's pride.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon on the Vices of the World. Bk. 1, l. 231.

Let him make use of instinct who cannot make use of reason. (Utatur motu animi, qui uti ratione non potest.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

4 They live no longer in the faith of reason;
But still the heart doth need a language, still Doth the old instinct bring back the old names.

SCHILLER, Piccolomini. Act II, sc. 4.

5 Reason progressive, instinct is complete;
Swift instinct leaps; slow reason feebly climbs.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night VII, l. 81.

INSULT

6 Let those who have betrayed him by their adulation, insult him with their malevolence.

ring to Chatham.

7 An injury is much sooner forgotten than an insult.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1746.

An old affront will stir the heart
Through years of rankling pain.

JEAN INGLEW, Strife and Peace.

8 He who allows himself to be insulted deserves to be. (Qui se laisse outrager, mérite qu'on l'outrage.)

CORNÉLLE, Héraclius. Act I, sc. 2.

9 Am I to set my life upon a throw Because a bear is rude and surly? No—
A moral, sensible, and well-bred man
Will not affront me, and no other can.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 191.

10 To one well-born the affront is worse and more,

When he's abused and baffled by a boor.

DRYDEN, Saïre on the Dutch, l. 27.

Fate never wounds more deep the gen'rous heart,
Than when a blockhead's insult points the dart.

INVENTION

The industry of artificers maketh some small improvement of things invented, and chance sometimes in experimenting maketh us to stumble upon somewhat which is new; but all the disputation of the learned never brought to light one effect of nature before unknown.
 Francis Bacon, In Praise of Knowledge.

The art of invention grows young with the things forgotten. (Ars invenendi adolescent cum inventis.)
 Francis Bacon, Quoted as a maxim.

A tool is but the extension of a man's hand, and a machine is but a complex tool. And he that suggests a machine augments the power of a man and the well-being of mankind.
 Henry Van Brunt, Properly how the

If it is not true, it is very weakly invented. (Se non è vero, è molto ben trovato.)

GIORDANO BRUNO, Degli Eraci Furore. (1585).

The "molto" is frequently omitted in quotation, which is rendered, "If not true, 't is a happy invention." Antonio Domi (Marmi, 1552) said the same thing thirty years earlier, in slightly different form: "Se non è vero, egli è stato un bel trovato." Pasquier (Recherches, 1550) turns it into French: "Si cela n'est vrai, il est bien trouvé."

If it is not true, it is certainly well invented. (Se non è vero, è ben trovato.)

Arm of Erin! prove strong, but be gentle as brave,

And, uplifted to strike, still be ready to save,
Nor one feeling of vengeance presume to defile

The cause, or the men of the Emerald Isle.

WILLIAM DRENNAN, Erin. (c. 1800) This has sometimes been stated to be the first use of the phrase, "Emerald Isle," but Dr. Drennan, in an introduction to the poem written in 1815, expressly states that the phrase was first used in Erin, To Her Own Tunes, a "party song written without the rancour of party in the year 1795."

For dear is the Emerald Isle of the ocean,
Whose daughters are fair as the foam of the wave,

Whose sons unaccustomed to rebel commotion,
Tho' joyous, are sober—tho' powerful, are brave.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses. (1812)

Our Irish blunders are never blunders of the head.

WALTER DEAN HOWARDS, Irish Bulls, Ch. 4.

Ah, sweet is Tipperary in the springtime of the year.

—A. A. McCORMACK, Irish Songs of Tipperary.

It's a long way to Tipperary, it's a long way to go;

It's a long way to Tipperary, to the sweetest girl I know!

Good-bye, Piccadilly, farewell, Leicester Square;
It's a long, long way to Tipperary, but my heart's right there!

JACK JUDGE, Tipperary. Written in 1908, and popular with both British and American soldiers during the World War Judge was a mediocre actor, who ran a fish-shop by day. A man named Harry Williams lent him money to finance the shop, and shared in the returns from Judge's song, his name appearing on it as co-author. His family claimed that he wrote it, and after his death in 1924, repeated the claim on his tombstone; but it was probably Judge's alone.

2 Th' an'am an Dhia, but there it is—
The dawn on the hills of Ireland.
God's angels lifting the night's black veil
From the fair sweet face of my sireland!
O Ireland, isn't it grand, you look,
Like a bride in her rich adornin',
And with all the pent up love of my heart
I bid you the top of the mornin'.

IV—Ireland: The Shamrock

There's a dear little plant that grows in our isle,
'Twas St. Patrick himself spake that set it;
And the sun on his labour with pleasure did smile,
And with dew from his eye often wet it.
It thrives through the bog, through the brake,
and the mireland;

day is over,
For there's a cruel law sent the women of the green!

The shamrock is the sign of the cross,
The sign of the cross is the sign of the cross,
The sign of the cross is the sign of the cross,
The sign of the cross is the sign of the cross.

What law can stop the blades of grass from growing as they grow;
And when the leaves in Summer-time their colour dare not show;
Then will I change the colour too; I wear no my caubean;
But till that day, please God, I'll stick to wearin'
o' the Green.

V—Ireland and England

13
England and Ireland may flourish together.
The world is large enough for us both. Let it be our care not to make ourselves too little for it.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Samuel Span, Esq.

15
The bane of England, and the opprobrium of Europe.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 9 Aug., 1843, referring to Ireland.

To apply, in all their unmitigated authority, the principles of abstract political economy to the people and circumstances of Ireland, exactly as if he had been proposing to legislate for the inhabitants of Saturn or Jupiter.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, House of Commons, 7 April, 1881.

17
'Tis Ireland gives England her soldiers, her generals too

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways.
Ch. 2.

18
A mirror faced a mirror: ire and hate
Opposite ire and hate

ALICE MEYNELL, Reflections in Ireland.

Mr. Butler was now all full of his high discourse in praise of Ireland . . . But so many has I never heard in praise of anything as he told of Ireland.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 28 July, 1660.

20
He that would England win,
Must with Ireland first begin.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, p. 396.
Quoted by FROUDE, History of England, x, 460.

The uncivil kerns of Ireland.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act III, sc. 1, l. 310.

22
Now for the rebels which stand out in Ireland.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act 1, sc. 4, l. 38.

Now let our Irish kerns
We must suppress these rough red-headed kerns;
Which live in the western where no women dare
But only they have privilege to live.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act 1, sc. 1, l. 135.

The moment the very name of Ireland is mentioned, the English seem to be filled to the brim with indignation.

common, speaking, common-sense and common sense, and to act with the barbarity of tyrants and the fatuity of idiots.

STANLEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters, No. 2.

The lovely and the lonely bride,
Whom we have wedded but have never won.

WILLIAM WATSON, Ode on the Coronation of Edward VII, l. 79. Referring to Ireland.

As the northern men loveth fight, also the southern, falseness; they strutteth to strength, these to sleights; they to stalwartness, these to treason.

VI.—Ireland: The Irish

For the great Gaels of Ireland
Are the men that God made mad,
For all their wars are merry
And all their songs are sad

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Ballad of the White Horse

"Well, here's thank God for the race and the sod!"

Said Kelly and Burke and Shea.
J. I. C. CLARKE, The Fighting Race.

"Oh, the fighting races don't die out,
If they seldom die in bed,
For love is first in their hearts, no doubt,"

Said Burke
J. I. C. CLARKE, The Fighting Race.

Every Irishman has a potato in his head.
J. C. AND A. W. HARR, Guesses at Truth.

The Irish are a fair people, they never speak well of one another.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

And now the Irish are ashamed
To see themselves in one year tamed:
So much one man can do,
That does both act and know.

ANDREW MARVELL, Horatian Ode upon Cromwell's Return from Ireland, l. 75.

An Irishman, a very valiant gentleman, I faith.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, Act iii, sc. 2, l. 71.

An Irishman's heart is nothing but his imagination.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island, Act I.

A servile race in folly nursed,
Who trundle most when treated worst,
Swart, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 461.

O, love is the soul of a true Irishman;
He loves all that's lovely, loves all that he

With his sprig of shillelagh and shamrock do green.

"Gold is for the mistress—silver for the maid—Copper for the craftsman cunning at his trade."

"Good!" said the Baron, sitting in his hall,
"But Iron—Cold Iron—is master of them all."

RUDYARD KIPING, Cold Iron.

Ay me! what perils do environ

The man that meddles with cold iron!

BUTLER, Hudibras: Pt. I, canto iii, l. 1.

Put up your iron.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, Act iv, sc. 1, l. 42.

Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth
the countenance of his friend.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 17.

He was laid in iron.

Old Testament: Psalms, cv, 18. The meaning being that Joseph was bound with fetters or chains, but in the Vulgate the phrase was mis-translated, "Ferum pertransit animam ejus"
(The iron entered into his soul), a perversion carried into the Psalter, cv, 18, and into the Great Bible of 1539.

I saw the iron enter into his soul.

STERNE, Sentimental Journey: The Captive.

He is teaching iron to swim.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 75.

I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, Act iv, sc. 10, l. 30.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. II, l. 1276. (c. 1374)

6 We must beat the iron while it is hot; but we may polish it at leisure.

JOHN DRYDEN, Dedication of the Æneis.

8 Strike now, or else the iron cools.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 1, l. 49.

And with new notions,—let me change the rule,—
Don't strike the iron till it's slightly cool.

VICENZO DA FILICAJA, Italia. (Longfellow, tr.)

Italia! oh Italia! thou who hast
The fatal gift of beauty, which became
A funeral dower of present woes and past,
On thy sweet brow is sorrow plough'd by shame,
And annals graved in characters of flame.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 42. A free rendering of Filicaja's sonnet, Italia, which Byron appropriated without credit.

O Italy, how beautiful thou art!
Yet I could weep—for thou art lying, alas!
Low in the dust.
Thine was a dangerous gift, the gift of Beauty.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy. Pt. i, sec. 9, l. 9.

II—The Italians

The Italians are wise before the deed; the Germans in the deed; the French after the deed.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacoba Prudentem.

All Italians are plunderers. (Gli Italiani tutti ladroni.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark, in a loud voice in public company. To which a lady replied, "Non tutti, ma buona parte." "Not all, but a good part," a play upon Napoleon's name. (CHAMBERS, Biographia Literaria: Sartoris's Letters. No. 2.) Pasquin made the same pun when the French were in possession of Rome: "I Francesco son tutti ladri; non tutti, ma buona parte." (CAR-

And few there were that met thee not with smiles.

Mishap pass'd o'er thee like a summer-cloud.
Gaze thou hadst none; and they, who stood to hear thee,

Caught the infection and forgot their own.
Nature conceived thee in her merriest mood,
... And at thy birth the cricket chirp'd.

UNKNOWN, Philip and Mary, 191. (c. 1560)

He was dressed up like a Jack a Lent.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Chippie, 50. (1575)

You little Jack-a-Lent, how you been true to me?

SHAKESPEARE, Merry Wives of Windsor. Act
2, sc. 3, l. 27. (1600) The Jack-a-Lent was a puppet thrown at during the Lenten fair.

II—Jack and Jill

There is not so bad a Jack but there is as bad a Jill.

BERTHELSON, English-Danish Dictionary. (1754)
There are many variations of this proverb:
"A good Jack makes a good Jill." "Jack's as good as Jill." "If Jack were better, Jill would not be so bad," Jack being a sort of generic name for a young fellow and Jill for a young woman.

For not a Jack among them but must have his Jill.

DANIEL DEFOR, Everybody's Business. (1725)

If Jack's in love, he's no judge of Jill's Beauty.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1748..

What availeth lordship, yourself for to kill
With care and with thought how Jack shall have Jill?

1520)

Jack shall have Jill, Nought shall go ill.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act III, sc. 2, l. 461. (1595)

Every Jack will find a Jill, gang the world as it may.

SCOTT, St. Roman's Well. Ch. 2.

While the ancient law fulfills,
Myriad moons shall wane and wax.

Jack must have his pair of Jills,
Jill must have her pair of Jacks.

BERT LESTON TAYLOR, Old Stuff.

Jack shall pipe and Jill shall dance.

GEORGE WITTE, Christmas.

Jack and Jill went up the hill,
To fetch a pail of water;

Jack fell down and broke his crown
And Jill came tumbling after.

JACKSON, ANDREW

In answer to our shouting, fire lit his eye of gray;

Erect, but thin and pallid, he passed upon his bay. . . .

But spite of fever and fasting, and hours of sleepless care,

The soul of Andrew Jackson shone forth in glory there.

THOMAS DUNN ENGLISH, The Battle of New Orleans.

Old turkey-cock on a forest rock,
Old faithful heart who could boast and strut;
I will think of you when the woods are cut—
Old, old Andrew Jackson. . . .

He broke the bones of all cattle who horned him,
He broke the bones of all who scorned him,— . . .

The finest hope from the Cave of Adullam,
Since Davis ascended the throne;—
Old Andrew Jackson, the old, old raven, lean as a bone!

VACHEL LINDBAY, Old Old Old Andrew Jackson.

¹ This is the day that we honor "Old Hickory,"
Honor him, aye, for the name that he bore!

Fierce as a fighter, and yet above trickery,
Virile and valiant and leal to the core!
CLINTON SCOLLARD, Old Hickory.

How General Andrew Jackson got the title of "Old Hickory" is told by Captain William Allen, who messed with him during the Creek War. Allen's story is that Jackson caught a severe cold during the advance. There were no tents, but Allen and his brother cut down a stout hickory tree, peeled off the bark and persuaded Jackson to use it as a covering. A drunken citizen fell over it next morning, and as Jackson crawled out, greeted him with, "Hello, Old Hickory! come out of your bark and jine us in a drink." This seems a tall yarn, and the sobriquet more probably referred to Jackson's strong and wiry build.

JACKSON, THOMAS JONATHAN (STONEWALL)

² There is Jackson standing like a stone wall!
BRIG.-GEN. BERNARD E. BEY, at battle of Bull Run, 21 July, 1861, referring to the Confederate general, Thomas Jonathan Jackson. General Jackson always insisted that Bee had referred to his brigade and not to himself personally, but the sobriquet "Stonewall" stuck to him the rest of his life. (POORE, Reminiscences of Metropolis, II, 85.)

³ Says he, "That's Banks, he's fond of shell, Lord save his soul we'll give him—;" well
That's Stonewall Jackson's way.

JOHN WILLIAMSON PALMER, Stonewall Jackson's Way.

⁴ Yes, it was noblest for him—it was best (Questioning naught of our Father's decrees),
There to pass over the river and rest
Under the shade of the trees!

MARGARET JUNKIN PRESTON, Under the Shade of the Trees. General Jackson's last words were, "Let us cross the river and rest in the shade."

⁵ Whom have we here—shrouded in martial
manaei,
Crowned with a martyr's charm?
A grabd dead hero, in a living banner,

Born of his heart and arm.
UNKNOWN, The Brigade Must Not Know, 52.

JASMINE

⁶ Jasmine is sweet and has many loves.
THOMAS HOOD, Flowers.

⁷ Jas in the Arab language is despair,
And Min the darkest meaning of a lie.
Thus cried the Jessamine among the bowers,
How justly doth a lie
Draw on its head despair!
Among the fragrant spirits of the bowers
The boldest and the strongest still was I.
Although so fair,
Therefore from Heaven

A stronger perfume unto me was given
Than any blossom of the summer hours.
CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, Jessamine.

Among the flowers no perfume is like mine:
That which is best in me comes from within.
So those in this world who would rise and shine,
Should seek internal excellence to win.
And though 'tis true that falsehood and despair
Meet in my name, yet bear it still in mind
That where they meet they perish. All is hid
When they are gone and nought remains behind.

CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, Jessamine.

⁸ And the jasmine flower in her fair young
breast,
(O the faint, sweet smell of that jasmine flower!)

And the one bird singing alone to his nest.
And the one star over the tower.
OWEN MEREDITH, Amx Italiens.

It smelt so faint, and it smelt so sweet,
It made me creep and it made me cold.
Like the scent that steals from the crumbling sheet
Where a mummy is half unroll'd.
OWEN MEREDITH, Amx Italiens.

⁹ And the jessamine faint, and the sweet tube-rose,

The sweetest flower for scent that blows.
SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. St. 10.

¹⁰ Out in the lonely woods the jasmine burns
Its fragrant lamps, and turns
Into a royal court with green festoons
The banks of dark lagoons.
HENRY TIMMON, Spring.

¹¹ As climbing jasmine pure.
WORDSWORTH, Elegiac Stanzas.

JEALOUSY

I—Jealousy: Definitions

¹² Thou tyrant, tyrant Jealousy,
Thou tyrant of the mind!
DEYDRE, Song of Jealousy.

Jealousy is the hellows of the mind;
Tends it but gently, and it warms desire,
It handled roughly, sets the all on fire.

DAVID GARRETT, Epilogue to Horne's Alceas.

Jealousy is said to be the offspring of Love.
Yet, unless the parent makes haste to strangle the child, the child will not rest till it has poisoned the parent.

J. C. AND A. W. HARR, Gipsies at Truth.

Jealousy is nourished by doubt, and becomes madness or ends when it passes from doubt to certainty. (La jalousie se nourrit dans les doutes, et elle devient fureur, ou elle finit, sitôt qu'on passe du doute à la certitude.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 32.

Jealousy is always born with love, but does not always die with it. (La jalousie naît toujours avec l'amour, mais elle ne meurt pas toujours avec lui.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 361.

Jealousy is the greatest evil of all, and the one which excites the least pity in the persons who occasion it. (La jalousie est le plus grand de tous les maux, et celui qui fait le moins de pitié aux personnes qui le causent.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 503.

No true love there can be without its dread penalty—jealousy
GEORGE MERRETT, Lect. Ft. II, canto I, st. 24,
l. 8.

Nor jealousy

Was understood, the injur'd lover's hell.
MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. v, l. 449.

O jealousy thou magnifier of trifles!
SCHILLER, Pierce, Act I, sc. 2. (Belm. tr.)

Jealous souls will not be answer'd so;
They are not jealous for the cause,
But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster

Begot upon itself, born on itself.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, Act III, sc. 4, l. 159.

Jealousy, at any rate, is one of the consequences of love; you may like it or not, at pleasure; but there it is.

R. L. STEVENSON, On Falling in Love.

Jealousy's a city peacocks: 'tis a thing unknown among people of quality.

See JOHN VANVOGHT, The Confession.

Moral indignation is jealousy with a halo.

See G. WILKES, The Wife of the Isaac Herman.

Oh, is she, Richard?

Is the lady, Richard?

Is she, Richard?

Is she, Richard?

II.—Jealousy: Apocryphas

That is ever the way. 'Tis all jealousy
the bride, and good wishes to the corpse.

J. M. BARRETT, Quitting Street, Act I.

Jealousy be so bred in the bone that it will never out of the flesh.

WILLIAM BULLOCK, Swarm of Defence, No.
75.

Yet he was jealous, though he did not show it.
For jealousy dislikes the world to know it.
BYRON, Don Juan, Canto I, st. 65.

Our very best friends have a tincture of jealousy even in their friendship; and when they hear us praised by others, will ascribe it to sinister and interested motives if they can.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon, p. 80. See also under FRIEND.

Anger and jealousy can no more bear to lose sight of their objects than love.

GEORGE ELIOT, Mill on the Floss, Bk. I, ch. 10.

Jealousy is never satisfied with anything short of an omniscience that would detect the subtlest fold of the heart.

GEORGE ELIOT, Mill on the Floss, Bk. VI, ch. 19.

He that a white horse and a fair wife keepeth,
For fear, for care, for jealousy scarce sleepeth.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Fruits, 191.

'Tis not to make me jealous
To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays and dances well
SHAKESPEARE, Othello, Act III, sc. 3, l. 183.

Man's of a jealous and mistaking kind.

ROMAN, Othello, Bk. III, l. 344 (Pope, tr.)

There is more self-love than love in jealousy.
(Il y a dans la jalousie plus d'amour-propre que d'amour.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 524.

Jealousy will be the ruin of you. (Perdetur dolor hic.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams, Bk. x, ep. 98, l. 11.

Build on your own deserts, and ever be
A stranger to love's enmity, jealousy.

MASSINGER, A Very Woman, Act IV, sc. 2.

Jealousy shuts one door and opens two.

See JOHN VANVOGHT, Moral Essays, p. 370.

Love being jealous makes a good eye too asquint.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

One not easily jealous, but, being wrought,
Peopled in the extreme, a ruin is not
SHAKESPEARE, Othello, Act IV, sc. 3, l. 344.

1 Jealousy to love. That is love's curse.
 Tennyson, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1340.

2 The ear of jealousy heareth all things.

Apcryphs: Wisdom of Solomon, l. 10

3 This carry-hke, discithous Jealousy,
 That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 637.

III—Jealousy: Its Torments

4 A jealous love lights his torch from the firebrands of the furies.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, 11 Feb, 1780.

5 Then wherefore should we sigh and whine,
 With groundless jealousy repine,
 With silly whims and fancies frantic,
 Merely to make our love romantic?

BYRON, To a Lady.

6 But whither am I strayed? I need not raise Trophies to thee from other men's dispraise;
 Nor is thy fame on lesser runs built;
 Nor needs thy juster title the foul guilt
 Of Eastern kings, who, to secure their reign,
 Must have their brothers, sons, and kindred slain.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, On Mr. John Fletcher's Works.

Should such a man, too fond to rule alone,
 Bear, like the Turk, no brother near the throne;
 View him with scornful, yet with jealous eyes,
 And hate for arts that caus'd himself to rise.

POPE, Epistle to Dr Arbuthnot, l. 197.

7 Then grew a wrinkle on fair Venus' brow,
 The amber sweet of love is turn'd to gall!
 Gloomy was Heaven; bright Phoebus did avow

He would be coy, and would not love at all:
 Swearing no greater mischief could be wrought,

Than love united to a jealous thought.

ROBERT GREENE, Jealousy

8 O jealousy,
 Thou ugliest fiend of hell! thy deadly venom
 Preys on my vitals, turns the healthful hue
 Of my fresh cheek to haggard paleness,
 And drinks my spirit up!

HAMMAR MORE, David and Goliath Pt. v.

Self-harming jealousy.

How many fond fools serve mad jealousy!
 SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors Act II,
 sc. 1, l. 102; l. 116

A jealousy so strong

That judgement cannot cure.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, Act II, sc. 1, l. 310

9 Though I perchance am vicious in my guess,
 As, I confess, it is my nature's plague

To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy
 Shapes faults that are not.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello Act II, sc. 1, l. 246.

10 Green-eyed jealousy:

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice Act III,
 sc. 2, l. 110.

O, beware, my lord, of jealousy:
 It is the green-eyed monster which doth mock
 The meat it feeds on: that cuckold lives in bliss
 Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
 But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er
 Who dotes, yet doubts, suspects, yet strongly loves!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello Act III, sc. 2, l. 165.

Trifles light as air
 Are to the jealous confirmations strong
 As proofs of holy writ.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, Act III, sc. 3, l. 822.

11 Think'st thou I'd make of life a jealousy
 To follow still the changes of the moon
 With fresh suspicions?

SHAKESPEARE, Othello Act III, sc. 3, l. 177.

For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
 Doth call himself Affection's sentinel,
 Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 649.

12 What heart-breaking torments from jealousy flow,

Ah! none but the jealous—the jealous can know!

R. B. SHERRIDAN, The Duenna, Act I, sc. 2.

13 Jealousy is cruel as the grave: the coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a most vehement flame

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, viii, 6.

But through the heart
 Should Jealousy its venom once diffuse,
 'Tis then delightful misery no more,
 But agony unmix'd, incessant gail,
 Corroding every thought, and blasting all
 Love's Paradise

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 1073.

14 How great so e'er your rigours are,

With them alone I'll cope,

I can endure my own despair,

But not another's hope.

WILLIAM WALSH, Song

The damping thought stuck in my throat, and cut me like a knife.

That she, whom all my life I'd loved, should be another's wife

H. G. BELL, The Uncle.

15 Hunger, Revenge, to sleep are petty fits,
 But only Death the jealous eyes can close.

WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood, Act II, sc. 4.

Inquietness as seldom cures jealousy, as drinking in a fever quenches the thirst.

WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood, Act IV, sc. 5.

It is jealousy's peculiar nature,
To smell small things to great, nay, out of thought,
To conjure much; and then to lose its reason
Amid the hideous phantoms it has form'd.
Young, The Revenge. Act III, sc. 1.

What frenzy dictates, jealousy believes.

JOHN GAY, Diome.

Can't I another's face commend,
And to her virtues be a friend,
But instantly your forehead lowers,
As if her merit lessen'd yours?

EDWARD MOORE, Fables: The Farmer, the Spaniel and the Cat.

All jealous women are mad.

PURKE, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act II.

For story and experience tell us
That man grows old and woman jealous.

MATTHEW PERCY, Alma. Canto II, l. 65.

A jealous woman sets the whole house afire.
(Incendit omnem feminae zelus domum.)

PURCELLUS SYRUS, Scutellaria.

I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act IV, sc. 1, l.
151.

The venom clamours of a jealous woman
Poisons more deadly than a mad dog's tooth.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act V,
sc. 1, l. 69.

Each jealous of the other, as the stung are of the spider.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act V, sc. 1, l. 55.

These women are always jealous of their husbands, and of women never are!

DEANE, Woman of the World. Act I.

JEFFERSON, THOMAS

Here was buried Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of American Independence, of the statute of Virginia for religious freedom, and father of the University of Virginia.

JEFFERSON, Epitaph, written for himself.

I have the consolation to reflect that during the period of my administration not a drop of the blood of a single fellow citizen was shed by the sword of war or of the law.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xix, p. 286.

Thomas Jefferson still lives.

JOHN ADAMS, Last words. As a matter of fact, Jefferson had died on the morning of that very day, 4 July, 1826. However, Adams's words were a prophecy, for he does still live.

He had a steadfast and abiding faith in justice, righteousness and liberty as the prevailing and abiding forces in the conduct of States, and that justice and righteousness were sure to prevail where any people bear rule in perfect liberty.

GEORGE F. HOAR, Thomas Jefferson.

Since the days when Jefferson expounded his code of political philosophy, the whole world has become his pupil.

MICHAEL MACWHIRTER, Address, at University of Virginia, 13 April, 1931.

A gentleman of thirty-two who could calculate an eclipse, survey an estate, tie an artery, plan an edifice, try a cause, break a horse, dance a minuet and play the violin.

JAMES PARTON, Life of Jefferson, p. 164.

The immortality of Thomas Jefferson does not lie in any one of his achievements, but in his attitude toward mankind.

Have mercy upon all Jews, Turks, Infidels, and Heretics.

Book of Common Prayer: Good Friday.

A people still, whose common ties are gone; Who, mixed with every race, are lost in none.

GEORGE CHAREK, The Borough Letter 4.

Yes, I am a Jew, and when the ancestors of the right honourable gentleman were brutal savages in an unknown island, mine were priests in the temple of Solomon

BENJAMIN DISSHAUL, reputed reply to Daniel O'Connell

The gentleman will please remember that when his half-civilized ancestors were hunting the wild boar in Silesia, mine were princes of the earth.

JUDAH BENJAMIN, in reply to a taunt by a Senator of German descent. (MOORE, Reminiscences of Sixty Years in the National Metropolis.)

You call me a damned Jew. My race was old when you were all savages I am proud to be a Jew.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, Loyalists. Act II.

The Jews are among the aristocracy of every land; if a literature is called rich in the possession of a few classic tragedies, what shall we say to a national tragedy lasting for fifteen hundred years, in which the poets and the actors were also the heroes.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Bk vi, ch. 42.

The sufferance, which is the badge of the Jew, has made him, in these days, the ruler of the rulers of the earth.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Suavity toward the Jews! Although you have lived among them, it is evident that you little understand those enemies of the human race. Haughty and at the same time base, combining an invincible obstinacy with a spirit despicably mean, they weary alike your love and your hatred.

ANATOLE FRANCE, The Procurator of Judæa.

As dear as a Jew's eye.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, II, 146. (1595)

There will come a Christmas by which will be worth a Jew's eye.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act II, sc. 5, l. 43.

Taluspant race! and did your power decay? Failed the bright promise of your early day?

RONALD REEVE, Philistine.

When people talk about a wealthy man of my creed, they call him a Jew; but if he is poor they call him a Jew.

WILLIAM HENRY, W. H. H. H.

If my theory of relativity is proven successful, Germany will claim me as a German and France will declare that I am a citizen of the world. Should my theory prove untrue, France will say that I am a German and Germany will declare that I am a Jew.

2 Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile!

New Testament: John, i, 47.

3 A hopeless faith, a homeless race,
Yet seeking the most holy place,
And owning the true bias . . .
Or like pale ghosts that darkling roam,
Hovering around their ancient home,
But find no refuge there.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Fifth Sunday in Lent.

4 And Israel shall be a proverb and a by-word among all people.

Old Testament: I Kings, ix, 7.

5 It is curious to see a superstition dying out. The idea of a Jew (which our pious ancestors held in horror) has nothing in it now revolting. We have found the claws of the beast, and pared its nails, and now we take it to our arms, fondle it, write plays to flatter it: it is visited by princes, affects a taste, patronizes the arts, and is the only liberal and gentleman-like thing in Christendom.

CHARLES LAMB, Specimens of the English Dramatic Poets: Marlowe's Rich Jew of Malta.

6 Still on Israel's head forlorn,
Every nation heaps its scorn.

EMMA LAZARUS, The World's Justice.

His cup is gall, his meat is tears,
His passion lasts a thousand years.

EMMA LAZARUS, Crowing of the Red Cock.

7 Who hateth me but for my happiness?
Or who is honoured now but for his wealth?
Rather had I, a Jew, be hated thus,
Than pitted in a Christian poverty.

MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act i, sc. 1.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 198.

Still have I borne it with a patient shrug,
For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe.
You call me misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
And spit upon my Jewish gabardine

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 3, l. 110.

13 He hath . . . laughed at my losses, mocked at my gains, scorned my nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies; and what's his reason? I am a Jew.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 38.

Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? if you tickle us, do we not laugh? if you poison us, do we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 60.

I pray you, think you question with the Jew:

You may as well go stand upon the beach
And bid the main flood bate his usual height;
You may as well use question with the wolf
Why he hath made the ewe bleat for the lamb;
You may as well forbid the mountain pines
To wag their high tops, and to make no noise,
When they are fretten with the gusts of heaven;
You may as well do any thing most hard,
As seek to soften that—than which what's harder?—

His Jewish heart.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 70.

 Referring to Dr. Johnson.

Here Johnson lies—a sage, by all allow'd, Whom to have bred may well make England proud;

Whose prose was eloquence by wisdom taught,
 The graceful vehicle of virtuous thought;
 Whose verse may claim—grave, masculine,
 and strong,

Superior praise to the mere poet's song;
 Who many a noble gift from heav'n possess'd
 And faith at last—alone worth all the rest.

Oh man immortal by a double prize!
 By Fame on earth—by Glory in the skies!

GOETHE, Epitaph on Dr. Johnson.
 Here lies poor Johnson; reader have a care;
 Tread lightly, lest you rouse a sleeping bear.

Religious, moral, generous, and humane

I.—Joy: Definitions

Every joy is gain

And gain is gain, however small.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. iv.

4. An infant when it gazes on a light,
 A child the moment when it drains the
 breast,

A devotee when soars the Host in sight,
 An Arab with a stranger for a guest,
 A sailor when the prize has struck in fight,
 A miser filling his most hoarded chest,
 Feel rapture; but not such true joy are reap-
 ing

As they who watch o'er what they love while sleeping.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 196.

5. Joy is the sweet voice, joy the luminous cloud.
 We in ourselves rejoice!
 And thence flows all that charms or ear or sight,

All melodies the echoes of that voice,
 All colours a suffusion from that light.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Dejection. St. 5.

6. For present joys are more to flesh and blood
 Than a dull prospect of a distant good.

DRYDEN, The Hind and Panther. Pt. III, l. 364.

7. Not by appointment do we meet Delight
 And Joy; they heed not our expectancy;
 But round some corner in the streets of life,
 They, on a sudden, clasp us with a smile.

GERALD MANEY, The Bridegroom of Beauty.

8. Joy, in Nature's wide dominion,
 Mightiest cause of all is found;
 And 'tis joy that moves the pinion

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 837.

8 Joy is a fruit that Americans eat green.
AMANDO ZECRI, (Golden Book, May, 1931.)

III—Joy: Its Praise

9 To-day, whatever may annoy,
The word for me is Joy, just simple Joy.
JOHN KENDRICK BANGS, The Word.

10 Joy rises in me like a summer's morn.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Christmas Carol.

11 Sing out my soul, thy songs of joy;

Such as a happy bird will sing,
Beneath a rainbow's lovely arch,
In early spring.

W. H. DAVIES, Songs of Joy.

12 Gladness in every face express'd,
Their eyes before their tongues confess'd.
Men met each other with erected look,
The steps were higher that they took.
DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 122.

13 O close my hand upon Beatitude!
Not on her toys.

LOUISE IMOGEN GUINNY, Deo Optimo Maximo.

14 At Earth's great market where Joy is trafficked
in,

Buy while thy purse yet swells with golden Youth.

ALAN SEZOR, Ode to Antares.

15 Make the coming hour o'erflow with joy,
And pleasure drown the woe.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 47.

Every humour bath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xci.

16 I have drunken deep of joy,
And I will taste no other wine to-night.
SHILLEY, The Cenci. Act i, sc. 3, l. 92.

IV—Joy: Its Evanescent

17 Seeks painted trifles and fantastic toys,
And eagerly pursues imaginary joys.
MARK AKENSIDE, The Virtuoso.

18 Joys Are bubble-like—what makes them bursts them too.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Library and Balcony,
l. 62.

In Folly's cup still laughs the bubble joy.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epistle ii, l. 283.

19 He who bends to himself a Joy
Does the winged life destroy;
But he who kisses the Joy as it flies
Lives in Eternity's sunrise.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Eternity.

20 There's not a joy the world can give like that it takes away.

BYRON, Stanzas for Music.

21 Joy of this world, for time will not abide;
From day to night it changeth as the tide.

CHAUCER, Tale of the Man of Love, l. 1035.

22 All human joys are swift of wing,
For heaven doth so allot it,
That when you get an easy thing,
You find you haven't got it.

EUGENE FIELD, Ways of Life.

23 There's a hope for every woe,
And a balm for every pain,
But the first joys o' our heart
Come never back again.

ROBERT GILFILLAN, The Exile's Song.

24 And Joy, whose hand is ever at his lips,
Bidding adieu.

KEATS, Ode on Melancholy. St. 3.

25 Joys do not abide, but take wing and fly away. (Gaudia non remanent, sed fugitiva volant.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. 4, epig. 15.

But headlong joy is ever on the wing.
MILTON, The Passion, l. 3.

26 Joys too exquisite to last,
—And yet more exquisite when past.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Little Cloud, l. 159.

104 Joy in possession will not last;
Happiness's joys were never past;
At once the fountain, stream, and sea,
They were—they are—they yet shall be MONTGOMERY, The Little Cloud Conclusion

1 Oh stay! oh stay!
Joy so seldom weaves a chain
Like this to-night, that oh 'tis pain
To break its links so soon.
THOMAS MOORE, Pip Not Yet

2 How fading are the joys we dote upon!
Like apparitions seen and gone,
But those which soonest take their flight
Are the most exquisite and strong,
Like angels' visits, short and bright,
Mortality's too weak to bear them long.
JOHN NORRIS, The Parting

3 Oh, had I but Aladdin's lamp
The only for a day,
I'd try to find a link to bind
The joys that pass away
CHARLES SWAIN, Oh, Had I

4 But we are pressed by heavy laws;
And often, glad no more,
We wear a face of joy, because
We have been glad of yore.
WORDSWORTH, The Plover, l. 45.

Answer my life my judgement.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear Act i, sc 1, l 158

What judgement shall I dread, doing no wrong?
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice Act iv, sc 1, l 69

Though our works
Find righteous or unrighteous judgement, this
At least is ours, to make them righteous.

SWINBURNE, Marmion Faber Act iii, sc 1

From one crime judge them all. (Crimine ab uno Disce omnes)

VERGIL, Aeneid Bk ii, l 65

One cool judgement is worth a thousand hasty councils

III—Judgment Its Fallibility

If I was as bad as they say I am,
And you were as good as you look,
I wonder which one would feel the worse

If each for the other was took?

GEORGE BARR BAKER, Good and Bad

Cruel and cold is the judgment of man,
Cruel as winter, and cold as the snow;

But by-and-by will the deed and the plan
Be judged by the motive that hath below

LEWIS J. BATES, By-and-By

No man can justly censure or condemn another because indeed no man truly knows another

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici Pt b, sec 4

Meanwhile "Black sheep, black sheep!" we cry,
Safe in the inner fold,

And maybe they hear, and wonder why,

And marvel not in the cold

RICHARD BURTON, Black Sheep

Mad in the vulgar judgment, sane, perhaps, in yours (Demens iudicio vulgi, sanus for-tasse tuo)

HORACE, Satires Bk i, sat 6, l 97

In men whom men condemn as ill
I find so much of goodness still,

In men whom men pronounce divine

I find so much of sin and blot,

I do not dare to draw a line

Between the two, where God has not.

JOAQUIN MILNER, Byron

There is so much good in the worst of us,

And so much bad in the best of us,

That it hardly becomes any of us

To talk about the rest of us

JUDGMENT DAY

18 At the piping of all hands,
When the judgment-signal's spread—
When the inland and the lands
And the seas give up their dead,
And the South and North shall come;
When the sinner is dismayed,
And the just man is afraid,

Then Heaven be thy aid,
Poor Tom.

JOHN G. C. BRAINARD, Lament for Long Tom.

The trumpet! the trumpet! the dead have all heard:

Lo, the depths of the stone-cover'd charnels are stirr'd;

From the sea, from the land, from the south and the north,

The vast generations of man are come forth.

JUSTICE

I.—Justice, Definitions

18 Liberty, equality,—bad principles! The only true principle for humanity is justice, and justice towards the feeble becomes necessarily protection or kindness.

ANSEL, Journal, 4 Dec., 1905.

Justice is that virtue of the soul which is distributive according to desert.

ARISTOTLE, Metaphysics On the Virtues and Vices: Justice.

2 There are in nature certain fountains of justice, whence all civil laws are derived.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. II.

3 Justice is itself the great standing policy of civil society; and any eminent departure from it, under any circumstances, lies under the suspicion of being no policy at all.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

Those eternal laws of justice, which are our rule and our birthright

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings, 15 Feb., 1788.

A good person once said that where mystery begins religion ends. Cannot I say, as truly at least, of human laws, that where mystery begins, justice ends?

EDMUND BURKE, A Vindication of Natural Society.

4 Justice is one; it binds all human society, and is based on one law, which is right reason applied to command and prohibition.

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. I, ch. 15, sec. 42.

Justice is compliance with the written laws. (Justitia est obtemperatio scriptis legibus.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. I, ch. 15, sec. 42. This is stated by Cicero only for the purpose of refutation.

5 Justice, in which is the crowning glory of the virtues. (Justitia, in qua virtutis est splendor maximus.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 7, sec. 20.

Good faith is the foundation of justice. (Fundamentum autem est justitiæ fides.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 7, sec. 23.

Justice shines by its own light. (Æquitas enim lucet ipsa per se.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 9, sec. 30.

Let us remember that justice must be observed even to the lowest. (Meminerimus etiam adversus infimos justitiam esse servandam.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 13, sec. 41.

Nothing that lacks justice can be morally right. (Nihil honestum esse potest, quod justitia vacat.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 19, sec. 62.

It is the function of justice not to wrong one's fellow men. (Justitiæ partes sunt non violare homines.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 23, sec. 99.

Justice is indispensable for the conduct of business. Its importance is so great, that not even those who live by wickedness and crime can get on without some small share of justice.

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 11, sec. 40.

Justice is the end of government.

DIXON, Maxims: The True-born Englishman. Pt. II, l. 368.

Justice is always' violent to the party offending, for every man is innocent in his own eyes.

DANIEL DEFOE, Shortest Way with Disasters.

7 Justice is truth in action.

BENJAMIN DESRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1851. Referring to the saying, "Peace is beauty in action."

Justice is truth in action. (La justice est la vérité en action.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 203. (1838)

8 Justice without wisdom is impossible.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Party Politics

9 That justice is the highest quality in the moral hierarchy I do not say, but that it is the first. That which is above justice must be based on justice, and include justice, and be reached through justice.

HENRY GEORGE, Social Problems. Ch. 9.

10 Justice is the virtue that innocence rejoiceth in.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Religio.

11 Justice is the firm and continuous desire to render to everyone that which is his due. (Justitia est constans et perpetua voluntas jus suum cuique tribuendi.)

JUSTINIAN, Institutiones. Bk. I, sec. 1.

12 A man's vanity tells him what is honour; a man's conscience what is justice.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Peter Leopold and President Du Puty.

13 Justice indeed

Should ever be close-eared and open mouthed; That is to hear a little, and speak much.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Old Law. Act v, sc. 1.

14 Justice is what is established; and thus all our established laws will be regarded as just, without being examined, since they are established.

PASCAL, Pensées. Ch. vii, No. 6.

15 A just man is not one who does no ill, But he, who with the power, has not the will.

PHILIPSON, Sententiæ.

16 Things which partake of justice are just; things which partake of beauty are beautiful.

PLATO, (Protagoras LAERTIUS, Plato: Bk. III, 13.)

All knowledge that is derived from justice must be called cunning rather than wisdom.

PLATO, (Cratylus, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 79, sec. 63.)

1 Poetic Justice, with her lifted scale,
Where, in nice balance, truth with gold she weighs.

And solid pudding against empty praise.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. I, l. 52.

2 Truth is its [Justice's] handmaid, freedom is its child, peace is its companion, safety walks in its steps, victory follows in its train;
it is the brightest emanation from the gospel;
it is the attribute of God.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir.
Vol. I, p. 29.)

3 The administration of justice is the firmest pillar of government.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Edmund Randolph, 27 Sept., 1789. (WASHINGTON, Writings, II, 432.) Inscribed on New York County courthouse.

Justice, sir, is the great interest of man on earth.
DANIEL WINTER, On Mr. Justice Story.

4 The hope of all who suffer,
The dread of all who wrong.

WHITTIER, Mantle of St. John De Malcha. St.

5 Justice has nothing to do with expediency.
Justice has nothing to do with any temporary standard whatever. It is rooted and grounded in the fundamental instincts of humanity.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Washington, 26
Feb., 1916.

Justice is lame as well as blind, amongst us.

THOMAS OTWAY, Venice Preserved. Act I, sc. 1.

Justice is blind. Blind she is, an' deaf an' dumb an' has a wooden leg.

FILIBY PETER DUNNE, Cross-Examinations.

7 So justice while she winks at crimes,
Stumbles on innocence sometimes.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. I, canto II, l. 1177.

Justice may wink a while, but see at last.

THOMAS MITCHELL, The Mayor of Queensborough. Act v, sc. 1.

8 Justice is too good for some people and not good enough for the rest.

WILLIAM DUNN, Good-bye to Western California.

9 Justice is the great enemy of the wicked.

BEN JONSON, Catiline Act III, sc. 2.

Liberty plucks justice by the nose.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure Act I, sc. 3, l. 29.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks;
Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw does pierce it.

III—Justice: Its Virtues

There is no virtue so truly great and godlike as justice.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 99.

Justice is the first of the virtues, for, unsupported by justice, valor is good for nothing;
and if all men were just, there would be no need of valor.

AGATHAUS II. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Agathaus.
Ch. 22, sec. 5.)

It is due to Justice that man is a God to man and not a wolf. (Justitiae debetur, quod homo

A prince's favours but on few can fall,

But justice is a virtue shar'd by all.

DRYDEN, Britannia Rediviva, l. 337.

Justice is like the kingdom of God—it is not without us as a fact; it is within us as a great yearning.

GEORGE ELDER, Romola. Bk. III, ch. 67.

Whoever fights, whoever falls,
Justice conquers evermore,
And he who battles on her side,
God, though he were ten times slain,
Crowns him victor glorified,
Victor over death and pain.

R. W. EMERSON, Voluntaries. Pt. iv.

Fear not, then, thou child infirm,
There's no god dare wrong a worm;
Laurel crowns cleave to deserts,
And power to him who power exerts.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. Motto.

Above all other things is justice: success is a good thing; wealth is good also; honor is better, but justice excels them all.

D. D. FIELD, Speeches: Law Reforms, 18
March, 1876.

And Heav'n, that ev'ry virtue bears in mind,
Ev'n to the ashes of the just is kind.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 523. (Pope, tr.)

The bad man's death is horror: but the just Keeps something of his glory in the dust.

WILLIAM HARRINGTON, Elegie. (c. 1650)

The memory of the just is blessed; but the name of the wicked shall rot.

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 7.

But the sunshine eye shall light the sky,
As round and round we run;
And the Truth shall ever come uppermost,
And Justice shall be done.

CHARLES MACKAY, Eternal Justice.

Prompt sense of equity! to thee belongs
The swift redress of unexamined wrongs!
Eager to serve, the cause perhaps untried,
But always apt to choose the suffering side!

HANNAH MORE, Sensibility, l. 243.

The bright actions of the just Survive unburied in the kindred dust.

UNKNOWN, Egerton Papers, p. 52. (1552) (Aikin, Court and Times of James I., II, 500, 1625.) Said to be the motto of Ferdinand I, Emperor of Germany. (JOHANNES MANLIUS, Loci Communes, II.)

Let justice be done though the world perish.
(Fiat jus et perat mundus.)
ST. AUGUSTINE. (Attributed to him by Jeremy Taylor.)

Though the heaven falls, let thy will be done.
(Ruat cælum, fiat voluntas tua.)
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. II, sec. 12.

3 Do well and right, and let the world sink.
GEORGE HERBERT, Country Parson. Ch. 29.

4 Where the offence is, let the great axe fall.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act IV, sc. 3, l. 218.

This even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act I, sc. 7, l. 10.

VII—Justice and Mercy

5 Hard is the task of justice, where distress
Excites our mercy, yet demands redress.
COLLEY CIBBER, The Heroic Daughter. Act III.

6 He who spares the bad seeks to corrupt the good.
(Parcit quisque malis, perdere vult bonos.)

CLAUDIUS (AUGUSTINE [?], Septem Sapientium Sententiae, I. 19.)

7 When justice on offenders is not done,
Law, government, and commerce are o'er-thrown.

JOHN DRYDEN, Of Justice, l. 83.
Our mercy is become our crime.
DANTE, Adriano and Achilides. Pt. II, l. 734.

There is a mercy which is weakness, and even treason against the common good.
GEOFFREY ELIOT, Romola. Bk. III, ch. 59.

8 Mercy and justice, marching cheek by jowl.
DO BATES, Dante's Works and Words. Week
I, day 1. (Sylvester, tr.)

9 Thawbarn was for doing justice, and leaving mercy to Heaven.

CHAMBERLAIN, Tam Jones. III. II, ch. 30.

10 Ah, to be just, as well as kind,—
It costs so little and so much!

RICHARD HOREY, Contemporaries.

11 It is easier to be beneficent than to be just.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion.)

12 Justice, that in the rigid paths of law,
Would still some drops from Pity's fountain draw.

JOHN LANGHORNE, The Country Justice: Introduction, l. 125.

13 Exact justice is commonly more merciful in the long run than pity, for it tends to foster in men those stronger qualities which make them good citizens.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Dante.

14 I may mitigate their doom
On me deriv'd, yet I shall temper so Justice with mercy, as may illustrate most
Them fully satisfied; and thee appease.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. 2, l. 27.

It is impossible to be just if one is not generous.

JOSEPH BROWN, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. IV, No. 109.

Be just before you are generous.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act IV, sc. 1.

Justice must tame, whom mercy cannot win.
GEORGE SAVILE, On the Death of Charles II.

And earthly power doth then show likest
God's

When mercy seasons justice.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 196.

Sparing justice feeds iniquity.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1687.

Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act III, sc. 1, l. 202.

Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act III, sc. 5, l. 3.

One can not be just if one is not humane. (On ne peut être juste si on n'est pas humain.)

VIII—Justice and Injustice

He's just, your cousin, ay, abhorrently;
He'd wash his hands in blood, to keep them clean.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. IX, l. 118.

One man's justice is another's injustice; one man's beauty another's ugliness; one man's wisdom another's folly.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

That which is unjust can really profit no one; that which is just can really harm no one.

HENRY GEORGE, The Land Question. Ch. 14.

I have loved justice and hated iniquity; therefore I die in exile. (Dilexi iustitiam et odi iniquitatem, propterea mortor in exilio.)

POPE GREGORY VII, HILDEBRAND. (BOWDEN, Lives. Bk. III, ch. 20.)

"A book," I observed, "might be written on the injustice of the just."

ANTHONY BROW, Daily Dialogues. No. 14.

Laye of justice, with most men, is nothing but the fear of suffering injustice. (L'amour de la justice n'est, en la plupart des hommes, que la crainte de souffrir l'injustice.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULT, Maximes. No. 78.

Delay of justice is injustice.

W. S. LANTON, Imaginary Conversations: Peter Leopold and President Du Paty.

The hour of justice does not strike
On the dials of this world.

(L'heure de la justice ne sonne pas Aux cadrans de ce monde.)

MAETERLINCK, Measure of the Hours.

Injustice is relatively easy to bear; what stings is justice.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. III, p. 101.

To entreat what is unjust from the just is wrong; but to seek what is just from the unjust is folly. (Injusta a iustis impetrare non decet; Justa autem ab iniustis petere, inaspienter est.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo: Prologue, l. 31.

O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell,
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act V, sc. 2, l. 137.

There is a point at which even justice is unjust. ("Εἰς τὴν ὁδὸν καὶ διακρίσις φέρει.")

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 1042.

Injustice often arises through chicanery, that is, through an over-subtle and even fraudulent construction of the law. This it is that gave rise to the now familiar saw, "The more law, the less justice" (Summum jus, summa injuria.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. I, ch. 10, sec. 33. The "trinum proverbium" is quoted by Cicero again in De Republica, v. 3, and may also be found in Columella (De Re Rustica, I, 7), Racine (La Thébade, IV, 3), and many other writers.

The strictest law is sometimes the greatest injustice. (Jus summum saepe summam malitia.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timoroumenos, l. 796.

The extremity of justice is extreme injustice.

RICHARD CROFTON, Chronicles. Vol. II, p. 228.

There is one motto that ought to be put at the head of our penal code, "Summum jus, summa injuria."

C. C. COLTON, Locon. Pt. II, No. 139.

K

KATYDID

1 I love to hear thine earnest voice,
Wherever thou art hid,
Thou testy little dogmatist,
Thou pretty Katydid!
Thou mindest me of gentlefolks,— Old gentlefolks are they,— Thou say'st an undisputed thing
In such a solemn way.

KEATS, JOHN

3 And Keats the real
Adonis with the hymeneal
Fresh vernal buds half sunk between
His youthful curls, kissed straight and sheen
In his Rome-grave, by Venus queen.
E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets, l. 407.

4 Stand still, true poet that you are!
I know you; let me try and draw you.
Some night you'll fail us when afar
You rise, remember one man saw you,
Knew you, and named a star!

ROBERT BROWNING, Popularity.

Who fished the murex up?
What porridge had John Keats?
ROBERT BROWNING, Popularity.
Dumb to Keats—him, even!

ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More.

5 If you still behave in dancing rooms and other societies as I have seen you—I do not want to live—if you have done so, I wish this coming night may be my last. I cannot live without you, and not only you but chaste you; virtuous
you.

JOHN KEATS, Letter to Fanny Brawne, 1820.

6 It is a better and a wiser thing to be a starved apothecary than a starved poet; so back to the shop, Mr. John, back to "plasters, pills, and ointment boxes."

JOHN GIBSON LOCKHART [?], Review, of Endymion in Blackwood.

A Mr. John Keats, a young man who had left a desecrated calling for the melancholy trade of Cockney-poetry, has lately died of a consumption, after having written two or three little books of verse, much neglected by the public.

LOCKHART or WILSON, Review, of Adonais in Blackwood.

The savage criticism on his Endymion, which appeared in the Quarterly Review, produced the most violent agitation on his susceptible mind;
the agitation thus originated ended in the rupture of a blood-vessel in the lungs; a rapid consumption ensued.

SHELLEY, Adonais: Preface. See also 343:6.

John Keats, who was kill'd off by one critique,
Just as he really promised something great. . .

Poor fellow! his was an untoward fate:

'Tis strange the mind, that very fiery particle,
Should let itself be snuff'd out by an article.

BYRON, Don Juan Canto xi, st. 59.

That dirty little blackguard Keats.

BYRON. (MOORE, Life of Byron, 1820.)

7 But now thy youngest, dearest one has perished,
The nursling of thy widowhood, who grew
Like a pale flower by some sad maiden cherished,

And fed with true love tears instead of dew,
Most musical of mourners, weep anew!

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 6.

He has outsoared the shadow of our night;
Envy and calumny, and hate and pain,
And that unrest which men miscall delight,
Can touch him not and torture not again.

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 40. The first line was inscribed by direction of Theodore Roosevelt on the slab over the grave of his son, Quentin, shot down near Chambry, France, 14 July, 1918.

I am borne darkly, fearfully afar;
Whilst, burning through the inmost veil of Heaven,

The soul of Adonais, like a star,
Beacons from the abode where the Eternal are.
SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 35.

8 Yet thou hast won the gift Tithonus missed:
Never to feel the pain of growing old,
Nor lose the blissful sight of beauty's
truth,

But with the ardent lips Urania kissed
To breathe thy song, and, ere thy heart grew cold,

Become the Poet of Immortal Youth.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Keats.

9 This grave contains all that was mortal of a young English poet, who, on his death bed, in the bitterness of his heart at the malicious power of his enemies, desired these words to be graven on his tomb-stone, "Here lies one whose name was writ in water."

Epitaph, on tombstone of Keats at Rome.

Among the many things he has requested of me to-night, this is the principal,—that on his gravestone shall be this inscription: Here lies one whose name was writ in water.

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, Life of Keats:
Letter to Severn, Vol. II, p. 91.

"Whose name was writ in water!" What large laughter

Among the immortals when that word was spoken.

RICHARD WATSON GILDER, Kent.

Let in the moonlight gleams a marble white,
 On which I read: "Here lieth one whose name
 Was writ in water." And was this the mood
 Of his sweet singing? Rather let me write
 "The knocking flux before it burst to flame Was quenched by death, and broken the broken read."

LONDONKILLOW, Kent.

Below lies one whose name was traced in sand,
 DAVID GRAY, His Own Epitaph.

Even Keats's epitaph—Here lies one whose name was writ in water—finds an echo in David Gray's
Below lies one whose name was traced in sand.
 Poor Gray was at least the better prophet.

T. B. ALDERICH, Punches of Papers, p. 171.

Your fame shall (spite of proverbs) make it plain

To write in water's not to write in vain.

KENTUCKY

There are children lucky from dawn till dusk,
 But never a child so lucky!

For I cut my teeth on "Money Mink"
 In the Bloody Ground of Kentucky!

S. V. BARKER, The Ballad of William Sycamore.

She was bred in old Kentucky,
 Where the meadow grass is blue,

There's the sunshine of the country
 In her face and manner, too;

She was bred in old Kentucky,
 Take her, boy, you're mighty lucky,

When you marry a girl like Sue.
 HARRY BRANTON, She Was Bred in Old Kentucky. (1898)

Yo' is mighty lucky, babe of old Kentucky.
 RICHARD HENRY BUCK, Kentucky Babe.

Weep no more, my lady,
 Oh! weep no more to-day!

We will sing one song for the old Kentucky
 Home.

For the old Kentucky Home far away.
 EDWARD CULBERT POEHLER, My Old Kentucky Home.

But I am in Kentucky hills
 Last night they were earth and home.

WILLIAM L. GILBERT, My Father Came from Kentucky.

The moonlight is the sunset in Kentucky;
 Summer days come often in Kentucky;

Friendship is the stranger's guest,
 March's flow gives the August

Yet a wrong is always wrongest,
 In Kentucky.

JAMES H. MULLIGAN, In Kentucky.

Here's a health to old Kentucky,
 Where the fathers, through the years,
 Hand down the country grace

To the sons of cavaliers;
 Where the golden age is rampant,
 And each succeeding morn

Plads "the corn is full of kernels,
 And the Colonels full of corn."

WILLIAM J. LAMERTON, To Old Kentucky. St. 7.

Here's to old Kentucky,
 The State where I was born,
 Where the corn is full of kernels,
 And the Colonels full of "corn."

And out of the window he flew like a shot,
 For the foot went up with a terrible thwack,

And caught the foul demon about the spot Where his tail joins on to the small of his back.

R. H. BARHAM, A Lay of St. Nicholas.

But Hadrian gave him a twitch
 As quick as lightning in the breech,

Just in the place where honour's lodg'd,
 As wise philosophers have judg'd;

Became a kick in that part more
 Barts wonder than deep wounds before.

2 Pitt kicked the bucket.

JOHN WOLCOT, Works, v, 242. (1796)

To kick the bucket, an unfeeling phrase for to die.

CARR, Craven Dialect, l. 55.

Despondency may make you kick the beam and the bucket both at once.

THOMAS HOOD, Hood's Own. Ser. i, No. 5. (1838)

3 When late I attempted your pity to move,

Why seemed you so deaf to my prayers?

Perhaps it was right to dissemble your love, But—why should you kick me downstairs?

UNKNOWN. Published anonymously in An Asylum for Fugitive Pieces. Vol. I, p. 15. (1785) Quoted by John Philip Kemble, in his play, The Pencil. Act i, sc. 1. (1788)

He is sometimes credited with the authorship of the lines.

KINDNESS

I—Kindness: Apophthegms

4 Kindness is wisdom. There is none in life

But needs it and may learn.

AMER, Journal, 16 Dec., 1868.

11 The heart benevolent and kind
The most resembles God.

ROBERT BURTON, A Winter Night.

12 Have you had a kindness shown?

Pass it on;

'Twas not given for thee alone,

Pass it on;

Let it travel down the years.

Let it wipe another's tears,
Till in Heaven the deed appears—
Pass it on.

HENRY BURTON, Pass It On.

13 Set not thy foot to make the blind to fall;
Nor wilfully offend thy weaker brother:
Nor wound the dead with thy tongue's bitter gall,

Neither rejoice thou in the fall of other.

are conciliated by a kind manner and gentle speech. (Sed tamen difficile dictu est, quantopere conciliat animos comitas affabilitasque sermonis.)

CICERO, De Officiis, Bk. ii, ch. 14, sec. 48.

Kindness to the good is a better investment than kindness to the rich. (Quam ob rem melius apud bonos quam apud fortunatos beneficium collocari potest.)

CICERO, De Officiis, Bk. ii, ch. xx, sec. 71.

17 If I can stop one heart from breaking,
I shall not live in vain;
If I can ease one life the aching,
Or cool one pain,

Or help one fainting robin
Unto his nest again,
I shall not live in vain.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems, Pt. I, No. 6.

Let me be a little kinder,
Let me be a little blinder
To the faults of those around me.

EDGAR A. GUEST, A Creed.

18 Yet still he fills affection's eye,
Obscurely wise, and coarsely kind.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Dr. Robert Levet.

19 There's no dearth of kindness
In this world of ours;
Only in our blindness
We gather thorns for flowers.

GERALD MASSEY, No Dearth of Kindness.

20 Persistent kindness conquers the ill-disposed.
(Vincit malos pertinax bonitas.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis, Bk. vii, sec. 31.

1 Kindness, nobler ever than revenge.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 3, 129.

When your head did but ache,
I knit my handkerchief about your brows,
The best I had, a princess wrought it me,
And I did never ask it you again;
And with my hand at midnight held your head,
And like the watchful minutes to the hour,
Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time,
Saying "What lack you?" and "Where lies your grief?"

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 1, 1. 41.

2 The kindest man,
The best-condition'd and unwearied spirit
In doing courtesies.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 295.
O do not slander him, for he is kind.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, 1. 247.

3 Kindness in women, not their beauteous looks,
Shall win my love.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew, iv, 2, 41.
And thy despised disdain too late shall find
That none are fair but who are kind.

THOMAS STANLEY, The Deposition.

4 For he was kind and she was kind,
And who so blest as they?

SOUTHEY, Rudiger, l. 47.

4a So many gods, so many creeds,
So many paths that wind and wind,
While just the art of being kind
Is all the sad world needs.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, The World's Need.

5 Pious for the right, he bore his part
In strife with many a valiant foe;
But laughter winged his polished dart,
And kindness tempered every blow.

WILLIAM WINTER, I. H. Bromley.

Surely never did there live on earth
A man of kinder nature.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion, Bk. i, l. 414.

6 That best portion of a good man's life,
His little, nameless, unremembered acts
Of kindness and of love.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey, l. 33.

Nor greetings where no kindness is, nor all
The drossy intercourse of daily life.

WORDSWORTH, Tintern Abbey, l. 130.

KINGS

I—Kings: Apothegms

7 Our converse with kings should be either as rare, or as pleasing, as possible.

Esop, to Solon, who had been banished by Cleisthenes. To which Solon replied, "No, instead! as rare or as beneficial as possible."
(PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 28.)

8 For commonly it is said that a king without letter or cunning is compared to an ass crowned.

BERNARD, Heron, 730. (c. 1534)

An unlettered king is a crowned ass.

EDWARD FREEMAN, Norman Conquest. Vol. II,
p. 277.

9 God bless the King, I mean the faith's defender,

God bless (no harm in blessing) the Pretender,
But who pretender is or who is king,

God bless us all—that's quite another thing.

JOHN BYRON, Extremes to an Officer in the Army.

10 King is Kön-ning, Ken-ning, Man that knows or cans

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Divinity.

11 The king's leavings are better than the lord's bounty.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. I, ch. 39.

Better to die a king than to live a prince.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, to his brother, Louis, when the latter urged his ill health against taking the crown of Holland.

For a King, death is better than dethronement and exile.

Attributed to THEODORA, wife of Justinian I.

12 To be a kingdom's bulwark, a king's glory,
Yet loved by both, and trusted and trustworthy,

Is more than to be king.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Zapolya. Sc. I.

13 One who has given you more kingdoms than you had towns before.

CORTES, to Charles V., when the latter demanded who he was. (VOLTAIRE, Essai sur les Mœurs. Ch. 147.) Prescott calls it a "most improbable story." (Conquest of Mexico, vii, 5, note.)

14 I would not be a king to be below'd
Causeless, and daub'd with undiscerning praise.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 359.

15 Royalty is but a feather in a man's cap: let children enjoy their rattle.

OLIVER CROMWELL, when rejecting the offer of the title of king, in 1658.

What shall we do with the bauble? Take it away!

OLIVER CROMWELL, picking up the mace, when dissolving the Long Parliament, 20 April,
1653. (CARLYLE, Cromwell.)

A prince, the moment he is crown'd,
Inherits every virtue sound,
As emblems of the sovereign power,
Like other baubles in the Tower:

is generous, valiant, just, and wise,
And his subjects all his dies.
—Spenser, The Faerie Queene, I, 191.

A King's a King, do Fortune what she can.
—Michael Drayton, Barons' War, Bk. v, st. 36.

Kind as kings upon their coronation day.
—DeVries, The Hind and the Panther, Pt. I, l. 271.

A man's a man,
But when you see a king, you see the work
Of many thousand men.
—Gaston Elton, Spanish Gypsy, Bk. I.

If the king is in the palace, nobody looks at the walls.

—Emerson, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

They sit not kings who sit on thrones, but they who know how to govern.

—Emerson, Society and Solitude: Eloquence.
This 'tis to be a monarch when alone
He can command all, but is awed by none.

—Massinger, The Roman Actor, Act I, sc. 4.

A king's favour is no inheritance.
—Thomas Fuller, Gnomologia, No. 4618.

The sun has set; no night has followed. (Sol occubuit; nox nulla secuta est.)

—Gualtero de Banni, in 1189, referring to the accession of Richard I, Cœur-de-Lion, to the throne of England at the death of Henry II.

Beware, for dreadful is the wrath of kings.

—Homer, Iliad, Bk. II, l. 234. (Pope, tr.)

The wrath of kings is always heavy. (Gravis ira regum est semper.)

—Seneca, Medea, l. 494.

There is no king who has not had a slave among his ancestors, and no slave who has not had a king among his.

—Henry Keller, Story of My Life, p. 4.

Who knows not that the king is a name of dignity and office, not of person?

—Milton, Tenure of Kings and Magistrates.

King David and King Solomon

Led merry, merry lives,

With many, many lady friends,

And many, many wives;

But which old age crept over them,

With many, many quins,

King Solomon wrote the Proverbs

And King David wrote the Psalms.

—Thomas, King Solomon's Dream and Solomon.

For the islands were the wind still runs,

"The King and the King's Highway."

—Henry Wadsworth, The King's Highway.

Know you not that King David's lady Mary?

(An necis longos regibus esse manus?)

—Ovid, Heroides, Epist. xvii, l. 166.

Kings are commonly said to have long hands; I wish they had as long ears.

—Swift, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

Honour the king.

—New Testament: I Peter, II, 17.

The more regal king of kings. (Regum rex regum.)

—Plautus, Captives, l. 825.

He that eats the king's goose shall be choked with his feathers.

—Richardson, Clarissa Harlowe, iv, 243.

The king is not the nation's representative,
but its clerk.

—Roosevelt, Speech, National Assembly, 17
May, 1790.

I am indeed the clerk (commis) and the explorer (voyageur) of democracy.

—Gambetta, Speech, Havre, 18 April, 1872, accepting the nickname of "Commercial Traveler" (Commis-voyageur), which had been given him because of the rapidity of his movements during the war.

O Richard! O my king, the universe forsakes thee!

On earth there is none but I who cares for thy welfare.

(O Richard! O mon roy, l'univers t'aban-donne!)

Sur la terre il n'est que moy qui s'intéresse de tes affaires.)

—Michel Jean Sedaine, Richard Cœur-de-Lion: Blondin's Song. The singing of this song at the dinner given at Versailles, 1 Oct., 1789, by the King and Marie Antoinette, was a famous episode in French history. (See Carlyle, French Revolution.
Pt. I, bk. vii, ch. 2.)

It is superior to all, monarch of all it surveys.
(Dominus omnium est, supra omnia est.)

—Seneca, Epistula ad Lucillum, Epist. civ, 24.

I am monarch of all I survey,

My right there is none to dispute;

From the center all round to the sea,

I am lord of the fowl and the brute.

—Cowper, Verses Supposed to be Written by Alexander Selkirk.

On alien soil, kingship stands not sure.

(Alieno in loco hæc stabile regnum est.)

The king's a tigger, now the play is done.

—Schubert, A's Well that Ends Well, Epist.
I, 228.

1 A king of shreds and patches.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act iii, sc. 4, l. 102.

The theory of the world is a thing of shreds and patches.

JANSSON, Representative Men: Plots. (1850)
The phrase, "A thing of shreds and patches," was echoed many years later by W. S. Gilbert in the first act of The Mikado. See 1879.3.

2 Proud setter up and puller down of kings!

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, Act iii, sc. 3, l. 157.

3 Ay, every inch a king.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, Act iv, sc. 6, l. 109.

4 O that I were a mockery king of snow,
Standing before the sun of Bolingbroke,
To melt myself away in water-drops!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, Act iv, sc. 1, l. 260

5 Hail, glorious edifice, stupendous work!
God bless the Regent, and the Duke of York!

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Loyal Effusion.

6 Kinquering Congs their titles take.

WILLIAM A. SPOONER, Warden of New College, Oxford, announcing the hymn, "Conquering Kings their titles take," early in 1879. Hence, "spoonerisms," most of which were the inventions of Dr. Spooner's friends.

7 A brave man, were he seven times king,
Is but a brave man's peer.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Marino Fabero, Act ii, sc. 2.

8 He who knows not how to dissimulate knows not how to reign. (Qui nescit dissimulare, nescit regnare.)

VINCENZIUS LUPANUS. (JUNTIUS LIPSIVS, Politica Sive Civilis Doctrina. Bk. iv, ch. 14.)
Sometimes given as a saying of Emperor Frederick I (Barbarossa), Louis XII and Philip II of Spain. Tacitus (Annals Bk. iv, ch. 71), speaking of Tiberius, says, "He was prouder of his dissimulation than of all his other virtues, for such he considered it."
One of the favorite maxims of Louis IX of France, and all the Latin he thought the Dauphin needed to learn. (DE THOU, Hist. Univ., iii, 293.)

He who knows not how to dissimulate, knows not how to reign.

LOUIS XI OF FRANCE. (ROCHET ET CHASSER, Histoire de France, Vol. ii, p. 30.)

To know how to dissimulate is the knowledge of kings. (Savoir dissimuler est le savoir des rois.)

CARDINAL RICCIARDI, Mémoires.

9 The first king was a successful soldier. (Le premier qui fut roi, fut un soldat heureux.)

VOLTAIRES, Mémoires, Act i, sc. 3.

What can they see in the longest kingly line in Europe, save that it runs back to a successful soldier?

SCOTT, Woodstock, Ch. 37.

10 Every one is born a king, and most people die in exile.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance, Act iii.

11 The king reigns but does not govern. (Rex regnat sed non gubernat.)

JAN ZAMOTSKA, Speech, at the Diet of 1605, alluding to King Sigismund III.

The king reigns but does not govern. (Der König herrscht aber regiert nicht.)

BISMARCK, Debate, Reichstag, 24 Jan., 1882.
Bismarck quoted this proverb in order to deny its application to Germany.

She governed but she did not reign. (Elle gouvernait, mais elle ne régnait pas.)

HÉNAULT, Mémoires, p. 161, referring to Madame des Ursins, the favorite of Philip V of Spain.

The king reigns, but does not govern. (Le roi régne, il ne gouverne pas.)

LOUIS ADOLPHE THIERS, Editorial Article, in Le National, a newspaper of which he was editor, Paris, 18 January, 1830.

II—Kings: The Good King

12 'Tis clemency which is the surest mark
By which the world may know a true monarch.
(La clemence est la plus belle marque Qui fasse à l'univers connaître un vrai monarque.)

CORNWALL, Cinna, Act iv, sc. 4.

13 We, too are friends to loyalty. We love
The king who loves the law, respects his bounds,

And reigns content within them. Him we serve

Freely and with delight, who leaves us free.

COWLEY, The Task, Bk. v, l. 331.

14 The clearest mark of a true king is that he is one whom all good men can praise without compunction not only during his life, but even afterwards.

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, First Discourse on Kingship, Sec. 33.

15 A king so good, so just, so great,
That at his birth the heavenly council paused
And then at last cried out, This is a man!

DRYDEN, The Duke of Guise, Act i, sc. 1. See also under MAN.

16 A good king is a public servant.

BEN JONSON, Explorers.

17 For therein stands the office of a king,
His honour, virtue, merit, and chief praise,
That for the public all this weight he bears.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, Act 5, sc. 3.

18 It is something to hold the scepter with a firm hand. (Est aliquid valida sceptrum tenere manu.)

QVINT. Remediorum Amoris, l. 480.

Nothing becomes a king so much as the administration of justice. War is a tyrant, as Themistocles expresses it, but Pindar says, justice is the rightful sovereign of the world.

PLUTARCH, Lives; Demetrius, Ch. 42, sec. 5.

Twere good That kings should think withal, When peace and wealth their land has blessed, 'Tis better to sit still at rest,

Than rise, perchance to fall.

SCOTT, Mormion. Canto iv, st. 29.

A king is he who has no fear; a king is he who desires naught. (Rex est qui metuit nihil; Rex est qui cupiet nihil.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 383.

I made them lay their hands in mine and swear

To reverence the King, as if he were Their conscience, and their conscience as their King.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 463.

III—Kings: Their Virtues

These unhappy kings, of whom so much evil is said, have their good points sometimes. (Ces malheureux rois dont on dit tant de mal, ont du bon quelquefois.)

ANDRIEU, Mémoires de Sans Souci.

To do well and be ill spoken of—'tis the lot of kings. (Βασιλεὺς μὲν ἐὶ πρῶτον, κακῶς δὲ δόκουν.)

ANTISTHENES. (MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, sec. 36; DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Anisthenes. Sec. 3.) Sometimes translated:

"It is a royal privilege to do well and be ill-spoken of." Alexander the Great quoted this apothegm. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander. Ch. 41, sec. 1.) Carlyle saw it written in Latin on the town-hall of Zittau, Germany: "Bene facere et male audire regium est." (CARLYLE, Frederick the Great, xv, 13.)

'Tis the first art of kings, the power to suffer hate. (Ars prima regni est posse invidiam pati.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 353.

He is the fountain of honour.

FRANCIS BACON, Of a King.

And in the years he reigned, through all the country wide,

There was no cause for weeping, save when the good man died.

(C'est en ces ans longuement qu'on le vit régner, et justement pleurer.)

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. (Theobald, tr., The King of Broughtford.)

So sit thou down at Beaulieu and see thine own

And so two citizens who take the air, Close pack'd, and smiling, in a chaise and one. COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 78.

He errs who thinks that life under a noble prince is slavery; never does liberty appear more fair than under a righteous king. (Fallitur egregio quisquis sub principe credit Servitium. Numquam libertas gratior extat Quam sub rege pio.)

CAEULIAN, De Consulatu Stidichonis. Bk. iii, l. 113.

Whoever is king, is also the father of his country.

CONGREVE, Love for Love: Dedication. See also under PATRIOTISM.

The king's word is more than another man's oath.

A king's word must stand. (Verbum regis stet oportet.)

BISHOP JOHN FISHER, English Works, p. 230. (1509) Cited as "a common proverb."

A King's word should be a King's bond. UNKNOWN, Sir Lancelot du Lake, l. 1673. (c. 1490)

If fidelity were lost, it should be found in the heart of a king.

FRANCIS I OF FRANCE. (L'Esprit dans l'Histoire, 113.)

Though good faith should be banished from the rest of the world, it should be found in the mouths of kings. (Si la bonne foi étoit bannie du reste du monde, il faudrait qu'on la trouvât dans la bouche des rois.)

JEAN II OF FRANCE, speaking to his council. (Biographie Universelle.)

There was a king of Thule,

Was faithful till the grave,

To whom his mistress dying,

A golden goblet gave.

(Es war ein König in Tule

Gar treu bis an das Grab,

Dem sterbend seine Büble

Einen gold'nen Becher gab.)

GÖTTER, Faust: The King of Thule. (Bayard Taylor, tr.)

The virtue of kings seems to consist chiefly in justice. (La vertu royale semble consister le plus en la justice.)

MONTEAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 6.

The Monarch drank, that happy hour, The sweetest, holiest draught of Power.

SCOTT, Lady of the Lake. Canto vi, st. 13.

Pre-eminence, and all the large effects

That troop with majesty.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act I, sc. 1, l. 133.

The king-becoming graces,
As justice, verity, temperance, stablesness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act IV, sc. 3, l. 91.

Yet looks he like a king; behold, his eye,
As bright as is the eagle's, lightens forth
Controlling majesty.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act III, sc. 3, l. 68.

Not making his high place the lawless perch
Of wing'd ambitions, nor a vantage-ground
For pleasure; but thro' all this tract of years

Wearing the white flower of a blameless life,
Before a thousand peering littlenesses.

TENNISON, Idylls of the King: Dedication,
l. 21.

IV—Kings: Their Faults

For this is the true strength of guilty kings,
When they corrupt the souls of those they rule.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Merope, l. 1451.

Kings, that made laws, first broke them.

APRHA BERN, The Golden Age St. 4.

A king promises, but observes only when he pleases.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 292.

Kings are naturally lovers of low company.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons,
11 Feb., 1780.

The animal known as king is by nature carnivorous. (ἄλλὰ φάσκει τοῦτο τὸ ζῷον ὁ βασιλεὺς σαρκοφάγος εἶναι.)

MARCUS CATO. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. viii, sec. 8.)

Kings climb to eminence
Over men's graves.

AUSTIN DOBSON, Before Sedan.

But though each court a jester lacks,
To laugh at monarchs to their face;
All mankind do behind their backs
Supply the honest jester's place.

ROBERT DOOLEY, The Kings of Europe.

Kings fight for kingdoms, madmen for applause.

DAYKEN, Palomou and Arctic. Bk. II, l. 322.

And Tom the second reigns like Tom the first.

DAYKEN, To Mr. Congress, l. 48.

God said, "I am tired of kings,
I suffer them no more;

Up to my ear the mothing brings
The outrage of the poor."

EMERSON, Boston Hymns.

The world is growing weary of that most costly of all luxuries, hereditary kings.

GEORGE BANCROFT, Letter, London, March, 1848.

And when Reason's voice,
Loud as the voice of Nature, shall have waked
The nations, . . . kingly glare
Will lose its power to dazzle; . . . whilst false-hood's trade

Shall be as hateful and unprofitable
As that of truth is now.

SHILLLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. III, l. 126.

The passing poor magnificence of kings.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. III, l. 555.

Kingship is passing down the yellow road,
And crowns are dangling from the willow
tree;

Royalty flees to seek a last abode
With the other outcasts of eternity.

DONALD EVANS, Bonfire of Kings.

Kings govern by means of popular assemblies only when they cannot do without them.

CHARLES JAMES FOX, Speech, House of Commons, 31 Oct., 1776

Ruin seize thee, ruthless king!
Confusion on thy banners wait;
Tho' fann'd by Conquest's crimson wing,
They mock the air with idle state.

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard, l. 1.

As yourselves your empires fall,
And every kingdom hath a grave.

WILLIAM HARRINGTON, Night.

Deceived for once, I trust not kings again.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 455. (Pope, tr.)

Whatever folly kings commit, the people suffer.
(Quidquid delirant reges, plectuntur Atriden.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 14.

Presently the kingly pile will leave but few acres to the plough. (Jam pauca aratro jugera regie Moles relinquunt.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. II, ode 15, l. 1.

When kings are building, drymen have something to do. (Wenn die Könige bau'n, haben die Kärner zu thun.)

SCHILLER, Karl und seine Anseher.

If any of our countrymen wish for a king, give them Æsop's fable of the frogs who asked a King; if this does not cure them, send them to Europe. They will go back republicans.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vi, p. 225.

The trappings of a monarchy would set up an ordinary republic.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Milton.

Johnson places this sentence in quotation marks, but it is not found in Milton's works. It is, perhaps, a paraphrase of Milton's arguments in A Ready and Bety Way.

1 The King's phoebe goes three parts away in parings.

JAMES HOWELL, Parley of Beasts, 19. Referred to as proved.

I see it is impossible for the King to have things done as cheap as other men.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 21 July, 1662.

2 On the king's gate the snow grew gray!

The king came not. They called him dead
And made his eldest son one day
Slave in his father's stead.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Coronation.

3 The fortune which made you a king, forbade you to have a friend. It is a law of nature, which cannot be violated with impunity.

JUVENAL, Letters. Letter 35.

The halls of kings are full of men, but void of friends. (Atria regum hominibus plena sunt, amicis vacua.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum.

4 Few kings and tyrants descend to Pluto without violence or bloodshed, or by a natural death.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 112.

It is one of the incidents of my profession. (E un incidente del mestiere.)

E. A. ROBINSON, Three Quatrains.

8 The gates of monarchs Are arch'd so high that giants may jet through And keep their impious turbans on.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act III, sc. 3, l. 4.

9 What infinite heart's ease Must kings neglect, that private men enjoy! And what have kings, that privates have not too.

Save ceremony, save general ceremony?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 286.

What art thou, thou idol ceremony? What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers? Art thouught him but a piece, despite and scorn, Creating awe and fear in other men?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act IV, sc. 3, l. 286.

Ceremony keeps up all things.

JOHN SAUNDERS, Table Talk: Ceremony.

10 It is the curse of kings to be attended By slaves that take their humours for a tyrant.

To break within the bloody house of life.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act IV, sc. 2, l. 208.

For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground And tell sad stories of the death of kings: How some have been depos'd, some slain in war, Some haunted by the ghosts they have depos'd, Some poison'd by their wives, some sleeping kill'd;

All murder'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act III, sc. 2, l. 155. I give this heavy weight from off my head, And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand, The pride of kingly sway from out my heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 204.

Who knows

What racking cares disease a monarch's bed?

VI—Kings: Divine Right

12 Injury to majesty, i.e., high treason. (Læse majestatis.)

AMMIANUS, Resum Gestarum. Bk. XVI, ch. 9, sec. 4. The French form, lèse-majesté, is the one usually used.

13 The Prussian Sovereigns are in possession of a crown not by the grace of the people, but by God's grace.

BISMARCK, Speech, in the Prussian Parliament, 1847. See also under GERMANY.

14 That the king can do no wrong is a necessary and fundamental principle of the English constitution.

BLACKSTONE, Commentaries. Bk. III, ch. 17.

The King can do no wrong?

R. H. BARNHAM, New-made Honour, l. 9.

15 The king never dies.

BLACKSTONE, Commentaries. Bk. IV, p. 240.

The King is dead. Long live the King! (Le Roi est mort. Vive le Roi!)

The French form of proclamation, last used at the death of Louis XVIII.

The death of Louis XIV was announced by the captain of the body-guard from a window of the state apartment. Raising his truncheon above his head, he broke it in the centre, and throwing the pieces among the crowd, exclaimed in a loud voice, "Le Roi est mort!" Then spinning another staff, he brandished it in the air as he shouted, "Vive le Roi!"

JULIA BARROW, Life of Louis XIV. Vol. III, 457.

16 Such is our good pleasure. (Tel est notre bon plaisir.)

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act II, sc. 1.

(Speech, Monarchs.) The formula by which his shareholders indicated their approval of legislative enactments.

The King wills it. (Le Roi le veut.)

Formula of royal assent as signified by the King to the British Parliament.

I am the State! (L'État, c'est moi!)

LOUIS XIV OF FRANCE, to the President of Parliament, 22 Dec., 1655, at the age of seventeen. (DULAURE, Histoire de Paris, p. 387.) Other historians dispute the authenticity of the utterance. Years later, however, the first sentence of a course in public law which he caused to have written for his grandson was, "The nation is not corporate in France. It lives entirely in the person of the king." And Bossuet declared of the sovereign, "Tout l'état est en lui": "All the state is in him" (CHATELAIN, Histoire de l'Administration Monarchique en France, ii, 32.)

Homage is due to kings; they do what they like. LOUIS XIV OF FRANCE, when a boy (MARTIN, History of France, xv, 95.)

It was said of Louis the Fourteenth that his gait was becoming enough in a king, but in a private man would have been an insufferable strut.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education.

When the King speaks, every one else should be silent.

FRANK LINNET, explaining why he had suddenly stopped playing before the Russian Emperor, when Alexander began whispering to his friends.

His fair large front and eye sublime declar'd Absolute rule.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 300.

But methought it lessened my esteem of a king, that he should not be able to command the rain.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 19 July, 1662.

For sure if Duiness sees a grateful day,
Th' in the shade of arbitrary sway.
O! if my sons may learn one earthly thing,
Teach but that one, sufficient for a King;
That which my priests, and mine alone, maintain,

Which, as it dies or lives, we fall or reign:
May you, may Cam and his, preach it long!
"The right divine of Kings to govern wrong."

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 181. Cam and his, the universities of Cambridge and Oxford. Though Pope endorses the last line in quotation marks, it is probably his own.

Divine right of kings means the divine right of anyone who can get appointed.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Pt. II, ch. 6.

Monarch's indignity is to reign.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, act 5, sc. 7.

Never king dropped out of the clouds.
JOHN SILDEN, Table-Talk: Power.

Every monarch is subject to a mightier one. (Omne sub regno graviore regnum est.)
SENeca, Thyestes, l. 612.

There's such divinity doth hedge a king,
That treason can but peep to what it would
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet Act iv, sc. 5, l. 123.

Kings are earth's gods, in vice their law's their will;

And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill?
SHAKESPEARE, Pericles Act I, sc. 1, l. 103.

Not all the water in the rough rude sea
Can wash the balm from an anointed King;
The breath of worldly men cannot depose
The deputy elected by the Lord
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II Act III, sc. 2, l. 54.

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women
Rail on the Lord's anointed
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 149.

Kings are not born, they are made by universal hallucination
BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

The power of kings (if rightly understood)
Is but a grant from Heaven of doing good.
WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, Fables No. 12

An emperor should die standing (Decet imperatorem stantem mori)

VERPASIUS. (SUETONIUS, Twelve Cæsars: Vespasian)

A king of France dies, but ought never to be ill.
LOUIS XVIII, 25 August, 1824, when urged not to hold his usual reception to celebrate the anniversary of St. Louis.

Name me an emperor who was ever struck by a cannon-ball.

CHARLES V OF SPAIN, when urged not to expose himself in action.

I never heard of a king being drowned. Make haste, loose your cables, you will see the elements join to obey me.

WILLIAM RUFUS, in 1099. (FREEMAN, Life of William Rufus, ii, 234.)

Queens of England are never drowned.
HENRIETTA MARIA, wife of Charles I, during a storm at sea, Feb., 1642.

VII—Kings: King and Subject

Kings will be tyrants from policy, when subjects are rebels from principle.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

A sovereign's ear is broken a subject's questioning.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Zephrus. Sc. 1.

- 1 He is ours,
T' administer, to guard, t' adorn the state,
But not to warp or change it. We are his,
To serve him nobly in the common cause,
True to the death, but not to be his slaves.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 341.
- 2 When kings the sword of justice first lay down,
They are no kings, though they possess the crown;
Titles are shadows, crowns are empty things:
The good of subjects is the end of kings.
DANIEL DEFOE, The True-born Englishman. Pt. ii, l. 313.
- 3 Minions too great argue a King too weak.
SAMUEL DANIEL, The History of the Civil War. Bk. i, st. 38.
- 4 Happy when both to the same centre move,
When Kings give liberty, and subjects love.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, Cooper's Hill, l. 333.
- Thus Kings, by grasping more than they could hold,
First made their subjects by oppression bold;
And popular sway, by forcing Kings to give
More than was fit for subjects to receive,
Ran to the same extremes; and one excess
Made both, by striving to be greater, less.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, Cooper's Hill, l. 343.
- 5 Subjects may grieve, but Monarchs must redress.
DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 242.
- 6 Every citizen is king under a citizen king.
(Tout citoyen est roi sous un roi citoyen.)
FAVART, Les Trois Subanes Act ii, sc. 3.
- 7 A bad King but a good Subject.
W. S. GILBERT, Utopia, Limited Act I.
- 8 The obligation of subjects to the sovereign is understood to last as long, and no longer, than the power lasteth by which he is able to protect them.
THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. ii, ch. 21.
- 9 God gives not kings the style of Gods in vain.
For on his throne his sceptre do they sway;
And as their subjects ought them to obey,
So kings should fear and serve their God again.
JAMES I OF SCOTLAND, Sonnet Addressed to His Son, Prince Henry.
- 10 When King and People understand each other past a doubt,
It takes a foe and more than a foe to knock that country out.
RUSTAND KISSING, "Together."
- 11 I recommend my son, if he has the misfortune

- to become king, to remember that he owes himself to the happiness of his people.
LOUIS XIV OF FRANCE, in the testament which he made 25 Dec., 1792.
- 12 Entire and sure the monarch's rule must prove,
Who founds her greatness on her subjects' love.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Prologue Spoken on Her Majesty's Birthday, 1704.
- 13 He that is hated of his subjects cannot be counted a king
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.
- 14 Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 186.
- 15 Was never subject longed to be a king,
As I do long and wish to be a subject.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 9, l. 5.
- 16 Vulgarity in a king flatters the majority of the nation.
BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.
- 17 The king who fights his people fights himself.
TENNYSON, The Passing of Arthur, l. 72.
- 18 The greatest king is he who is the king
Of greatest subjects
GILBERT WEST, Institution of the Garter, l. 302.

KISS AND KISSING

I—Kiss: Definitions

- 19 Something made of nothing, tasting very sweet,
A most delicious compound, with ingredients complete;
But if, as on occasion, the heart and mind are sour,
It has no great significance, and loses half its power.
MARY E. BUXELL, The Kiss.
- 20 The anatomical juxtaposition of two orbicularis oris muscles in a state of contraction.
DR. HENRY GIBSON, Definition of a Kiss.
- 21 What is a kiss? Why this, as some approve:
The sure sweet cement, glue, and lime of love.
ROBERT HERRICK, A Kiss.
- 22 What is a kiss? Alack! at worst,
A single Dropp to quench a Thirst,
Tho' oft it proves, in happy Hour,
The first sweet Dropp of our long Showre.
CHARLES GODFREY LEXLAND, In the Old Times.
- 23 What's in a kiss?
Oh, when for love the kiss is given, this:
Truth, purity, abiding trust, the seal
Of loyalty to love, some won, some won't.

Amphibious creature of a poet's affections—this.
All this, and more, is sweet to be in a kiss.
—William Porter, What's in a Kiss?

A kiss, when all is said, what is it?
A wavy dot.
Found on the "S" in loving; 'tis a secret
Told to the mouth instead of to the ear.
—Edmond Rostand, Cyrano de Bergerac, Act II.

II—Kiss: Apophthegms

I wonder who's kissing her now?
FRANK R. ADAMS AND WILL M. HOUZE, Title and refrain of a lyric set to music by Joseph
E. Howard in 1912.

Isn't it strange how one man's kiss can grow
To be like any other's . . . or a woman's
To be like any woman's?
—MAXWELL ANDERSON, Elizabeth the Queen Act I.

Kiss till the cows come home
—*BRAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady.
Act II, sc. 2.*

A peroxysmal kiss.

kiss he had given Mrs. Henry C. Bowen. It gained wide currency in the '70's. (Talks vs. Beecher, Vol. I, p. 66.)

A Kiss of the mouth often touches not the heart.
—H. G. BOLIN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 292.

There's nothing wrong in a connubial kiss.
—BROAD, Don Juan, Canto III, st. 2.

Many a miss would not be a miss
If liquor did not add a spark to her kisses.
—K. L. C., Libretto, (Life, March, 1933.)

Kissing goes by favour.
—*WILLIAM CANNON, Kismet, p. 327, (1605);
FRANCIS QUARLES, The Virgin Widow, Act I.
(1649) A proverb of great antiquity.*

Kiss they bowed the Sphinx's visage,
Favoured him, governed him,
Even as it does in this age.
—HERBERT KATZING, General Summary.

Steal the kiss that's stolen from weeping maid. (Principles of the good society.)
—*CLAYTON, De Noctis, Epithet Augusti, l. 81.
I do not care for kisses, unless I have snatched them in some of my waking. (Such does make, this one, looking, myself.)*

My love, I have not seen you for a long time.
—LOUIS BROWN, The Kiss.

A good kiss is never forgotten by a woman.
—CHARLES HENNING, The Kiss.

The kiss, snatch'd hasty from the bidding maid.
—*THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 625.
See also: Thomson, The Seasons.*

Kisses honeyed by oblivion.
—GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy, Bk. III.

She had rather kiss than spin.
—THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 4123.

The kiss you take is paid by that you give:
The joy is mutual, and I'm still in debt.
—GEORGE GRANVILLE, Heroic Love, Act V, sc. 1.

And if you'll blow to me a kiss,
I'll blow a kiss to you
—HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, The Baby's Debut.

No man can print a kiss; lines may deceive.
—FREDERICK GREVILLE, Another to Myra.

"May I print a kiss on your lips?" I said,
And she nodded her full permission;
So we went to press and I rather guess
We printed a full edition
—JOSEPH LILLIENTHAL, A Full Edition.

The sound of a kiss is not so loud as that of a cannon, but its echo lasts a great deal longer.

To kiss with the maid when the mistress is kind

A gentleman ought to be loth, sir
—WILLIAM BONA, Every-Day Book, II, 377.

'Tis no sin love's fruit to steal,
But the sweet thief to reveal.
—BEN JONSON, Song: To Celis.

And if he needs must kiss and tell,
I'll kick him headlong into hell.

reunion use thereafter.*

Let's see you kiss and be friends.
—SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, II, 73.

Cupid and my Campepe played
At cards for kisses; Cupid paid.
—JOHN LYNN, Alexander and Campepe.

My love and I for kisses play'd
She would keep stakes; I was content;
But when I won, she would be paid.
This made me ask her what she meant,
Fey, then I see (quoth she) your wrongs

Take your own kisses; give me mine again.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, My Love and I for Kisses Play'd. (c. 1640) Dryden added three lines to this stanza, and it is included in his Miscellany. (1716)

✓ Sweet Helen, make me immortal with a kiss!
Her lips suck forth my soul: see, where it flies!

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Pamphus, l. 1330.

✓ It was thy kiss, Love, that made me immortal.
MARGARET FULLER, Dried Song.

✓ O love! O fire! once he drew
With one long kiss my whole soul thro'
My lips, as sunlight drinketh dew.
TENNYSON, Faithful St. J.

2 Why do I not kiss you, Philenis? You are bald, you are carottery, you are one-eyed. He who kisses you sins against nature.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. II, epig. 33.

3 Let my hand have the honour
To convey a kiss from my lips to the cover of Your foot, dear signior.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act IV, sc. 1.

4 When a man's hose be down, it is easy to kiss him where he sat on Saturday.

III—Kissing: Its Delights

Blush, happy maidens, when you feel

The lips which press love's glowing seal;

But as the slow years darklier roll,

Grown wiser, the experienced soul

Will own as dearer far than they

The lips which kiss the tears away.

ELIZABETH AKERS ALLEN, Kisses.

But is there nothing else,
That we may do but only walk? Methinks,
Brothers and sisters lawfully may kiss.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, A King and No King. Act iv, sc. 4.

Remember the Viper:—'twas close at your feet,

How you started and threw yourself into my arms;

Not a strawberry there was so ripe nor so sweet

As the lips which I kiss'd to subdue your alarms.

ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, Nancy. St. 4.

And when my lips meet thine,
Thy very soul is wedded unto mine.

H. H. BOYSSER, Thy Gracious Face I Greet with Glad Surprise.

A winning kiss she gave,
A long one, with a free and yielding lip.

WILLIAM BROWNE, Brunonia's Pastorals. Bk. III, song 2, l. 193.

I was betrothed that day;
I gave a troth-kiss on my lips I could not give away.

E. B. BROWNE, Lay of the Brown Rosary. Pt. II, l. 164.

First time he kissed me, he but only kissed
The fingers of this hand wherewith I write;

And ever since, it grew there clean and white,

The sacred ground is bright

The first kiss taught the forehead, and half mine.

First kiss on the cheek, O happy word!
The first kiss on the cheek, O happy word!
The first kiss on the cheek, O happy word!
The first kiss on the cheek, O happy word!

I have been proud and said, "My love, my own."
E. B. BROWNE, Sonnets from the Portuguese. No. xcivii.

The moth's kiss, first!

Kiss me as if you made believe

You were not sure, this eve,

How my face, your flower, had pined

Its petals up

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Gondola.

All the breath and the bloom of the year in the bag of one bee:

All the wonder and wealth of the mine in the heart of one gem:

In the core of one pearl all the shade and the shine of the sea:

Breath and bloom, shade and shine,—wonder,
wealth, and—how far above them—

Truth, that's brighter than gem,

Trust, that's purer than pearl—

Brightest truth, purest trust in the universe—all were for me

In the kiss of one girl.

ROBERT BROWNING, Summum Bonum.

Her lips, whose kisses pout to leave their nest,
Bid man be valiant ere he merit such

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto 1, st. 58.

Their lips drew near, and clung into a kiss;

A long, long kiss, a kiss of youth and love . . .

Each kiss a heart-quake,—for a kiss's strength,

I think, it must be reckon'd by its length.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto II, st. 185-6.

I love the sex, and sometimes would reverse

The tyrant's wish "that mankind only had
One neck, which he with one fell stroke might Pierce."

My wish is quite as wide, but not so bad, . . .
That womankind had but one rosy mouth,

To kiss them all at once from North to South.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 27.

"Kiss" rhymes to "bliss" in fact as well as verse
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 59.

How delicious is the winning

Of a kiss at Love's beginning.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Song.

When age chills the blood, when our pleasures are past—

For years fleet away with the wings of the dove—

The dearest remembrance will still be the last,

Our sweetest memorial the first kiss of love.

BYRON, The First Kiss of Love.

And in that first flame

Is all the nectar of the kiss.

(Et c'est dans la première flamme Qu'est tout le nectar du baiser.)

LEBAUX, Mes Souvenirs.

Kisses kept are wasted;

Love is to be tasted

There are some you love, I know;

Be not loath to tell them so.
Lips go dry and eyes grow wet
Waiting to be warmly met,
Keep them not in waiting yet;
Kisses kept are wasted.

BUMUDD VANCE COOKE, Kisses Kept Are Wasted.

Rose kissed me today,
Will she kiss me tomorrow?
Let it be as it may,
Rose kissed me today.

AUSTIN DOBSON, A Kiss.

Never a lip is curved with pain
That can't be kissed into smiles again.
BREX HARTZ, The Lost Galleon.

Give me a kiss and to that kiss a score;
Then to that twenty, add a hundred more;
A thousand to that hundred; so kiss on,
To make that thousand up a million;
Treble that million, and when that is done,
Let's kiss afresh, as when we first begun.

ROBERT HERRICK, To Anthea.

Jenny kissed me when we met,
Jumping from the chair she sat in;
Time, you thief, who love to get Sweets into your list, put that in!
Say I'm weary, say I'm sad,
Say that health and wealth have missed me:
Say I'm growing old, but add
Jenny kissed me.
LEIGH HUNT, Jenny Kissed Me. "Jenny" was Jane Welsh Carlyle.

Only he felt he could no more dissemble,
And kissed her, mouth to mouth, all in a tremble.
LEIGH HUNT, Story of Rimini.

You kissed me! My head drooped low on your
breast
With a feeling of shelter and infinite rest,
While the holy emotions my tongue dared not speak
Flashed up as a flame from my heart to my cheek.

JOSEPHINE SLOCUM HUNT, You Kissed Me.
I kissed you, I own, but I did not suppose
That you, through the papers, the deed would disclose,
Like free-loving cats, when on ridge-poles they meet,
And their squalls of "You kissed me!" disturb the whole street.
UNKNOWN, You Kissed me.

5
A soft lip,
Would tempt you to eternity of kissing!
BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act I, sc. 1.

Leave a kiss but in the cup,
And ~~let~~ not look for wine.

BEN JONSON, To Celia. See also under EYES
AND LOVE.

6
And our lips found ways of speaking

What words cannot say,
Till a hundred nests gave music,
And the East was gray.
FREDERIC LAWRENCE KNOWLES, A Memory.

7
When she kissed me once in play,
Rubies were less bright than they;
And less bright were those which shone
In the palace of the Sun.
Will they be as bright again?
Not if kiss'd by other men.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Rubies.

8
Says he, "I'd better call agin;"
Says she, "Think likely, mister!"
Thet last word pricked him like a pin,
An' . . . Wal, he up an' kiss her.
J. R. LOWELL, The Courtier.

9
The kiss, in which he half forgets even such a yoke as yours.

MACAULAY, Virginia, l. 138.

10
I rest content; I kiss your eyes,
I kiss your hair in my delight:
I kiss my hand and say "Good-night."

JOAQUIN MILLER, Idas of the Amazons: Pt. v, Introduction.

11
One kiss the maiden gives, one last,
Long kiss, which she expires in giving.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri, l. 200.

I kiss'd thee ere I kill'd thee; no way but this;
Killing myself, to die upon a kiss.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 358.

12
How should great Jove himself do else than miss

To win the woman he forgets to kiss,
COVENTRY PATMORE, De Natura Deorum.

The lips he must briskly invade
That would possess the heart.
THOMAS YALDEN, Song.

13
Give me kisses! Nay, 'tis true
I am just as rich as you;
And for every kiss I owe,
I can pay you back, you know.
Kiss me, then,

Every moment—and again!
J. G. SAKS, To Lesbia.

Do thou snatch treasures from my lips,
And I'll take kingdoms back from thine!
SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act iii, sc. 3.

14
Quickened with kissing: had my lips that power,
Thus would I wear them out.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 15, l. 39.

15
His kissing is as full of sanctity as the touch of holy bread.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act III, sc. 4,
l. 14.

Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge!
Nay, by the jealous queen of heaven, that him
I carried from thee, dear

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus Act v, sc. 2, l. 44.
Falsely Thou dost give me flattering kisses Dost thoust By my troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry IV, Act ii, sc. 4, l. 294

Take, O, take those lips away,
That so sweetly were forsworn;
And those eyes, the break of day,
Lights that do mislead the morn,
But my kisses bring again, bring again;
Seals of love, but seal'd in vain.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 1

Hide, O hide those hills of snow,
Which thy frozen bosom bears,
On whose tips the peaks that grow
Are of those that April wears!
But first set my poor heart free
Bound in icy chains by thee!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Bloody Brother Act v, sc. 2 This stanza, with the one above, attributed to Shakespeare, may have been a current song of anonymous authorship, or perhaps Shakespeare wrote the first stanza, and Fletcher appropriated it and added another

And then, ear, would he grasp and wring my hand,
Cry "O sweet creature!" and then kiss me hard,

As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots
That grew upon my lips

SHAKESPEARE, Othello Act iii, sc. 3, l. 421

Then come kiss me, sweet and twenty

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night Act ii, sc. 3, l. 52

Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 22

She kissed his brow, his cheek, his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act iv, sc. 4, l. 125.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act iv, sc. 4, l. 125.

As in the soft and sweet silence,
When soul meets soul on lover's lip.
SHAKESPEARE, Prometheus Unbound, Act iv, l. 450.

Her ambrosial kiss,
That sweeter far than any nectar is
SHAKESPEARE, An Hymn to Honour of Love, l. 25.

I ne'er saw nectar on a lip,
But where my own did hope to sip
SHAKESPEARE, The Duchess, Act i, sc. 2.

My lips till then had only known
The kiss of mother and of sister,
But somehow, full upon her own
Sweet, rosy, darling mouth,—I kissed her
E. C. SHEDDEN, The Door-Step

We vulgar take it to be a sign of love
Servants, we poor people, that have nothing but our persons to bestow or treat for, are forced to deal and bargain by way of sample, and therefore as we have no parchments, or wax necessary in our agreements, we squeeze with our hands and seal with our lips, to ratify vows and promises

Plato, (Cicero, De Officiis). Bk. I, ch. 19, sec. 63.)

It is one thing to remember, another to know. Remembering is merely safeguarding knowledge entrusted to the memory; knowing means making everything your own. (Sed memorem est memorizare, aliud scire. Memorare est rem commissam memorie custodire. At contra, scire est et sua facere.)

SENeca, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epist. xxxiii, 8. Nature has given us the seeds of knowledge, but not knowledge itself. (Natura . . . semina nobis scientie dedit, scientiam non dedit.)

SENeca, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epist. cxx, sec. 4.

The desire of knowledge, like the thirst of riches, increases ever with the acquisition of it.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Vol. II, ch. 3.

Let knowledge grow from more to more,
But more of reverence in us dwell,
That mind and soul, according well,
May make one music as before.

III—Knowledge: Its Value

Knowledge is, indeed, that which, next to virtue, truly and essentially raises one man above another.

ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 111.

There is no power on earth which setteth up a throne, or chair of state, in the spirits and souls of men, and in their cogitations, imaginations, opinions, and beliefs, but knowledge and learning.

BACON, Advancement of Learning Bk. i.

The knowledge of man is as the waters, some descending from above, and some springing up from beneath; the one informed by the light of nature, the other inspired by divine revelation.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

The sovereignty of man lieth hid in knowledge; wherein many things are reserved that kings with their treasure cannot buy, nor with their force command.

BACON, Cogitationes de Scientia Humana

It is no less true in this human kingdom of knowledge, than in God's kingdom of heaven, that no man shall enter into it, "except he become first as a little child."

BACON, Of the Interpretation of Nature. Ch. 1.

There is no knowledge which is not valuable.

EDMUND BURKE, American Taxation.

Knowledge is a comfortable and necessary retreat and shelter for us in an advanced age; and if we do not plant it while young, it will give us no shade when we grow old.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 11 Dec., 1747.

One of the most agreeable consequences of knowledge is the respect and importance which it communicates to old age.

SYDNEY SMITH, Female Education.

Let the fools talk, knowledge has its value. (Laissez dire les sots, le savoir a son prix.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 19.

Let fools the studious despise, There's nothing lost by being wise.

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 19.

Deeper, deeper let us toil
In the mines of knowledge.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Aspirations of Youth.

A learned man has always riches in himself. (Homo doctus in se semper divitias habet.)

PLAUTUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 21.

Knowledge of itself is riches.

SAU, Gulliver. Ch. 7, tale 2. Of the Effects of Education.

O what a brave thing it is, in every case and circumstance of a matter, to be thoroughly well informed!

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iii, ch. 7.

For the more a man knows, the more worthy he is.

ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, Rhyming Chronicle of the History of England. (1270)

Crowns have their compass—length of days their date—

Triumphs their tomb—felicity, her fate—
Of nought but earth can earth make us partaker,
But knowledge makes a king most like his Maker.

SHAKESPEARE, Epigram on King James I.
(PAYNE COLLIER, Life of Shakespeare.)

Sweet food of sweetly uttered knowledge.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Defence of Poetry.

A life of knowledge is not often a life of injury and crime.

SYDNEY SMITH, Pleasures of Knowledge.

A man who dedicates his life to knowledge becomes habituated to pleasure which carries with it no reproach.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy.
Lecture 19.

He who binds
His soul to knowledge, steals the key of heaven.

N. P. WILLIS, The Scholar of Thibet Ben Khorat. Pt. ii, l. 6 fr. end.

Oh, be wiser, Thou!
Instructed that true knowledge leads to love.
WORDSWORTH, Lines Left upon a seat in a Yew-tree. l. 59.

IV—Knowledge and Power

For knowledge, too, is itself a power. (Nata et ipsa scientia potestas est.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Hæresibus.

Knowledge and human power are synonymous, since the ignorance of the cause frustrates the effect.

BACON, Novum Organum: Summary. Pt. I, aph. 3.

If materialistic knowledge is power, it is not wisdom. It is but a blind force.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 196.

There is no knowledge that is not power.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

Knowledge is power.

THOMAS HORRER, Leviathan. Ch. 9.

They say that "Knowledge is power." I used to think so.

BYRON, Letter to Frothero.

Knowledge is more than equivalent to force.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 13.

Simple as it seems, it was a great discovery that the key of knowledge could turn both wisdom, that it could, again, as well as lack, the lack of power to the many.

J. R. LUTWELL, Among My Books: New England Two Centuries Ago.

Every addition to true knowledge is an addition to human power.

HORACE MANN, Lectures on Education No. 1.

A wise man is strong; yea, a man of knowledge increaseth strength.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiv, 5.

V—Knowledge and Wisdom

There is no great concurrence between learning and wisdom

FRANCIS BACON, *Advancement of Learning:
Civil Knowledge*, Sec. 4.

Knowledge and Wisdom, far from being one,
Have oftentimes no connexion Knowledge dwells
In heads replete with thoughts of other men;
Wisdom in minds attentive to their own.
Knowledge, a rude unprofitable mass,
The mere materials with which Wisdom builds; . . .

Knowledge is proud that he has learn'd so much;
Wisdom is humble that he knows no more.

COWLEY, The Task, Bk. vi, l. 88.

The greatest clerks be not the wisest men.

CHURCH, The Rival Tale, l. 4051.

I counsel all creatures no clerk to despise.

LEIGHAM, Peter Plowman, Passus xv, l. 64.

I've studied now Philosophy
And Jurisprudence, Medicine
And even, alas, Theology
From end to end with labor keen;
And here, poor fool, with all my lore
I stand no wiser than before.

GÖTTER, Faust: Night, (Bayard Taylor, tr.)

It is the province of knowledge to speak, and it is the privilege of wisdom to listen.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Poet at the Breakfast-

Deign on the passing world to turn thine eyes,
And pause awhile from letters, to be wise.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, *The Vanity of Human
Wishes*, l. 155.

Knowledge is as food, and needs no less
Her temperance over appetite, to know
In measure what the mind may well contain,
Oppresses else with surfeit, and soon turns
Wisdom to folly, as nourishment to wind.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. viii, l. 126.

Who knowest more, dost not the world grow
Thus foolishly, Allegory, l. 174.

Knowledge, when wisdom is the goal, is the end of the journey, and the journey is the process of learning.

As like a headstrong horse, that throws the rider.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Miscellaneous, Sonnet 11 attributed to Robert Robinson, Vicar of Harlow, (c. 1580) See Notes and Queries, 25,
June, 1910.

No man is the wiser for his learning.

JOHN SEIDEN, Table-Talk, W.H.

Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers
THOMSON, Locksley Hall, l. 141.

But you are learn'd; in volumes, deep you sit;
In wisdom, shallow. Pompous ignorance!
YOUNG, Night Thoughts, Night v, l. 735.

VI—Knowledge: Its Limitations

Our knowledge, compared with Thine, is ignorance. (Scientia nostra, scientia tua comparata, ignorantia est.)

St AUGUSTINE, Confessions Bk. xi, sec. 4.
Before God we are all equally wise—equally foolish.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Cosmic Religion, p. 105.

There's lots of people—this town wouldn't hold them—

Who don't know much excepting what's told them.

WILL CARLETON, City Ballads, p. 143.

All I know is what I read in the papers.

WILL ROGERS

And yet, alas! when all our lamps are burned,
Our bodies wasted, and our spirits spent,
When we have all the learned volumes turned,
Which yield men's wits both help and amusement,

What can we know or what can we discern?

St. JOHN DAVIES, Noise Perpetrator: Introduction, Sec. 1, st. 14.

We know accurately only when we know little; with knowledge doubt increases. (Eigenlich weiss man nur wenn man wenig weiss;
mit dem Wissen wächst der Zweifel.)
GÖTTER, Sprüche in Prosa.

Knowledge is folly except grace guide it.

GEORGE HARRIS, Jacobi Prudentium.

This world, where much is to be done and little to be known

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Essays and Meditations,

Now learn too late
How few sometimes may know, when thou sands say.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. vi, l. 146.

Do they not show by too much knowledge that they know nothing? (Faciente intelli-gendo ut nihil intelligent?)

FRANCIS QUARLES, Prologus, l. 12.

Too much to know is to know nought but time.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, Act I,
sc. 1, l. 92.

1 The more we study, we the more discover our ignorance.

LAGARTUS, Pyrrho Sec. 12.)

We know nothing rightly, for want of perspective.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

We don't know one millionth of one per cent
about anything.

THOMAS A. EDISON. (Golden Book, April, 1931.)

We can do interesting mechanical things . . .
but we know nothing important. In the essentials we are still as wholly a mystery to ourselves as Adam was to himself.

3 Still we say as we go,—

"Strange to think by the way

Whatever there is to know,

That shall we know one day"

D. G. ROSSSETTI, The Cloud Confines.

VII—Knowledge: Its Futility

4 What is all our knowledge? We do not even know what weather it will be tomorrow.

BERTHOLD AUBRAGE, On the Heights.

5 The desire of power in excess caused the angels to fall, the desire of knowledge in excess caused man to fall.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Goodness.

6 Men are called fools in one age for not knowing what they were called fools for averting in the age before.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

7 They who know the most
Must mourn the deepest o'er the fatal truth,
The Tree of Knowledge is not that of life.

BYRON, Manfred Act I, sc. 1.

8 Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth.
New Testament: I. Corinthians, viii, 1.

Knowledge bloweth up, but charity buildeth up.
BACON, Rendering of I. Corinthians, viii, 1.

9 He that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, I, 28.

10 Metaphysica may be, after all, only the art of being sure of something that is not so, and logic only the art of going wrong with confidence.

11 He who knows has many cares. (Wer viel weiss hat viel zu sorgen.)

LESSING, Nathan der Weise, Act IV, sc. 2.

12 Our knowledge is a torch of smoky pine
That lights the pathway but one step ahead
Across a void of mystery and dread.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, O World

13 We know what we are, but know not what we may be.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act IV, sc. 5, l. 42.

14 When a man's knowledge is not in order, the more of it he has the greater will be his confusion.

HERBERT SPENCER, The Study of Sociology.
Ch. 15.

15 There are many things, the knowledge of which is of little or no profit to the soul.

THOMAS A. KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi.
Ch. 2.

VIII—Knowledge and Ignorance

16 A seeming ignorance is often a most necessary part of worldly knowledge.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan, 1753.

17 Ignorance seldom vaults into knowledge, but passes into it through an intermediate state of obscurity, even as night into day through twilight.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Essays. No. 16.

18 True knowledge is modest and wary; 'tis ignorance that is bold and presuming.

JOSEPH GLANVILLE, Scepas Scientifica.

19 But Knowledge to their eyes her ample page,
Rich with the spoils of time, did ne'er unroll.

THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard*. St. 13.

20 Better be ignorant of a matter than half know it.

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 865.

He that knows little often repeats it.

THOMAS FULLER, Grææologia. No. 2309.

Not well understood, as good not known.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. I, l. 437.

I wish I had not known so much of this affair, added my Uncle Toby, or that I had known more of it.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. vi, ch. 7.

21 It is better, of course, to know useless things than to know nothing. (Salus est supervacua scire quæ nihil.)

SENECA, Epistolæ ad Lucillum. Epist. 84, sec. 45.

Ignorance is the curse of God,
Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to
heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 78

There is only one good, that is knowledge,
there is only one evil, that is ignorance.
(Μόνο ἀγαθόν ἔστιν, καὶ τὸ ἐναντίον, καὶ τὸ κακόν πάντες, τὸ ἀπαιεῖται.)

SOCRATES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates
Sec. 14)

It is necessary to fathom one's ignorance on one subject to discover how little one knows on other subjects

J. A. SPENDER, The Comments of Bagshot
Ch. 11.

Knowledge is sympathy, charity, kindness,
Ignorance only is maker of hell.

WILLIAM WATSON, England to Ireland.

IX—Knowledge: Knowing One's Knowledge

See also Ignorance of Ignorance

There are four sorts of men:

He who knows not and knows not he knows not: he is a fool—shun him;

He who knows not and knows he knows not:
he is simple—teach him;

He who knows and knows not he knows: he is asleep—wake him;

He who knows and knows he knows: he is wise—follow him.

LARRY BURTON, Life of Sir Richard Burton
Quoted as an Arabian proverb (See Spectator, 11 Aug., 1894, p. 176.) Sometimes attributed to Darius the Persian

We think so because other people all think so;
Or because—or because—after all, we do think so;

Or because we were told so, and think we must think so;

Or because we once thought so, and think we still
think so;

Or because, having thought so, we think we will think so.

HENRY SUDGWICK, Lines Composed in His Sleep. (WILLIAM OSLER, Harvardian Oration, in South Place Magazine, Feb., 1907.)

Sæpe ego audiui, milites, eum primum esse virum, qui ipse consulat quid in rem sit; secundum enim, qui bene neonati obediunt; qui nec ipse consulere nec alteri parere sciat, eum extremi ingratum esse.

PLATO, Apologia of Socrates. Sec. 21.

The only thing that we never know is to ignore what we cannot know. (La seule chose que nous ne savons point, est d'ignorer ce que nous ne pouvons savoir.)

ROUSSEAU, Emile Bk. iv.

As for me, all I know is that I know nothing.
(Συνίδεν ὅταν εἴῃ ἀσύνετος.)

SOCRATES (PLATO, Phædrus Sec. 235.)

I know nothing except the fact of my ignorance.
(Εἰδέναι μὲν μὴδὲν ἄλλῃ ἀπὸ τοῦτο [εἰδέναι].)

SOCRATES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Bk. ii, sec. 32)

Well didst thou speak, Athena's wisest son!
"All that we know is, nothing can be known."

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk IV, l. 184.

17. Six hours are most suitable for labor, and the four that follow, when set forth in letters, say to men, "Live!" (ZIHAI)

UNKNOWN (Greek Anthology Bk x, epig. 43.)
The letters of the Greek alphabet were used as figures, and ZHAI, meaning "live," is 7, 8, 9, 10.

Six hours are enough for work; the others say to men, "Live!"

LUCIAN, Sententiae. No. 17.

III—Labor: Labor Lost

18. I have bestowed upon you labour in vain.
New Testament: Galatians, iv, 11.

19. I have lost my oil and my labor (Oleum et operam peridi.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudulus, I, 332. (Act I, sc. 2.)

I have altogether lost my time and my labour.
(Je tout perdu mon temps et mon labor.)

CHAUCER, The Parson's Tale. Sec. 11. (Quoted as the title of a new French song)

20. They have nought but their toil for their heat, their pains for their sweat, and (to bring it to our English proverb) their labour for their travail.

THOMAS NARE, To the Gentlemen Students of Both Universities Introductory to Robert Greene's Wenlock. (1568)

21. They can expect nothing but their labor for their pains.

CANTABRIGIA, Our Quinter: Prologue. (1606)

I have had my labour for my travail; . . . small thanks for my labour.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth and Cressida: Act i, sc. 1, l. 20 (1609)

And all that I by that should gain
Would be my labour for my pain,
CHARLES COTTON, Burlesque upon Burlesque,
186. (1675)

His labour for his pains.
EDWARD MOORE, Boy and the Rainbow. (1744)

I'm glad the villain got nothing but his labour for his pains.

Whence all his labor was wasted. (Ibi omnis Effusus labor.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 491.

IV—Labor: To Labor is to Pray

To labor is to pray. (Laborare est orare.)

The ancient motto of the Benedictine monks.

A variation of this, "Qui laborat, orat,"
"Who labors, prays," is attributed to St.
Augustine.

Who prays and works lifts up to God his heart with his hands (Qui orat et laborat, cor levat ad Deum cum manibus)

ST BERNARD, Works, Vol. ii, p. 866. A version of Lamentations, iii, 41: "Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens."

Even in the meanest sorts of Labour, the whole soul of a man is composed into a kind of real harmony the instant he sets himself to work

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Ch. 15.

What worship, for example, is there not in mere washing!

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Ch. 15 Referring to "Work is prayer."

God walks among the pots and pipkins.

SAINT TERESA. See APPENDIX.

Lo! all life this truth declares,
Laborare est orare;
And the whole earth rings with prayers.

DENHAM M. M. CRAIK, Labour is Prayer.

Labour as long lived: pray as ever dying.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jocunde Prudentium.

To labor rightly and earnestly is to walk in the golden track that leads to God.

J. G. HOLMAN, Plain Talks: Work and Play.

For he that is true of his tongue, and of his two hands,

And doth his work therewith, and willet no man ill,

He is a god by the gospel.

WILLIAM LAWRENCE, Plain Pleasures. Psalm ii,
l. 82.

Work as though work alone thine end could grieve;
But pray to God as though all work were vain.

D'ANCY W. THORNTON, Saints Attack.

Great thoughts hallow any labor. . . . If the ditcher muse the while how he may live up-rightly, the ditching spade and turt knife may be engraved on the coat-of-arms of his posterity.

H. D. THORNTON, Journal, 20 April, 1841.

Ah, little rocks the laborer,
How near his work is holding him to God,
The loving Laborer through space and time.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Exposition, l. 1.

And yet without labour there were no ease,
no rest, so much as conceivable.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Essays: Characteristics.

Labour, wide as the earth, has its summit in heaven.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Essays: Work.

The habit of toil renders the endurance of pain easier. . . . Toil of itself brings a certain callousness to pain. (Consuetudo enim laborum perpressionem dolorum efficit faciliorum. . . . Ipse labor callum quoddam ob-

ch. 15, sec. 36.

The labour we delight in physics pain.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 53.

The sleep of a labouring man is sweet.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, v, 12.

From toil he wins his spirits light,
From busy day the peaceful night.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode on the Pleasures Arising from Vicissitude, l. 87.

Tolling—rejoicing—sorrowing,
Onward through life he goes;

Each morning sees some task begin,

Each evening sees it close,

Something attempted, something done,
Has earned a night's repose.

LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith.

A little labour, much health.

From labor there shall come forth rest.

LONGFELLOW, To a Child, l 162

The labor itself is a delight (Juvat ipso labor.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 107.

3 Labor is life! 'Tis the still water faileth;
Idleness ever despaireth, bewaileth;
Keep the watch wound, for the dark rust assaileth.

FRANCIS S. OSGOOD, To Labor Is to Pray.

Labor is rest—from the sorrows that greet us;
Rest from all petty vexations that meet us,
Rest from sin-promptings that ever entreat us,

Rest from world-sens that lure us to ill
Work—and pure slumbers shall wait on thy pillow;

Work—then shall ride over Care's coming billow;
Lie not down worried 'neath Wee's weeping willow!

Work with a stout heart and resolute will!

FRANCIS S. OSGOOD, To Labor Is to Pray.

4 The man who by his labour gets
His bread, in independent state,
Who never begs, and seldom eats,
Himself can fix or change his fate.

MATTHEW PRIOR, The Old Century.

His brow is wet with honest sweat,
He earns what'er he can,
And looks the while world in the face,
For he owes not any man.

LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith.

5 No man needs sympathy because he has to work. . . . Far and away the best prize that life offers is the chance to work hard at work worth doing.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Address, Syracuse, Labor Day, 1903.

6 The happiness of men consists in life. And life is to labor.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter, to a member of the National Assembly, 1791.

11 What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun?

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, i, 3.

All things are full of labour; man cannot utter it: the eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, i, 8.

12 Labour itself is but a sorrowful song,
The protest of the weak against the strong.

F. W. FABER, The Sorrowful World.

13 The path that leads to a loaf of bread
Winds through the swamps of toil,

And the path that leads to a suit of clothes

Goes through a flowerless soil,

And the paths that lead to the loaf of bread
And the suit of clothes are hard to tread.

VII—Labor: The Laborer

11 The rights and interests of the laboring man will be protected and cared for—not by labor agitators, but by the Christian men to whom God in His infinite wisdom has given the control of the property interests of the country.

GEORGE F. BAER, President, Philadelphia and Reading Railway, Letter to W. F. Clark, 17 July, 1902.

The doctrine of the divine right of kings was bad enough, but not so intolerable as the doctrine of the divine right of plutocrats.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night Act I, sc. 3, l. 27

CASSIUS Did Cæsar say anything?
CASSIUS Ay, he spoke Greek.
CASSIUS To what effect?
CASSIUS Nay, an I tell you that I'll ne'er look you i' the face again: but those that understood him smiled at one another and shook their heads, but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar Act I, sc. 2, l. 281.
Hum, I think this is heathen Greek, I'm sure 'tis so to me

AFERRA BERN, The False Count Act iv, sc. 1
All this to the husbandman was heathen Greek
CERVANTES, Don Quixote Pt. ii, ch. 39.

It is Greek, it cannot be read. (Græcū est, non potest legi)

FRANCIS ACCURRIUS There is a fable that a scholar of Queen's College, Oxon, strolling in Bagley Wood some centuries ago, encountered a wild boar, which attacked him. The student thrust the volume of Aristotle he was reading into the boar's jaws, crying out, "Græcū est," and so choked the brute. In commemoration of this exploit, a boar's head is still served every Christmas at the college.

WILLIAM BROWNE, Britannia's Pastorals Bk. ii, song 2, l. 303 Referring to Samuel Daniel.

I trade both with the living and the dead for the enrichment of our native language.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It Act iii, sc. 2

Walter de la Beche to the great metropolitan English speech, the sea which revolves tributaries from every region under heaven. I should as soon think of swimming across Charles River when I wish to go to Boston, as of reading all my books in originals, when I have them rendered for me in my mother tongue.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Books.

There is no more welcome gift to men than a new symbol. . . . Greek mythology called the sea "the tear of Saturn." The return of the soul to God was described as "a flask of water broken into the sea." St. John gave us the Christian figure of "souls washed in the blood of Christ." The aged Michel Angelo indicates his perpetual study as in boyhood,—"I carry my satchel still." Machiavel described the papacy as "a stone inserted in the body of Italy to keep the wound open." To the Parliament debating how to tax America, Burke exclaimed, "Shear the wolf." Our Kentuckian orator said of his dissent from his companion, "I showed him the back of my hand."

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

1 Let foreign nations of their language boast,
What fine variety each tongue affords;
I like our language, as our men and coast;
Who cannot dress it well, want wit, not words.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Sun.

2 The American language differs from English in that it seeks the top of expression while English seeks its lowly valleys.

SALVADOR DE MADARIAGA, Americans Are Boys.

3 Thou whoreson Zed! thou unnecessary letter!
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 69.

4 Dan Chaucer, well of English undefiled.
SPENCER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto ii, st. 32.
From purest wells of English undefiled
None deeper drank than he, the New World's Child.

WHITTIER, James Russell Lowell.

5 Oh, but the heavenly grammar did I hold
Of that high speech which angels' tongues turn
gold!

Or if that language yet with us abode
Which Adam in the garden talked with God!
But our untampered speech descends—poor heirs!

Grimy and rough-cast still from Babel's bricklayers:

Curse on the brutish jargon we inherit,
Strong but to damn, not memorize, a spirit!

FRANCIS THORNTON, Her Portrait.

6 English as She is Spoken.

ANDREW WHITE TUCKER. Title of a reprint (1844) of the English part of a book first issued in 1833 at Paris, entitled Ouvrage de l'enseignement des Portugais & Angles (A

Glance to English Conversation for the Use of Portuguese Students). "English as she is spoken" does not figure in the original, but the specimens of English given there were so grotesque as to suggest the title to the English publisher, Mr. Tuck.

Under the tropic is our language spoken.

LARK

I—Lark: Apothegms

7 A skylark wounded on the wing
Doth make a cherub cease to sing.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Aurora of Innocence.

8 To rise with the lark, and go to bed with the lamb.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Court and Country, p. 183.

Rise with the lark, and with the lark to bed.
JAMES HURDIS, The Village Curdie.

Go to bed with the Lamb, and rise with the Lark.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 229.

Near all the birds
Will sing at dawn—and yet we do not take
The chaffering swallow for the holy lark.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 951.

10 The busy lark, the messenger of day.
CHAUCER, The Knights Tale, l. 1493.

It was the lark, the herald of the morn.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc.
5, l. 6.

Up springs the lark,
Shrill-voic'd, and loud, the messenger of morn.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 560.

11 When the sky falleth we shall have Larks.

JOHN HENWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4.

By robbing Peter he paid Paul . . . and hoped to catch larks if ever the heavens should fall.
(Si les nues tomboyent esperoyt prendre les alouettes tons rustiques.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 11.

12 He thinks that roasted larks will fall into his mouth.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 3 Of a sluggard.

13 The sunrise wakes the lark to sing.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Bird Raptures.

14 Hark, hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phoebus 'gins arise.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 21.

How at heaven's gates she claps her wings,
The morn not waking till the sings.

JOHN LYLY, Alexander and Campaspe. Act v,
sc. 1.

15 Merry larks are ploughmen's clocks.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 214.

They say that goes not true; I took this lark for a landing.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, II, 5, 5.

It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords and unpleasing
sharps.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, Act III, 5, 27.

Larikie, Larikie lee!
Wha'll gang up the heaven wi' me?
No the lout that lies in his bed,
No the doolfu' that droops his head.

UNKNOWN, The Lark's Song.

II—Lark: Its Loveliness

The music soars within the little lark,
And the lark soars.

E. B. BOWMAN, Aurora Leigh, Bk. III, l. 155.

Who loves not music, still may pause to hark
Nature's free gladness hymning in the lark
BUTLER-LYTTON, The New Timon, Pt. III, canto II, l. 13.

Oh, stay, sweet warbling woodlark, stay,
Nor quit for me the trembling spray!
A hapless lover courts thy lay,
Thy soothing, fond complaining.

BURNS, Address to the Woodlark.

'Tis sweet to hear the merry lark,
That bids a blithe good-morrow.
HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Song.

The merry lark he soars on high,
No worldly thought o'ertakes him.
He sings aloud to the clear blue sky,
And the daylight that awakes him.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Song.

But the Lark is so brimful of gladness and
love,
The green fields below him, the blue sky
above,

That he sings, and he sings, and for ever sings
he—

"I love my Love, and my Love loves me!"
S. T. COLERIDGE, Answer to a Child's Question.

And so, his senses gradually wrapt
In a half sleep, he dreams of better worlds,
And dreaming, hears thee still, O singing lark,
That singest like an angel in the clouds.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Fears in Solitude, l. 25.

I said to the sky-poised Lark:

"Hark—hark!

Thy note is more loud and free

Because there fits safe for thee

A little nest on the ground."

DORRIS M. M. CRACK, A Rhyme About Birds.

The lark now leaves his solitary nest,
And climbing, shakes his dewy wings.

Sir WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Morning Song.

The pretty Lark, climbing the welkin clear,
Chants with a cheer, Heer peer, I near my Dear;

Then stooping thence (seeming her fall to rue)

Adieu, she saith, adieu, dear Dear, adieu.
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes,
Week I, day 5. (Sylvester, tr.)

Over the cloudlet dim,
Over the rainbow's rim,
Musical cherub, soar, singing, away!
Then, when the gloaming comes,
Low in the heather blooms
Sweet will thy welcome and bed of love be!
Emblem of happiness,
Blest is thy dwelling-place—
O, to abide in the desert with thee!

JAMES HOGG, The Skylark.

The shrill sweet lark.

THOMAS HOOD, Plea of the Midsummer Fairies.

For singing till his heaven fills,
His love of earth that he instils.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Lark Ascending.

To hear the lark begin his flight,
And singing, startle the dull night,
From his watch-tower in the skies,
Till the dappled Dawn doth rise;
Then to come, in spite of sorrow,
And at my window bid good morrow.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 41.

And now the herald lark
Left his ground-nest, high tow'ring to descry
The morn's approach, and greet her with his song

MILTON, Paradise Regained, Bk. II, l. 279.

No more the mounting larks, while Daphne
sings,
Shall list'ning, in mid-air suspend their wings.
POPE, Pastorals: Winter, l. 53.

Oh, far, far, far,
As any spire or star,
Beyond the cloistered wall!
Oh, high, high, high,
A heart-throb in the sky—
Then not at all!

LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, The Lark.

The lark whose notes do beat
The vaulty heaven, so high above our heads.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, Act III, sc. 5,
l. 21.

Lo, here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 363.

The lark, that trim-lyra chants.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act IV, sc. 3, l. 9

- 1 Hail to thee, blithe Spirit!—
Bird thou never wert!—
That from Heaven, or near it,
Pourest thy full heart
In profuse strains of unpremeditated art.
SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 1.
- All the earth and air
With thy voice is loud,
As, when Night is bare,
From one lonely cloud,
The moon rains out her beams, and Heaven is overflowed.
SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 6.
- Like a glow-worm golden
In a dell of dew,
Scattering unobtrusively
Its aerial hue
Among the flowers and grass which screen it from the view.
SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 10.
- Teach us, Sprite or Bird,
What sweet thoughts are thine;
I have never heard
Praise of love or wine
That panted forth a flood of rapture so divine.
SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 13.
- Better than all measures
Of delightful sound—
Better than all treasures
That in books are found,
Thy skill to poet were, thou scorner of the ground!
SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 20.
- Teach me half the gladness
That thy brain must know,
Such harmonious madness
From my lips would flow,
The world should listen then—as I am listening now.
SHELLEY, To a Skylark. St. 21.
- 2 Now rings the woodland loud and long,
The distance takes a lovelier hue,
And drown'd in yonder living blue
The lark becomes a sightless song.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cxv.
- 3 How the blithe Lark runs up the golden stair
That leans through cloudy gates from Heaven to Earth.
FREDERICK TENNYSON, The Skylark.
- 4 Not loftiest bard of mightiest mind
Shall ever chant a note so pure,
Till he can cast the earth behind,
And breathe in heaven secure.
WILLIAM WATSON, The First Skylark of Spring.
- 5 But He is risen, a later star of dawn,
Glittering and twinkling near yon rosy cloud;
Bright gem instinct with music, vocal spark;
The happiest bird that sprang out of the Ark!
WORDSWORTH, A Morning Exercise, l. 27.

Ethereal minstrel! pilgrim of the sky!
Dost thou despise the earth where cares abound?
Or, while the wings aspire, are heart and eye
Both with thy nest upon the dewy ground?
Thy nest which thou canst drop into at will,
Those quivering wings composed, that music
still!

WORDSWORTH, To a Skylark.

Leave to the nightingale her shady wood;
A privacy of glorious light is thine:
Whence thou dost pour upon the world a flood
Of harmony, with instinct more divine:
Type of the wise who soar, but never roam;
True to the kindred points of Heaven and Home!

WORDSWORTH, To a Skylark.

The bird that soars on highest wing,
Builds on the ground her lowly nest;
And she that doth most sweetly sing,
Sings in the shade when all things rest:
—In lark and nightingale we see
What honour bath humility.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Humility.

The lark, that shuns on lofty boughs to build
Her humble nest, lies silent in the field.
EDMUND WALLER, Of the Queen.

II—Laughter: Its Virtue

10 When the green woods laugh with the voice of joy,
And the dappled stream runs laughing by;

When the air does laugh with our merry wit,
And the green hill laughs with the noise of it.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Laughing Song.

11 And yet methinks the older that one grows
Inclines us more to laugh than acid, though
laughter

Leaves us so doubly serious shortly after.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 79.

12 The man who cannot laugh is not only fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils, but his whole life is already a treason and a strata-gem.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 4.

13 The most completely lost of all days is that on which one has not laughed. (La plus perdue de toutes les journées est celle où l'on n'a pas ri.)

CHAMFORT, Maximes.

14 'Tis a good thing to laugh at any rate; and if a straw can tickle a man, it is an instrument of happiness.

JOHN DRYDEN, Essays. Vol. ii, p. 133.

15 I am the laughter of the new-born child
On whose soft-breathing sleep an angel smiled.

R. W. GILDER, Ode.

Very sound of very light,
Heard from moraine's roarest height,
When the soul of all delight,
Fills a child's clear laughter.

SWINBURNE, A Child's Laughter.

16 I can't say whether we had more wit amongst us than usual, but I am certain we had more laughing, which answered the end as well.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 32.

17 I'd rather laugh, a bright-haired boy,
Than reign, a gray-beard king.

O. W. HOLMES, The Old Man Dreams.

You hear that boy laughing?—You think he's all fun;

But the angels laugh, too, at the good he has done;

The children laugh loud as they troop to his call;

And the poor man that knows him laughs loudest of all!

O. W. HOLMES, The Boys.

18 Without love and laughter there is no joy;
live amid love and laughter. (Sine amore jocisque Nil est jucundum; vivas in amore jocisque.)

HORACE, Epistulae. Bk. i, ep. A. l. 63.

Laugh, if you are wise (Ride, si sapi.)

PLUTARCH, Epigrams. Bk. II, epig. 41.

One inch of joy surmounts of grief a span,
Because to laugh is proper to the man.

RABELAIS, Works: To the Reader.

To be born with the gift of laughter and a sense that the world is mad.

A good laugh is sunshine in a house.

THACKERAY, Sketches: Love, Marriage.

Earnest, sombre-browed, we follow after
You, who fly a-mocking from the ruck;
O we have a desperate need of laughter!
Give us laughter, Puck!

BEATRICE LLEWELLYN THOMAS, To Puck.

III.—Laughter: Its Folly

Nothing is more silly than a silly laugh. (Nam risu inepto res ineptior nullast.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode 39, l. 16.

And the loud laugh that spoke the vacant mind.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 122.

The Horse-Laugh is a distinguishing characteristic of the rural boyden.

RICHARD STEELE, The Guardian, No. 29.

The landlord's laugh was ready chorus.

BURNS, Tam o' Shanter.

Having mentioned laughing, I must particularly warn you against it; and I could heartily wish that you may often be seen to smile, but never heard to laugh, while you live. Frequent and loud laughter is the characteristic of folly and ill manners: it is the manner in which the mob express their silly joy at silly things, and they call it being merry. In my mind there is nothing so illiberal and so ill-bred as audible laughter.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.

How low and unbecoming a thing laughter is,
not to mention the disagreeable noise that it makes, and the shocking distortion of the face that it occasions. . . . I am neither of a melancholy nor a cynical disposition, and am as willing and as apt to be pleased as anybody; but I am sure that, since I have had the full use of my reason, nobody has ever heard me laugh.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.

The vulgar often laugh, but never smile; whereas well-bred people often smile, but seldom laugh.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 Feb., 1754.

I hate scarce smiles; I love laughing.

WILLIAM BLAKE, (Quaker, Life, l. 62.)

There is nothing more unbecoming a man of quality than to laugh.

CONRAD, The Double Dealer. Act 4, sc. 2.

If in these hallow'd times, when sober, sad,
All gentlemen are melancholy mad,
When 'tis not deem'd so great a crime by half

To violate a vestal as to laugh.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rascals, l. 461.

As the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 6

The more one is a fool, the more one laughs.
(Plus on est de fous, plus on rit.)

DANCOURT, Maison de Campagne. Sc. 11.

Beware you don't laugh, for then you show
all your faults.

I believe they talked of me, for they laughed consumedly.

PARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act III, sc. 1.

He who laugheth too much hath the nature of a fool; he that laugheth not at all hath the nature of an old cat

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Laugh not too much; the witty man laughs least.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 39.

The giggler is a milk-maid.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 42.

Besides, my prospects—don't you know that people won't employ

A man that wrongs his manliness by laughing
like a boy,

And suspect the azure blossom that unfolds upon a shoot,

As if wisdom's old potato could not flourish at its root?

And laugh, like parrots, at a bagpiper.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
I, sc. 1, l. 52.

3 Laughter almost ever cometh of things most disproportioned to ourselves and nature: delight hath a joy in it either permanent or present; laughter hath only a scornful tickling.

(1775)

And if I laugh at any mortal thing,
'Tis that I may not weep.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto IV, st. 4.

I struggle and struggle, and try to buffet down my cruel reflections as they rise; and when I cannot, I am forced to try to make myself laugh that I may not cry; for one or other I must do;
and is it not philosophy carried to the highest pitch for a man to conquer such tumults of the soul as I am sometimes agitated by, and in the very height of the storm to quaver out a horse-laugh?

Laughter and tears are meant to turn the wheels of the same sensibility; one is wind-power and the other water-power, that is all.
O. W. HOLMES, *The Autocrat of the Breakfast-

13
As men's faces smile on those who smile, so they respond to those who weep. (Ut ridentibus ardentibus, ita fletibus adsunt Humani vultus.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 101.

If you smile, he splits his sides with laughter;
if he sees a friend drop a tear, he weeps; if you call for a bit of fire in winter-time, he puts on his cloak; if you say, "I am hot," he breaks into a sweat. (Si dixeris "astuo," sudat.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 100.

Joy has its friends, but grief its loneliness.
ROBERT NATHAN, A Cedar Box.

Laugh and the world laughs with you,

Weep and you weep alone,

For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth,

But has trouble enough of its own.

LAW

I—Law: Definitions

5 Law is a form of order and good law must necessarily mean good order

ARISTOTLE, Politica. Bk. vii, ch. 4, sec. 5.

6 There are two, and only two, foundations of law, equity and utility

EDMUND BURKE, Tracts on the Popery Laws Pt. I, ch. 3

Laws, like houses, lean on one another

EDMUND BURKE, Tracts on the Popery Laws Pt. I, ch. 3.

7 Law is whatever is boldly asserted and plausibly maintained

AARON BURR. (PARTON, Life and Times of Aaron Burr. Vol. I, p. 149.)

8 The absolute justice of the State, enlightened by the perfect reason of the State: that is law.

RUFUS CHOATE, Conservative Force of the American Bar.

9 The laws place the safety of all before the safety of individuals. (Leges omnium salutem singulorum salutis anteposunt.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. III, ch. 13, sec. 64.

The safety of the people shall be the highest law. (Salus populi suprema lex esto.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. III, sec. 1. Derived by tradition from the Twelve Tables of Roman law.

Justice ought above all to respect the Conclusion of the Roman Twelve Tables: Salus populi suprema lex; and to know that law, except they be in order to that end, are but things capricious, and oracles not well inspired.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Judicature.

10 Law is founded not on theory but upon nature. (Neque opinione sed natura constitutum esse jus.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. I, ch. 10, sec. 28.

Law is nothing but a correct principle drawn from the inspiration of the gods, commanding what is honest, and forbidding the contrary.

CICERO, Philippica. No. xi, sec. 12.

11 Reason is the life of the law; nay, the common law itself is nothing but reason. . . . The law, which is perfection of reason.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes Pt. I.

How long soever it hath continued, if it be against reason, it is of no force in law.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes Pt. I.

Law governs man and reason the law.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3149.

Let us consider the reason of the case. For nothing is law that is not reason

SIR JOHN POWELL, Coggs vs. Bernard (2 Ld. Raym. Rep. p. 911.)

12 The law is for the protection of the weak more than the strong

SIR WILLIAM ELLIS, Reg. v. Woolley. (4 Cox, C.C. 196)

18 The law is the last result of human wisdom acting upon human experience for the benefit of the public.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellaneous, l. 223.

Law was not made for particular cases, but for such as in general.

AMIEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

1 No law can possibly meet the convenience of every one: we must be satisfied if it be beneficial to the whole and to the majority.

LIVY, History. Bk. xxiv, sec. 3.

The law is blind, and speaks in general terms; She cannot pity where occasion serves.

THOMAS MAY, The Bear. Act iv. (1620)

2 The Habeas Corpus Act . . . the most stringent curb that ever legislation imposed on tyranny.

MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 6.

3 The man who does no wrong needs no law. ('O ἄλλοι δίκαιον οὐδένος δεῖται νόμου.)

MEANDER, Fragments. No. 845.

All laws are useless, for good men do not need them and bad men are made no better by them.

DEMONAX. (PLUTARCH, Apothegms.)

When men are pure, laws are useless; when men are corrupt, laws are broken.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming.

Just laws are no restraint upon the freedom of the good, for the good man desires nothing which a just law will interfere with.

7 The laws obey custom. (Leges mori serviunt.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 36.

With customs we live well, but laws undo us.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentum.

8 A law should be a wife, as it were, sent down from heaven: A should command, not discipline. (Ὁ νόμος ὡς ἑστὶν ἀπὸ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἀποσταλὴν ὡς ἑστὶν ἡγεμονία, οὐκ ἐκπαιδεία.)

POSIDONIUS. (SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epist. xiv, sec. 38.)

A law should be brief in order that the unlearned may grasp it more easily. (Legem enim brevem esse oportet, quo facilius ab imperitis teneatur.)

POSIDONIUS. (SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epist. xiv, sec. 38.)

9 Law, in a free country, is, or ought to be, the determination of the majority of those who have property in land.

6 Who stood to gain? (Cui bono fuerit?)

LUCIUS CASSIUS LONGINUS, the judge, who used it as a maxim in instructing a jury to seek for the motive of a crime. (CICERO, Pro Milone. Ch. xii, sec. 32.)

7 For whose good? (Cui bono?)

CICERO, quoting from Lucius Cassius in the Second Philippic. "These two words," says

Forceth (Life), "have perhaps been oftener misapplied than any in the Latin language. They are constantly translated or used in the sense of, 'What good is it?' 'To what end does it serve?' Their real meaning is, 'Who gains by it?' 'To whom is it an advantage?'" Forceth goes on to explain that in a trial for murder Lucius Cassius instructed the jury to inquire who had a motive for the crime, who would gain by the death, in other words, "cui bono fuerit?"

There was an ancient Roman lawyer, of great fame in the history of Roman jurisprudence, whom they called Cui Bono, from his having first introduced into judicial proceedings the argument, "What end or object could the party have had in the act with which he is accused."

3 In vain thy reason finer webs will draw,
Entangle justice in her net of law,
And right, too rigid, harden into wrong.
Still for the strong too weak, the weak too strong.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. iii, l. 191.

4 The net of law is spread so wide,
No sinner from its sweep may hide.
Its meshes are so fine and strong,
They take in every child of wrong.
O wondrous web of mystery!
Big fish alone escape from thee!

JAMES JEFFREY ROCHE, The Net of Law.

5 Petty sacrilege is punished, but sacrilege on a grand scale is honored by a triumphal procession. (Nam sacrilegia minuta puniuntur, magna in triumphis feruntur.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliam. Epist. lxxxvii, sec. 24.

All, look up with reverential awe,
At crimes that 'scape, or triumph o'er the law.
POPE, Epilogue to Satires. Dial. i, l. 167.

6 Laws are generally found to be nets of such a texture, as the little creep through, the great break through, and the middle-sized are alone entangled in.

WILLIAM SELWSTONE, On Politics.

7 Laws are spiders' webs, which stand firm when any light and yielding object falls upon them, while a larger thing breaks through them and escapes.

SOLON. (DIAGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Sec. 14.)

One of the Seven [Wise Men of Greece] was wont to say: "That laws were like cobwebs; where the small flies were caught, and the great broke through."

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 181.

Should I sigh, because I see
Laws like spider-webs to be?
Lesser flies are quickly taken

While the great break out again.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, Gent's Cure.

Laws like to cobwebs, catch small flies,
Great ones break them before your eyes.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

For the most part, laws are but like spiders' webs, taking the small gnats, or perhaps sometimes the fat flesh flies, but hornets that have sharp stings and greater strength, break through them.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk. 32.

Laws are like cobwebs, which may catch small flies, but let wasps and hornets break through.

SWIFT, Essay on the Faculties of the Mind.

8 The net's not spread to catch the hawk or kite
Who do us wrong, but for the innocent birds
Who do us none at all.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

15 For the bond of all men's states is this, When they with honor hold by law.

(Τὸ γὰρ τοῖς ἀνθρώποις ἀνάγκη νόμους τοῦτ' ἔσθ', ὅταν τὶς τοῦ νόμου ὠφείη καλῶς.)

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 313.

16 The laws of God, the laws of man, He may keep that will and can;

Not I let God and man decree Laws for themselves and not for me.

A. E. HOUSMAN, Laws.

17 A strict observance of the written laws is doubtless one of the high virtues of a good citizen, but it is not the highest. The laws of necessity, of self-preservation, of saving our country when in danger, are of higher obligation.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, Vol. VII, p. 412.

18 Without a notion of a law-maker, it is impossible to have a notion of a law, and an obligation to observe it.

JOHN LOCKE, Two Treatises Concerning Government, Pt. I, ch. IV, sec. 2.

1 A law observed is merely law; broken, it is law and executioner.

MONTAIGNE, Fragmenti. No. 700.

2 It is the rule of rules and the general law of laws that everyone should observe that of the place where he is. (C'est la règle des règles, et générale loi des loix, que chacun observe celle du lieu où il est.)

3 The atrocity of the laws prevents their execution. (L'atrocité des lois en empêche l'exécution.)

MONTESQUIEU, Esprit des Loix.

Whenever the offence inspires less horror than the punishment, the rigour of penal law is obliged to give way to the common feelings of mankind.

GIBSON, Decline and Fall. Vol. i, ch. 14.

Laws that do not embody public opinion can never be enforced.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

4 For you'll ne'er mend your fortunes, nor help the just cause,

By breaking of windows, or breaking of laws.
HANNAH MORE, Address to the Meeting in Spa Fields.

5 The parish makes the Constable, and when the Constable is made he governs the Parish.
JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: People.

6 Laws do not persuade just because they threaten. (Ob hoc illæ non persuadent, quia minantur.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epist. xiv, 37.

7 He hath resisted law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further trial.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 267.

Faith, I have been a truant in the law,
And never yet could frame my will to it;
And therefore frame the law unto my will.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 7.

8 We must not make a scarecrow of the law,
Setting it up to fear the birds of prey,
And let it keep one shape, till custom make it
Their perch and not their terror.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 1.

9 The brain may devise laws for the blood, but a hot temper leaps o'er a cold decree.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 2, l. 29.

10 Laws were made to be broken.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Atticae. No. 24.

To the States or any one of them, or any city of the States, Resist much, obey little,
Once unquestioning obedience, once fully enslaved,
Once fully enslaved, no nation, state, city of this earth, ever afterward resumes its liberty.
WALT WHITMAN, To the States.

IX—Law: Law-makers and Law-breakers

11 What is a law, if those who make it
Become the forwardest to break it?

JAMES BEATTIE, The Wolf and the Shepherds, l. 71.

It becometh a law-maker not to be a law-breaker.

UNKNOWN, Politteuphbia, 95 (1669)

I impeach Warren Hastings of high crimes and misdemeanours. I impeach him in the name of the Commons House of Parliament, whose trust he has betrayed I impeach him in the name of the English nation, whose ancient honor he has sullied. I impeach him in the name of the people of India, whose rights he has trodden underfoot, and whose country he has turned into a desert. Lastly, in the name of human nature itself, in the name of both sexes, in the name of every age, in the name of every rank, I impeach the common enemy and oppressor of all EDMUND BURKE, Trial of Warren Hastings, conclusion of speech, as condensed by Macaulay.

12 No power should be above the laws. (Nulla potentia supra leges esse debet.)

CICERO (See Pro Domo Sua, xvii, 43.)

Be you never so high the law is above you.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

13 A people shows more respect for justice, nor refuses submission, when it has seen their author obedient to his own laws. (Tunc observantior æqui Fit populus nec ferre negat, cum viderit ipsum Auctorem parere sibi.)

O'er thrones and globes elate,
Sits Empress, crowning good, repressing ill.
SIR WILLIAM JOHNS, Ode in Imitation of Alcorn.

1 Obey the law, whoever you be that made the law. (Pareto legi, quisque legem sanxeris.)

PITTACUS. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententia, l. 12.)

2 The prince is not above the laws, but the laws above the prince. (Non est princeps super leges, sed leges supra principem.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Panegyricus Trajanus, 67.

3 No man is above the law and no man is below it; nor do we ask any man's permission when we require him to obey it.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Message, Jan., 1904.

Him, the same laws, the same protection yields, Who ploughs the furrow, or who owns the field.

RICHARD SAVAGE, Of Public Spirit, l. 41.

4 He gives laws to the peoples, and makes for himself a way to the heavens. (Per populos dat jura, viamque affectat Olympo.)

5 I am of his mind that said, "Better it is to live where nothing is lawful, than where all things are lawful."

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 69.

6 Laws and institutions are constantly tending to gravitate. Like clocks, they must be occasionally cleansed, and wound up, and set to true time.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

7 "Whatever is, is not," is the maxim of the anarchist, as often as anything comes across him in the shape of a law which he happens not to like.

RICHARD BENTLEY, Declaration of Rights.

8 It was the boast of Augustus . . . that he found Rome of brick and left it of marble; . . . but how much nobler will be the sovereign's boast when he shall have it to say that he found law dear, and left it cheap; found it a sealed book, left it a living letter; found it the patrimony of the rich, left it the inheritance of the poor; found it the two-edged sword of craft and oppression, left it the staff of honesty and the shield of innocence!

LORD BROUGHAM, Speech on Law Reform, House of Commons, Feb., 1828.

9 The law of England is the greatest grievance of the nation, very expensive and dilatory.

BISHOP GILBERT BURNET, History of His Own Times. (1723)

The law can take a purse in open court, Whilst it condemns a less delinquent for 't . . .

Old laws have not been suffer'd to be pointed,
To leave the sence at large the more disjointed,
And furnish lawyers, with the greater ease,
To turn and wind them any way they please.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 535.

10 Men would be great criminals did they need as many laws as they make.

CHARLES JOHN DARLING, Scintille Juris.

11 No written laws can be so plain, so pure, But wit may gloss, and malice may obscure.

DRYDEN, Hind and the Panther. Pt. ii, l. 318.

12 The wise know that foolish legislation is a rope of sand which perishes in the twisting. . . . The law is only a memorandum. . . . Our statute is a currency which we stamp with our own portrait.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

13 The Law is the true embodiment

Of everything that's excellent.

It has no kind of fault or flaw.

And I, my Lords, embody the Law.

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act i.

14 You cannot imagine the beauty of an intricate, mazy law process, embodying the doubts and subtleties of generations of men.

ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

15 Unnecessary laws are not good laws, but traps for money.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan. Pt. ii, ch. 30.

16 He who can stand within that holy door,
With soul unbowed by that pure spirit-level,
And frame unequal laws for rich and poor,—
Might sit for Hell and represent the Devil!

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 67.

19 It is safer that a bad man should not be accused, than that he should be acquitted. (Hominem improbum non accusari tutius est quam absolvi.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxiv, sec. 4.

20 I am further of opinion that it would be better for us to have [no laws] at all than to have them in such prodigious numbers.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13.

Were it made a question whether no law, as among the savage Americans, or too much

LAWYERS

In the midst of the civilized Europeans, amidst the most polished and refined, one who has seen both the good and the evil of existence would pronounce it to be the last; and that the sheep are happier of themselves, than under the care of wolves.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, Vol. 2, p. 128.

1. Petty laws breed great crimes.

OSWALD, Wisdom, Wit and Puck: Peplistralla.

2. The best use of good laws is to teach men to trample bad laws under their feet.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, 12 April, 1852.

3. Laws are always useful to those who possess and venacious to those who have nothing (Les lois sont toujours utiles à ceux qui possèdent, et nuisibles à ceux qui n'ont rien.)

ROUSSEAU, Contrat Social Bk I, ch. 9, note.

4. "That sounds like nonsense, my dear." "Maybe so, my dear, but it may be very good law for all that."

SCOTT, Guy Rascals Ch. 9.

5. Equity, in law, is the same that the spirit is in religion, what everyone pleases to make it.

JOHN SALDEN, Table-Talk: Equity.

Equity is a roughish thing: for law we have a measure, know what to trust to; equity is according to the conscience of him that is chancellor, and so that is larger or narrower, so is equity. 'Tis all one as if they should make the standard for the measure we call a foot, a chancellor's foot; what an uncertain measure would this be! One chancellor has a long foot, another a short foot, a third an indifferent foot. 'Tis the same thing in the chancellor's conscience.

JOHN SALDEN, Table-Talk: Equity.

Law and equity are two things which God hath joined, but which man hath put asunder.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon, Vol. 1, No. 381.

6. A state with defective laws will have defective morals (Itaque malis moribus uti videbis civitates usas malis legibus.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum Epist. xciv, 39.

The more corrupt the state, the more numerous the laws. (Corruptissima rebus, plurime leges.)

TACITUS, Annals Bk III, sec. 27.

7. Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch;

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper growl;

Between two blades, which bears the better temper;

Between two horses, which doth bear him better;

Between two girls, which hath the sweetest tongue;

I have perhaps some shrewish sport of mine.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VI.

Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VI. Act II, sc. 4, l. 10.

When law can do no right, Let it be lawful that law bar no wrong.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, Act III, sc. 1, l. 105.

No laws, however stringent, can make the idle industrious, the thriftless provident, or the drunken sober.

Who ever knew an honest brute, At law his neighbour prosecute?

SWIFT, The Logicians Refuted.

O great and sane and simple race of brutes

That own no lust because they have no law

TENNYSON, Pelleas and Ettarre, l. 471.

11. The best laws, the noblest examples, are produced for the benefit of the good from the crimes of other men. (Leges egregias, exempla honesta, apud bonos ex delictis aliorum gigni.)

TACITUS, Annals Bk xv, sec. 20.

12. The law is good, if a man use it lawfully

New Testament: I Timothy, l. 8.

13. Where is there any book of the law so clear to each man as that written in his heart?

LEO TOLSTOY, The Chinese Pilot.

14. When a people lose respect for one bad law, it is but a short step before they include the good laws with the bad and are shortly in rebellion against all law.

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, Drafting Sands of Party Politics, p. 42.

15. He it was that first gave to the law the air of a science. He found it a skeleton, and clothed it with life, colour, and complexion; he embraced the cold statue, and by his touch it grew into youth, health and beauty.

BARRY YELVERTON, LORD AVONMORE, On Blackstone.

LAWYERS

I—Lawyers: Apothegms

16. Lawyers' gowns are lined with the wilfulness of their clients.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VI.

19. He shed not yet his law.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VI.

When you have no basis for an argument, abuse the plaintiff. (In hominem descendum est igitur, quoniam oratio argumentationem non habet.)

CICERO, Pro Placco. Sec. 10.

When facts were weak, his native cheek
Brought him serenely through
C. H. SWANSON. Quoted as being said of an "eminent lawyer."

Master, spatter, question, cavil; but be sure your argument be intricate enough to confound the court.

WYCHERLEY, The Plain-Dealer. Act iii, sc. 1.

If there were, no bad people, there would be no good lawyers

DICKENS, The Old Curiosity Shop Ch. 56.

Battledore and shuttlecock's a very good game, when you a'n't the shuttlecock and two lawyers the battledores, in which case it gets too excitin' to be pleasant.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 20.

Oh! Sammy, Sammy, vy worn't there a alleybi?

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34.

This house, where once a lawyer dwelt,
Is now a smith's. Alas!

How rapidly the iron age
Succeeds the age of brass!

WILLIAM ESKIN, Epigram.

Of three things the devil makes his mess:
Of lawyers' tongues, of scribes' fingers,
you the third may guess.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Fruits, 179. (1591)

Necessity has no law; I know some attorneys of the same.

II—Lawyers: Their Fees

2 With books and money plac'd, for show,
Like nest-eggs, to make clients lay,
And for his false opinion pay.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. III, canto III, l. 624.

3 Asebia: We never valued right and wrong
But as they serve our cause.
Zelota: Our business was to please the throng
And court their wild applause.
Asebia: For this we brib'd the lawyer's tongue
And then destroy'd the laws.

DRYDEN, Albion and Arabians. Act III, sc. 1.

4 My learned profession I'll never disgrace,
By taking a fee with a grin on my face,
When I haven't been there to attend to the case.

W. S. GILBERT, Isolante. Act I.

5 A man may as well open an oyster without a knife, as a lawyer's mouth without a fee.
BARTEN HOLYDAY, Technogamia, II, 5.

Once (says an author, where I need not say)
Two travellers found an Oyster in their way:
Both fierce, both hungry, the dispute grew strong,
While, scale in hand, Dame Justice pass'd along.
Before her each with clamour pleads the laws,
Explain'd the matter, and would win the cause.
Dame Justice, weighing long the doubtful right,
Takes, opens, swallows it before their sight.
The cause of strife remov'd so rarely well,
"There take (says Justice), take ye each a shell."

We thrive at Westminster on fools like you:
'Twas a fat Oyster—Live in peace—Adieu."
POPE, Verbalium. from Boileau.

6 So wise, so grave, of so perplex'd a tongue,
And loud withal, that would not wag, nor scarce

Lie still without a fee.

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act I, sc. 1.

7 What is the price of your voice? (Quod vocis pretium?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 119. Referring to a lawyer's fee.

8 They put off hearings wilfully,
To stave the refreshing fee.

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 46.

12 Trafficking in the mad wrangles of the noisy court, he lets out for hire his anger and his speech. (Clamosi rabiosa fori Jungia vendens improbus iras Et verba locat.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 172. Referring to a lawyer.

13 'Tis like the breath of an unfee'd lawyer; you gave me nothing for it.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act I, sc. 4, l. 142.

III—Lawyers: Their Virtues

14 The good lawyer is not the man who has an eye to every side and angle of contingency, and qualifies all his qualifications, but who throws himself on your part so heartily, that he can get you out of a scrape.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power.

15 He is one that will not plead that cause wherein his tongue must be confuted by his conscience.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane States: The Good Advocate. Bk. II, ch. 1.

16 The study of the law is useful in a variety of points of view. It qualifies a man to be useful to himself, to his neighbors and to the public. It is the most certain stepping-stone in a political line.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. VIII, p. 17.

The only road to the highest stations in this country is that of the law.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, Letter to C. Reviski, 17 March, 1771.

All lawyers, be they knaves or fools,
Know that a cent is worth the earning,
Since Parliament's astounding rules
Vouch for their honour and their learning.
J. E. T. ROOMER, On the Eagerness of Lawyers to Obtain Seats in the House.

17 The best and most blameless interpreter of the laws. (Optimus atque Interpres legum sanctissimus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 78. Referring to Pegasus.

18 Discourage litigation. Persuade your neighbors to compromise whenever you can. . . . As a peace-maker the lawyer has a superior opportunity of being a good man. There will still be business enough.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Notes for Law Lectures, 1 July, 1850. SEIZEN, Writings of Lincoln, p. 378.

I went into the temple, there to hear
The teachers of our law, and to propose What might improve my knowledge or their own.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. i, l. 211.

2
The man of law who never saw
The ways to buy and sell,
Weening to rise by merchandise,
I pray God speed him well!
SIR THOMAS MORE, A Merry Jest. (c. 1500)
Lines to similar effect, but concluding,
"God never speeds him well," are attributed to Sir John Fortescue, Chief Justice (1422-1476).

3
Bold of your worthiness, we single you
As our best-moving fair solicitor.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii, sc.
1, l. 28.

4
The profession of the law is the only aristocratic element which can be amalgamated without violence with the natural elements of democracy. . . . I cannot believe that a republic could subsist if the influence of lawyers in public business did not increase in proportion to the power of the people.

DE TOCQUEVILLE, Democracy in America. Vol. i, ch. 16.

IV—Lawyers: Their Faults

5
Our wrangling lawyers . . . are so litigious and busy here on earth, that I think they will plead their clients' causes hereafter, some of them in hell.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

6
Your pettifoggers damn their souls,
To share with knaves in cheating fools.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 515.

Is not the winding up witnesses,
And nicking, more than half the business?
For witnesses, like watches, go
Just as they're set, too fast or slow;
And where in Conscience they're strait-lac'd,
'Tis ten to one that side is cast.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 359.

Make law and equity as dear
As plunder and free-quarter were;
And fierce encounters at the bar
Undo as fast as those in war;
Enrich bawds, whores, and usurers,
Pimps, scriv'ners, silent'd ministers,
That get estates by being undone
For tender conscience, and have none.
BUTLER, Satire upon the Weakness and Misery of Man, l. 127.

7
He saw a lawyer killing a viper
On a dunghill hard by his own stable;
And the Devil smiled, for it put him in mind

Of Cain and his brother Abel.
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Devil's Thoughts. St. 4.

He saw a lawyer killing a viper
On a dunghill beside his stable;
Ho! quoth he, thou put'st me in mind
Of the story of Cain and Abel.
ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Devil's Walk. St. 6. An expansion of Coleridge's poem.

8
Then shifting his side (as a lawyer knows how).

COWPER, Report of an Adjudged Case.

9
Next bring some lawyers to thy bar,
By innuendo they might all stand there;
There let them expiate that guilt,
And pay for all that blood their tongues have spilt.

These are the mountebanks of state,
Who by the sleight of tongues can crimes create,

And dress up trifles in the robes of fate,
The mastiffs of a Government,
To worry and run down the innocent.

DANIEL DEFOE, A Hymn to the Pillory. St. 16.

10
The lawyer has spoiled the statesman.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Young Duke. Bk. v,
ch. 6. Referring to Lord Brougham.

11
I know you lawyers can, with ease,
Twist words and meanings as you please.
JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. ii, No. 1.

12 Lawyers are always more ready to get a man into troubles than out of them.
GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act iii.

13
Come, you of the law, who can talk, if you
please,

Till the man in the moon will allow it's a cheese.

O. W. HOLMES, Lines Recited at the Berkshire Jubilee.

14
That one hundred and fifty lawyers should do business together is not to be expected.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. i, p. 86.
Referring to Congress.

How can expedition be expected from a body which we have saddled with an hundred lawyers, whose trade is talking?

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 310.

15
I oft have heard him say how he admir'd Men of your large profession, that could speak

To every cause, and things mere contraries,
Till they were hoarse again; yet all be law.
BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act i, sc. 1.

16
Ye who plead for the poor, and take money at their hands, Ye lawyers, ye advocates, be woe of this:

When ye draw near to death, and pray for pardon,

Your pardon at your parting hence will be but small.

Saint Matthew bids me tell you this, and if I lie, blame him.

WILLIAM LAMMERS, More Pleasures: God's Bull of Pardons

And he said, Woe unto you also, ye lawyers, for ye have men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers.

New Testament: Luke, xi, 46.

My suit has nothing to do with the assault, or battery, or poisoning, but is about three goats, which, I complain, have been stolen by my neighbor. Thus the judge desires to have proved to him; but you, with swelling words and extravagant gestures, dilate on the Battle of Cambray, the Mithridatic war, and the perjuries of the insensate Carthaginians, the Syllæ, the Marii, and the Mæci. It is time, Pœtulus, to say something about my three goats.

MARTIAL, Epigrams Bk. vi, epig. 19

You wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a loam-seller; and then rejoins the controversy of three pence to a second day of audience.

SHAKESPEARE, Comedians Act II, sc. 1, l. 77.

The law the lawyers know about
Is property and land,

Why Faith is more than what our eyes,
And Hope survives the worst disease,
And Charity is more than these,

They do not understand

H. D. C. PERLIZ, The Law the Lawyers Know

Placemen they win this acre first, then that,
Glean on, and gather up the whole estate;
Then strongly fencing ill-got wealth by law,
Indentures, covenants, articles, they draw,
Large as the fields themselves, and larger far
Than civil codes, with all their glosses, are.

POPE, Satires of Dr. Donne Sat. ii, l. 91.

Why is there always a secret singing
When a lawyer catches in?
Why does a hearer's horse snicker
Hearing a lawyer away?

CASE, Sayings, The Lawyers Know Too Much

Three years in them and the self-same tongue,

And the same words as usual;
And the same words as usual;
And the same words as usual;

And the same words as usual;
And the same words as usual;
And the same words as usual;

In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being sanctified with a gracious voice,
Obscures the show of evil?

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, III, 2, 75.

And do as adversaries do in law,
Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, I, 3, 372.

You have clearly proved that ignorance, illness, and vice, are the proper ingredients for qualifying a legislator, that laws are best explained, interpreted and applied, by those whose interest and abilities lie in perverting, confounding and eluding them.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Brobdingnag.

I.—Learning: Definitions

Learning bath his infancy, when it is but beginning and almost childish; then his youth, when it is luxuriant and juvenile; then his strength of years, when it is solid and reduced; and lastly his old age, when it waxes dry and exhaust.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Vicissitude of Things.

The languages, especially the dead, The sciences, and most of all the abstruse, The arts, at least all such as could be said To be the most remote from common use, In all these he was much and deeply read.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto I, st. 40.

Learning is the eye of the mind.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca Scholastica Instructissima, p. 111. (1633)

Learning by study must be won; 'Twas ne'er entail'd from son to son.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Puck Horse and Carrier, l. 41.

This is the highest learning, The hardest and the best:

From self to keep still turning, And honour all the rest.

GEORGE MACDONALD, After Thomas à Kempis.

Learned men are the cisterns of knowledge, not the fountain-heads.

JAMES NORTHCOTE, Table-Talk.

Learning is but an adjunct to ourself And where we are our learning likewise is.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act IV, sc. 3, l. 314.

II.—Learning: Aphorisms

To unlearn what is sought. (Aphorismen, was such was learning, was

Well, for your favour, sir, why, give God thanks, and make no boast of it; had for your writing seen this year models of the female Leg, the whole definite and elegant article as far as the thigh, with a fringe of paper cut in imitation of the female drawers and embroidered in the female fashion!

ROBERT BUCHANAN, The Fleckly School of Poetry.

Down flow'd her robe, a tartan sheen,
Till half a leg was scrippily seen;
And such a leg! my bonny Jean
Could only peer it;
Sae straught, sae taper, tight an' clean,
Nane else cam near it.

ROBERT BURNS, The Vision Duan i, st. 11.

A leg and foot, to speak more plain,

She'll wish there was more, and that's the great art o' letter-writin'.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 33.

8
Belshazzar had a letter,—
He never had but one;
Belshazzar's correspondent
Concluded and begun
In that immortal copy
The conscience of us all
Can read without its glasses
On revelation's wall.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 25.

9
More than kisses, letters mingle souls;
For, thus friends absent speak.

JOHN DOWNS, To Sir Henry Wotton.

10
The welcome news is in the letter found;

The carrier's not commission'd to expound;
It speaks itself, and what it does contain,
In all things needful to be known, is plain.

DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 366.

11
Carrier of news and knowledge,
Instrument of trade and industry,
Promoter of mutual acquaintance,
Of peace and good-will
Among men and nations.

CHARLES W. ELIOT, Inscription, on south-east corner of post-office, Washington, D. C.

Messenger of sympathy and love,
Servant of parted friends,
Consoler of the lonely,
Bond of the scattered family,
Enlarger of the common life.

CHARLES W. ELIOT, Inscription, on south-west
corner of post-office, Washington, D. C.

Neither snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. viii, sec. 98. Inscribed on New York City postoffice.

12
Every day brings a ship,
Every ship brings a word;
Well for those who have no fear,
Looking seaward well assured
That the word the vessel brings
Is the word they wish to hear.

EMERSON, Letters.

13
The tongue is prone to lose the way,
Not so the pen, for in a letter
We have not better things to say,
But surely say them better.

R. W. EMERSON, Life.

In writing a letter to a friend we may find that we rise to thought and to a cordial power of expression that costs no effort.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Inspiration.

The power of a wafer or a drop of wax or gluten to guard a letter, as it flies over sea, over land, and comes to its address as if a battalion of artillery brought it, I look upon as a fine meter of civilization.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

14
Sent letters by posts.

Old Testament: Esther, viii, 10.

15
Letters, from absent friends, extinguish fear,
Unite division, and draw distance near;
Their magic force each silent wish conveys,
And waits embodied thought, a thousand ways:

Could souls to bodies write, death's pow'r were mean,
For minds could then meet minds with heav'n's between.

ANON. HILL, Verse Written on a Window in a Journey to Scotland.

1. Letters is the great chain of human society, and the structure of letters is one of the chiefest links of that chain.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters: To Dr. Prynard.

As keys do open chests,
So letters open breasts.

JAMES HOWELL, To the Sogacious Reader.

They [letters] are the soul of trade.

JAMES HOWELL, Touching the Virtue and Use of Familiar Letters, l. 42.

2. A strange volume of real life in the daily packet of the postman. Eternal love and instant payment!

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Postman's Budget.

A piece of simple goodness—a letter gushing from the heart; a beautiful unstudied vindication of the worth and unifying sweetness of human nature—a record of the invulnerability of truth, armed with high purpose, sanctified by truth.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Postman's Budget

3. A wordy and grandiloquent letter (Verbosa et grandis epistola)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 71.

I have made this letter rather long only because I have not had time to make it shorter. (Je n'ai fait celle-ci plus longue que parce que je n'ai pas eu le loisir de la faire plus courte.)

PASCAL, Lettres Provinciales, 14 Dec., 1656.

Thy letter, sent to prove me,

Indicts me some of wrong;

No longer wilt thou love me,—

Thy letter, though, is long.

HENRY, Book of Songs. No. 34.

The letter is too long by half a mile.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 54.

4. Kind messages, that pass from hand to hand,
Kind letters, that betray the heart's deep history,

In which we feel the pressure of a hand,—

One touch of fire,—and all the rest is mystery!

LONGFELLOW, The Seaside and Fireside: Dedication St. 5

5. Never read over your old letters.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, Suicides.

Good-bye—my paper's out so nearly,
I've only room for, Yours sincerely,

ALAN, The Stage Family in Paris. Letter 6.

6. Letter-writing, that most delightful way of saying things

JOHN BACON, Life of George Eliot.

7. Letters are the most beautiful of all things.

ELIZABETH BARRETT, Letters.

8. Letters are the most beautiful of all things.

ELIZABETH BARRETT, Letters.

unknown to the bearer, contained a request that the king should put him to death.

9. I write many letters, but letters, alas, of the most unlettered kind! (Scribe plurimas, sed illiteratissimas litteras.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. I, epist. 10.

There is nothing to write about, you say. Well, then, write and let me know just this—that there is nothing to write about. ("Nihil est," inquit, "quod scribam." At hoc ipse scribe, nihil est, quod scribas, vel solum illud.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. I, epist. 11.

You will say you had no news to write me; and that probably may be true, but, without news, one has always something to say to those with whom one desires to have anything to do.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 12 Jan., 1757.

Let me hear from thee by letters

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Act I, sc. 1, l. 57.

10. Tell him there's a post come from my master, with his horn full of good news

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 46

11. Thou bringest . . . letters into trembling hands

TENNYSON, In Memoriam Pt. x.

12. For my part, I could easily do without the post-office. . . . I never received more than one or two letters in my life that were worth the postage

H. D. THOREAU, Walden Ch. 2.

II—Letters: Love-Letters

13. Lay it by in some sacred deposit

For relics—we all have a few!

Love, some day they'll print it, because it

Was written to You

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, A New Correspondent.

If She have written a letter, delay not an instant, but burn it

Tear it in pieces, O Fool, and the wind to her mate shall return it!

RUDYARD KIPPLING, Certain Maxims of Hafez.

14. Love is the marrow of friendship, and letters are the elixir of love.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. I, sc. 1.

Love is the life of friendship; letters are

The life of love

JAMES HOWELL, Touching the Virtue and Use of Familiar Letters, l. 1.

15. Great love-letters are written only to great women

ELIZABETH BARRETT, Epigrams.

16. Such as thy letters trembling I receive

Thou well-known name awakes all my weak poor blood in mine veins, l. 23.

Line after line my gushing eyes a'flow,
Led there a wafe variety of woe:
Now warm in love, now with'ring in my bloom,
Lost in a convent's solitary gloom!
POPE, Eliza to Abelard, l. 35.

1
Heav'n first taught letters for some wretch's aid,

Some banish'd lover, or some captive maid;
They live, they speak, they breathe what love inspires,

Warm from the soul, and faithful to its fires;
The virgin's wish without her fears impart,
Excuse the blush, and pour out all the heart,
Speed the soft intercourse from soul to soul,
And waft a sigh from Indus to the Pole.

POPE, Eliza to Abelard, l. 31.

And oft the pangs of absence to remove
By letters, soft interpreters of love

MATTHEW PRIOR, Henry and Emma, l. 147.

2
What! have I 'scaped love-letters in the holiday-time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them?

I—Liberty: Definitions

3
Among a people generally corrupt, liberty cannot long exist

EDMUND BURKE, Letter, to the Sheriffs of Bristol.

Liberty, too, must be limited in order to be possessed

EDMUND BURKE, Letter, to the Sheriffs of Bristol.

The only liberty I mean, is a liberty connected with order, that not only exists along with order and virtue, but which cannot exist at all without them.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, at Bristol, 13 Oct., 1774.

Abstract liberty, like other mere abstractions, is not to be found.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

4
Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.

New Testament: II Corinthians, iii, 17.

5
Man's liberty ends, and it ought to end, when that liberty becomes the curse of his neighbours.

FREDERICK WILLIAM FARRAR, Ideals of Nations.

6 Liberty is always "dangerous," but it is the safest thing we have.

7
Only in fetters is liberty;
Without its banks could 'driver be?
LOUIS GRIMMEL, Poetist.

8
The love of liberty is the love of others; the love of power is the love of ourselves.

10
The God who gave us life, gave us liberty at the same time

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Summary View of the Rights of British America

There can be no prescription old enough to supersede the Law of Nature and the grant of God Almighty, who has given to all men a natural right to be free, and they have it ordinarily in their power to make themselves so, if they please

JAMES OTIS, Rights of the British Colonies, p. 14.

11 Liberty in the lowest rank of every nation is little more than the choice of working or starving.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (Works, vi, 151.)

Ask this man what country and liberty mean, and he will reply that he wants money, and nothing to do (Demander à cet homme ce que c'est que la patrie et la liberté, il vous répondra qu'il veut de l'argent et ne rien faire.)

PAUL DE KOCK, L'Homme aux Trois Culottes.

The world has never had a good definition of the word liberty

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, Baltimore, 18
April, 1864. For full quotation see APPENDIX.

13
All that makes existence valuable to anyone depends on the enforcement of restraints upon the actions of other people.

J. S. MILL, On Liberty Ch. 1.

The liberty of the individual must be thus far limited, he must not make himself a nuisance to other people.

Liberty means responsibility. That is why most men dread it.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

1 The supremacy of the people tends to liberty. (Populi imperium juxta libertatem.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 42.

Liberty is given by nature even to mute animals. (Libertatem natura etiam mutis animalibus dedit.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 17.

2 Liberty, when it begins to take root, is a plant of rapid growth.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to James Madison, 1 March, 1788.

If the true spark of religious and civil liberty be kindled, it will burn. Human agency cannot extinguish it. Like the earth's central fire, it may be smothered for a time; the ocean may overwhelm it; mountains may press it down; but its inherent and unconquerable force will heave both the ocean and the land, and at some time or other, in some place or other, the volcano will break out and flame up to heaven.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Address, 17 June, 1825, at Bunker Hill Monument.

3 Liberty exists in proportion to wholesome restraint; the more restraint on others to keep off from us, the more liberty we have.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, 10 May, 1847.

A liberty to do that only which is good, just, and honest.

JOHN WINTHROP, Life and Letters, ii, 341.

4 Liberty has never come from the government. Liberty has always come from the subjects of it. The history of liberty is a history of resistance. The history of liberty is a history of limitations of governmental power, not the increase of it.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, New York Press Club, 9 Sept., 1912.

II—Liberty: Apothegms

5 The tree of liberty grows only when watered by the blood of tyrants. (L'arbre de la liberté ne croît qu'arrosé par le sang des tyrans.)

BERTRAND BARRÈRE, Speech, French National Assembly, 1792.

The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of patriots and tyrants. It is its natural manure.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to William S. Smith, 9 Feb., 13 Nov., 1787. (Writings, iv, 467.)

6 I pardon something to the spirit of liberty. BENJAMIN BRINK, Speech on Conciliation with America, 22 March, 1775.

7 The people never give up their liberties except under some delusion.

BENJAMIN BRINK, Speech, Bucks, 1784.

8 Liberty is the power to do as we like.

BRINK, Speech to His Men at Monmouth, 1776.

9 Liberty is the power to do as we like.

Made way for liberty, and died.

MONTGOMERY, The Patriot's Pass-Word, l. 1.

Fair Liberty was all his cry;

For her he stood prepared to die.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 411.

This hand, the tyrant smiting, ne'er will sword release,

Till liberty assure the quietude of peace.

A translation by John D. Long, formerly governor of Massachusetts, of the Latin lines by Algernon Sidney, the last of which, "Ease petit placidam sub libertate quietam," is the motto on the arms of Massachusetts.

10 O sweet name of liberty! (O nomen dulce libertatis!)

CICERO, In Verrem No. v, sec. 63.

O liberty! how many crimes are committed in thy name! (O liberté! que de crimes on commet dans ton nom!)

MADAME ROLAND, Mémoires: Appendix. LA-MARTINE, Histoire des Girondins, ch. ii, p. 8, states that Madame Roland said this on the scaffold a moment before her execution, addressing a large statue of Liberty which had been erected beside the guillotine, but others allege that what she really said was, "O Liberté, comme on t'a jouée!" (O Liberty, how you have been trifled with).

11 Strangers to liberty, 'tis true;

But that delight they never knew

And therefore never missed.

COWPER, The Caged Linnet.

12 To those the truth makes free,

Sacred as truth itself is lawful liberty.

AUBREY DE VERE, Liberty.

13 The sun of liberty is set; you must light up the candle of industry and economy.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN (attr.). Said to be in his correspondence.

14 Where liberty dwells there is my country. (Ubi libertas, ibi patria.)

A Latin phrase whose author is unknown, but which Algernon Sidney (c 1640) adopted as his motto. A similar sentiment is attributed to Thomas Jefferson and Thomas Paine.

15 Liberty, thy thousand tongues

None silence, who design no wrongs.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 418.

16 The boisterous sea of liberty is never without a wave.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xv, p. 283.

17 Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof.

Old Testament: Leviticus, xxv, 10. By an odd coincidence, in a letter written by a committee of the Pennsylvania Provincial Assembly, 1 Nov., 1775, ordering a bell for the tower of the new State House, it was directed that this quotation from the Bible should be inscribed around it "well-shaped in large letters." It was this bell, so tradition says, which announced the signing of the Declaration of Independence, 4 July, 1776, and it is still preserved in Independence Hall, Philadelphia.

¹ He that would make his own liberty secure must guard even his enemy from oppression.

THOMAS PAINÉ, Dissertation on First Principles of Government, p. 242.

Whether in chains or in laurels, liberty knows nothing but victories.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech on John Brown, 1 Nov., 1859.

² I must have liberty
Withal, as large a charter as the wind
To blow on whom I please.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act II, sc. 7, l. 47.

So loving-jealous of his liberty.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 2, l. 182.

³ With empty praise of liberty. (Inani jactatione libertatis.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 42.

⁴ Liberty . . . came after a long time. (Libertas . . . longo post tempore venit.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. I, l. 27.

⁵ I shall defer my visit to Faneuil Hall, the cradle of American liberty, until its doors shall fly open, on golden hinges, to lovers of Union as well as of Liberty.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Letter, April, 1851. Webster had been refused the use of the hall after his speech of 7 March, 1850, on the Missouri Compromise, which cost him his seat in the Senate. The Aldermen, however, later reversed their decision, and Webster began his speech, "This is Faneuil Hall—open!"

III—Liberty: Its Virtues

⁶ When Liberty is gone,
Life grows insipid, and has lost its relish.

ADDISON, Cato. Act II, sc. 3.

'Tis liberty alone that gives the flower
Of fleeting life its lustre and perfume.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 446.

Oh! remember life can be
No charm for him who lives not free.

THOMAS MOORE, Before the Battle.

⁷ But little do or can the best of us:
That little is achieved through Liberty.

ROBERT BROWNING, Why I Am a Liberal.

⁸ Liberty . . . is one of the greatest blessings that Heaven has bestowed upon mankind.

CHAMBERS, Dom Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 58.

⁹ Thou rising Sun! thou blue rejoicing Sky!
Yea, every thing that is and will be free!

Bear witness for me, wheresoe'er ye be,
With what deep worship I have still adored
The spirit of divinest Liberty.

S. T. COLERIDGE, France: An Ode. St. 1.

Yes, while I stood and gazed, my temples
bare,

And shot my being through earth, sea, and air

Possessing all things with intensest love,
O Liberty! my spirit felt thee there.

S. T. COLERIDGE, France: An Ode. St. 5.

Liberty, like day,
Breaks on the soul, and by a flesh from Heav'n
Fires all the faculties with glorious joy.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 883.

¹⁰ The love of liberty with life is giv'n,
And life itself th' inferior gift of Heav'n.

JOHN DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. II, l. 291.

¹¹ Liberty is worth whatever the best civilization is worth.

HENRY GILES, The Worth of Liberty.

¹² For ever in thine eyes, O Liberty, Shines that high light whereby the world is saved,

And though thou slay us, we will trust to thee!

JOHN HAY, Liberty.

¹³ What light is to the eyes—what air is to the lungs—what love is to the heart, liberty is to the soul of man. Without liberty, the brain is a dungeon, where the chained thoughts die with their pinions pressed against the hingeless doors.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Progress.

¹⁴ Deep in the frozen regions of the north,
A goddess violated brought thee forth,
Immortal Liberty!

SMOLLETT, Ode to Independence, l. 5.

¹⁵ Behold in Liberty's unclouded blaze
We lift our heads, a race of other days.

CHARLES SPRAGUE, Centennial Ode. St. 22.

¹⁷ I tell you, liberty is the best of all things; never live beneath the noose of a servile halter. (Dico tibi verum, libertas optima rerum; Nunquam servili sub nexa vivito fili.)

SIR WILLIAM WALLACE, quoting a medieval proverb.

¹⁸ And, best beloved of best men, liberty,
Free lives and lips, free hands of men free-
born.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Atalanta.

¹⁹ If but the least and faintest, let me be Evermore numbered with the truly free
Who find Thy service perfect liberty!

WHITTIER, What of the Day? l. 15.

1. ... rather belong to a poor nation that was first than to a rich nation that had ceased to be in love with liberty. We shall not be poor if we love liberty.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Mobile, Ala., 27 Oct., 1912.

IV—Liberty: Its Defense

2. It is the common fate of the indolent to see their rights become a prey to the active. The condition upon which God hath given liberty to man is eternal vigilance.

JOHN PHILIPOT CURRAN, Speech upon the Right of Election, 10 July, 1790.

Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Public Opinion. This was an address delivered before the Massachusetts Antislavery Society, 28 Jan., 1852. The phrase is not in quotation marks. It has been said that Mr. Phillips was quoting Thomas Jefferson, but in a letter dated 14 April, 1879, Mr. Phillips wrote: "‘Eternal vigilance as the price of liberty’ has been attributed to Jefferson, but no one has yet found it in his works or elsewhere." It has also been attributed to Patrick Henry.

3. Liberty can neither be got, nor kept, but by so much care, that mankind are generally unwilling to give the price for it.

LEON HALLAM, Works, p. 62.

4. The ground of liberty must be gained by inches. THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, Vol. viii, p. 3.

We are not to expect to be translated from despotism to liberty in a feather bed.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, Vol. viii, p. 13.

5. By no sword save her own falls Liberty.

R. U. JOHNSON, Hands Across Seas.

6. Unless that liberty, which is as such a kind as arms can neither procure nor take away, ~~what~~ ^{what} ~~stoke~~ ^{stoke} is the result of piety, of justice, of temperance, and undisciplined virtue, shall have taken deep root in your minds and hearts, there will not long be wanting one who will snatch from you by treachery what you have acquired by arms.

MASON, Second Defence of People of England.

7. The manna of popular liberty must be gathered each day, or it is lost. . . . Only by uninterrupted agitation can a people be kept sufficiently awake to principles that to let liberty be smothered by material prosperity. Revolution must only of course be inaugurated.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Address, Public Opinion.

Boston, 28 Jan. 1852.

8. ... the only way to secure liberty is by constant vigilance and action. . . .

BRADDOCK, Abolitionist, Nov. 42.

9. God grants liberty only to those who love it, and are always ready to guard and defend it.

WILSON, Speech, U. S. Senate, 3 June, 1834.

V—Liberty and Bondage

10. A day, an hour, of virtuous liberty is worth a whole eternity in bondage.

AMMONSON, Cato, Act ii, sc. 1.

11. Chains or conquest, liberty or death.

AMMONSON, Cato, Act ii, sc. 4, last line.

Is life so dear or peace so sweet as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take; but as for me, give me liberty, or give me death!

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, Virginia House of Delegates, 23 March, 1775. (Arranged by William Wirt, 1817.)

12. The Athenians will not sell their liberties for all the gold either above or under ground.

ARISTIDES, to the Lacedaemonians (PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides, Sec. 10)

We sell our birthright whenever we sell our liberty for any price of gold or honor.

E. P. WHIFFLE, Outlooks on Society: Literature and Politics.

13. Eternal Spirit of the chainless Mind!

Brightest in dungeons, Liberty! thou art, For there thy habitation is the heart—

The heart which love of thee alone can bind.

BYRON, The Prisoner of Chillon: Introductory.

14. He who, through fear of poverty, forfeits liberty, which is better than mines of wealth, will . . . be a slave forever. (Sic qui pauperem veritus potiore metallis libertate caret, . . . serviet eternum.)

CICERO, Epistles, Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 39.

Those, who would give up essential liberty to purchase a little temporary safety, deserve neither liberty nor safety.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN (?), Historical Review of Pennsylvania, (1759)

This sentence was much used in the Revolutionary period. It occurs even so early as November, 1755, in an answer by the Assembly of Pennsylvania, to the Governor.

FREDERICKHAM, Rise of the Republic of the United States.

15. Stand fast: therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.

NEW TESTAMENT, Colossians, v. 1.

16. A price is liberty is better than aught in prison.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar.

17. Liberty is better than the chains of slavery.

PLUTARCH, Quintus Fabius, No. 113.

Hard Liberty before the easy yoke

Of servile pomp.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. II, l. 125.

Oh! if there be, on this earthly sphere,
A beam, an offering Heaven holds dear,
'Tis the last libation Liberty draws
From the heart that bleeds and breaks in her cause!

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri St. 11

The tribute most high to a head that is royal,
Is love from a heart that loves liberty too

THOMAS MOORE, The Prince's Day.

"An 't please Your Honour," quoth the peasant,

"This same dessert is not so pleasant:
Give me again my hollow tree,
A crust of bread and Liberty!"

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. II, sat. 6, l. 218.

Ne use have I for such a life, and so farewell my wood and hole, secure from alarms, will solace me with homely vetch. (Haud mihi vita Est opus hac, et valeas: me silva cavusque Tutus ab insidiis tenui solabitur, ervo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. II, sat. 6, l. 115 Horace is telling the story of a peasant who tried to live in a palace.

I had rather munch a crust of brown bread and an onion in a corner, without ado or ceremony, than feast upon a turkey at another man's table, where I am forced to chew slowly, drink little, wipe my mouth every minute, and cannot sneeze or cough, or do other things that are the privileges of liberty and solitude

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. I, ch. 11.

He that roars for liberty

Faster binds a tyrant's power,
And the tyrant's cruel glee
Forces on the iron hour.

TEASDALE, The Vision of Sam. Pt. IV, st. 17.

VI—Liberty and Licence

What is liberty without wisdom and without virtue? It is the greatest of all possible evils; for it is folly, vice, and madness, without tution or restraint.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

More liberty begets desire of more;
The hunger still increases with the store.

QUINCY, Blind and the Panther. Pt. I, l. 519.

Liberty in the wild and frolicsome hands of fanatics has ever more, as frequently in the past, proved the effective helmsman of mediocrity and the twin-brother of tyranny.

OTTO KERN, Speech, University of Wisconsin,
20 Jan., 1918.

The deadliest foe of democracy is not autocracy but liberty fenced. Liberty is not fool-proof.
For its beneficent working it demands self-restraint.

OTTO KERN, Speech, University of Wisconsin,
14 Jan., 1918.

It is not good to have too much liberty. It is not good to have all one wants.

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. No. 379.

What in some is called liberty, in others is called licence. (Quæ in aliis libertas est, in aliis licentia vocatur.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoris. Bk. III,
ch. 8, sec. 48.

Foster-child of licence, which fools call liberty
(Alumna licentie, quam stulti libertatem vocant.)

TACITUS, Dialogus de Oratoribus. Sec. 40.

License they mean when they cry, Liberty!

For who loves that, must first be wise and good.

MILTON, On the Detraction Which Followed upon My Writing Certain Treatises.

Why, headstrong liberty is lash'd with woe,
There's nothing situate under heaven's eye
But hath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, II, 1, 15.

And liberty plucks justice by the nose

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, I, 3, 29.

Liberty, guest amiable,
Plants both elbow on the table.

(La liberté, convive aimable, Met les deux coudes sur la table.)

VOLTAIRE.

The weight of too much liberty.

I—Libraries: Their Virtues

Libraries, which are as the shrines where all the relics of the ancient saints, full of true virtue, and that without dejection or imposture, are preserved and reposed.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. II.

These are the tombs of such as cannot die.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Library.

Shelved around us lie The mummied authors.

BAYARD TAYLOR, The Post's Journal: Third Evening

Thou canst not die. Here thou art more than alive

Where every book is thy epitaph.

VAUGHAN, On Sir Thomas Bodley's Library.

The true University of these days is a Collection of Books.

COMPAGNON, Human and Divine Knowledge, Book IV.

1. Library contains the diary of the husband.

Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, Address on Opening the Birmingham Free Library, 26 Oct., 1856.

2. A sanatorium for the mind. (Ψυχῆς ἰατρείον.)
DIONYSIOS SCOTUS, History. Bk. I, ch. 49.
The inscription on the portal of the library at Alexandria, Egypt. The phrase is usually translated as "Medicine for the mind," or "Nourishment for the soul," but iatreion means a surgery, or hospital, or sanatorium—a place which one visits to be cured—and the reference is plainly to the library as a whole.

Food for the soul (Nutrimentum spiritus)
UNKNOWN, Inscription, on the Royal Library, Berlin.

Let no profane person enter! (Μὴ τις βέβηλος εἰσέλθω.)

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on the old library at Berne.

3. Consider what you have in the smallest chosen library. A company of the wisest and wittiest men that could be picked out of all civil countries, in a thousand years, have set in best order the results of their learning and wisdom. The men themselves were hid and inaccessible, solitary, impatient of interruption, fenced by etiquette; but the thought which they did not uncover to their bosom friend is here written out in transparent words to us, the strangers of another age.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Books.

4. He that revels in a well-chosen library, has innumerable dishes, and all of admirable flavour.

WILLIAM GODWIN, The Enquirer: Early Taste for Reading.

5. This is my world! within these narrow walls, I own a princely service

PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, My Study.

6. Every library should try to be complete on something, if it were only the history of pin-heads.

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table, Ch. 8.

7. I have often thought that nothing would do more extensive good at small expense than the establishment of a small circulating library in every county, to consist of a few well-chosen books, to be lent to the people of the county, under such regulations as would secure their use without loss of time.

EDMUND JENNINGS, Writings. Vol. xii, p. 265.

What a place to be in is a small library! It is a place where all the words of the world are gathered.

that have bequeathed their labours to these Bodleians, were reposing here, as in some dormitory, or middle state. I do not want to handle, to profane the leaves, their wadding-sheets I could as soon dislodge a shade. I seem to inhale learning, walking amid their foliage; and the odour of their old moth-scented coverings is fragrant as the first bloom of those scintillant apples which grew amid the happy orchard

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Oxford in the Vacation.

9. My library Was dukedom large enough.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act I, sc. 2, l. 109.

Come, and take choice of all my library,
And so beguile thy sorrow

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 34.

10. I go into my library, and all history rolls before me. I breathe the morning air of the world while the scent of Eden's roses yet lingered in it . . . I see the pyramids building; I hear the shoutings of the armies of Alexander . . . I sit as in a theatre—the stage is time, the play is the play of the world.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: Books and Gardens.

II—Libraries: Their Faults

11. The richest minds need not large libraries.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Table Talk: Learning-Books.

12. A library is but the soul's burial-ground. It is the land of shadows.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Star Papers: Oxford: The Bodleian Library.

13. Meek young men grow up in libraries.

EMERSON, Nature Addresses and Lectures: The American Scholar.

14. It is a vanity to persuade the world one hath much learning, by getting a great library.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane State: Of Books.

15. The dust and silence of the upper shelf.

MACAULAY, Essays: On Milton.

16. Burn the libraries, for their value is in this book.

OMAR. Referring to the Koran.

17. I love vast libraries; yet there is a doubt If one be better with them or without.— Unless he use them wisely, and, indeed, Knows the high art of what and how to read. At Learning's fountain it is sweet to drink, But 'tis a nobler privilege to think; And sit, from books apart, the thinking mind

May make the nectar which it cannot find.
'Tis well to borrow from the good and great;
'Tis wise to learn; 'tis godlike to create!
J. G. Saxe, The Library.

1 Since you cannot read all the books which you may possess, it is enough to possess only as many books as you can read. (Cum legere non possis, quantum habueris, satis est habere, quantum legas.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. II, sec. 4.

2 A circulating library in a town is as an evergreen tree of diabolical knowledge.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act I, sc. 2.

3 Unlearned men of books assume the care, As eunuchs are the guardians of the fair.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. II, l. 83.

It is not observed that . . . librarians are wiser men than others.

That's a loud one!

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 89.

That's a lie with a lid on

C. H. SPURGEON, Ploughman's Pictures, p. 99.

There is a difference between telling a falsehood and lying. One who lies is not himself deceived, but tries to deceive another; he who tells a falsehood is himself deceived. One who lies deceives, as far as he is able; but one who tells a falsehood does not himself deceive, any more than he can help. A good man ought to take pains not to lie; a wise man, not to tell what is false.

PUBLIUS NEPOTIUS, Fragmenta No. 49 (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Attice. Bk. XI, ch. 11.)

That immortal lie. (Ce mensonge immortel.)

PÈRE DE RAVENHAW. (POUJOLAT, *Se Vie, Ses

relsome; . . . the Lie with Circumstance;
... the Lie Direct.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, Act V, sc. 4,
l. 76.

If a man had the art of the second sight for seeing lies, as they have in Scotland for seeing spirits, how admirably he might entertain himself in this town by observing the different shapes, sizes and colours of those swarms of lies which were about the heads of some people.

SWISS, The English. No. 1.

Magnanimous lie! and when was truth so beautiful that it could be mistaken for a lie?

(Magnanimitas magnanimitas! or quando è il vero si bello che si possa a te proporsi?)

TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered. Bk. II, st. 27. Sophronista, a Christian virgin, falsely took upon herself the guilt of having secreted a statue of the Virgin from heathen profanation.

There are 860 different forms of lying, but only one of them has been squarely forbidden. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

III—Lies: Condemnation

It is not the lie that passeth through the mind, but the lie that sinketh in, and setteth in it, that doth the hurt.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

The beginning of all is to have done with Falsity, to eschew Falsity as Death Eternal.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 23 June, 1870.

Man everywhere is the born enemy of lies.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 1.

It is the nature of a scoundrel to deceive by lying (Improbi hominis est mendacio fallere).

CICERO, Pro Murena. Ch. 39, sec. 62.

He neither uttered falsehood nor could endure it. (Mendacium neque dicebat, neque pati poterat.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, Lives: Atticus.

Every violation of truth is not only a sort of suicide in the liar, but is a stab at the health of human society.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

As ten millions of circles can never make a square, so the united voice of myriads cannot lend the smallest foundation to falsehood.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 8.

Dare to be true. nothing can need a lie; A fault which needs it meat, grows two thereby.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch.

Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle which fits them all.

G. W. HERMAN, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6, l. 1.

It is better to be lied about than to lie.

ELMER HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. II, p. 46.

There is no vice so mean, so pitiful, so contemptible, and he who permits himself to tell a lie once, finds it much easier to do it a second and third time, till at length it becomes habitual.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. V, p. 83.

Men lie, who lack courage to tell truth.

JOAQUIN MIRAM, Jan. 30. 3.

Equivocation is half-way to lying, as lying the whole way to hell.

WILLIAM PATER, Friends of Solitude, p. 36.

The mouth that lies slays the soul.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs: Scottish.

To lapse in fulness

Is sorer than to lie for need, and falsehood Is worse in kings than beggars.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act II, sc. 6, l. 12.

You told a lie, an odious, damned lie: Upon my soul, a lie, a wicked lie.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act V, sc. 2, l. 180.

Let me have no lying. It becomes none but tradesmen.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act IV, sc. 4, l. 743.

One falsehood treads on the heels of another. (Fallacia Alia aliā trudit.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 779.

It is a true saying that one falsehood leads easily to another.

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. I, sec. 33.

The silent colossal National Lie that is the support and confederate of all the tyrannies and shams and inequalities and unfairnesses that afflict the peoples—that is the one to throw bricks and sermons at.

MARK TWAIN, My First Lie.

He shall not prosper who deviseth lies.

The Koran. Ch. 20.

IV—Lies: Condemnation

A little inaccuracy saves a world of explanation.

C. E. AYRES, Science, the False Messiah.

A mixture of a lie doth ever add pleasure.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

Untruths . . . such as are wittily contrived, and are not merely gross and palpable.

FRANCIS BACON, Observations on a Libel.

For breaking of an oath, and lying, Is but a kind of self-denying,

A saint-like virtue; and from hence

Some have broke oaths by Providence.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. II, canto II, l. 133.

A good portion of speaking well consists in knowing how to lie. (Bona pars bene dicendi est scire mentiri.)

FRANCIUS, Philosynus et Pseudosynus.

Merely corroborative detail, intended to give artistic verisimilitude to a bold and convincing narrative.

No more veracity robs your sagacity
Of penmanship, Barney McGee.

RICHARD HOVET, Barney McGee.

1 Yet to so gentle lies, pardon is due.
A lie, well told, to some tastes is restorative;
Besides, we Poets lie by good authority.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. II, No. 184. See also POETRY: POETIC LIES.

2 A good lie for its own sake is ever pleasing to honest men, but a patched up record never.

ELBERT HUARD, The Philistines. Vol. I, p. 88.

OVID, Art Amatoris. Bk. I, l. 98.

4 Parables are not lies because they describe events which never happened.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan. Sc. II.

V—Lies and Statistics

5 You may prove anything by figures.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Chartism. No. 2. Quoted as the saying of "a witty statesman."

6 Figures won't lie, but liars will figure.

GENERAL CHARLES H. GOSWEN, Representative from Ohio, who for many years was famous for his prognostications of the vote at Presidential elections.

7 Round numbers are always false.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (HAWKINS, Johnsonians, 235.)

8 Statistics are like alienists—they will testify for either side.

F. H. LA GUARDIA, The Banking Investigations (Liberty, 13 May, 1933.)

9 Figures often beguile me, particularly when I have the arranging of them myself; in which case the remark attributed to Disraeli would often apply with justice and force: "There are three kinds of lies: lies, damned lies, and statistics."

MARK TWAIN, Autobiography. Vol. I, p. 246. This phrase has also been attributed to Henry Labouchère, Abraham Hewitt and Commander Hobbway R. Frost.

VI—Lies and the Memory

10 A good memory is needed after one has lied. (Il faut bonne mémoire après qu'on a menti.)
CORNEILLE, Le Menteur. Act IV, sc. 5.

11 There is nothing so pathetic as a forgetful liar.

J. M. KENNEDY, A Christmas Year Book.

12 He who is glib after his memory should not undertake the trade of lying. (Qui ne sent point assez ferme de mémoire, ne se doit pas mêler d'être menteur.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. I, ch. 9.

13 He who tells a lie, is not sensible how great a task he undertakes; for he must be forced to invent twenty more to maintain that one.

PORR, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

14 A liar needs a good memory. (Mendacem memorem esse oportere.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. IV, ch. 2, sec. 91.

This shows that liars ought to have good memories.

ALGERNON SIDNEY, Discourses on Government. Ch. II, sec. 15.

Indeed, a very rational saying, that a liar ought to have a good memory.

ROBERT SOUTH, Sermon: Concealment of Sin.

VII—Liars

15 Liars are always most disposed to swear. (A giurar presti i mentitor son sempre.)

ALFIERI, Virginia. Act II, sc. 3.

A liar is always lavish of oaths. (Un menteur est toujours prodigue de serments.)

CORNILLIE, Le Menteur. Act III, sc. 5.

16 When they speak truth they are not believed. ARISTOTLE, when asked what liars lose by lying. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle Sec. 17.)

This is the punishment of a liar. He is not believed, even when he speaks the truth.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 89b.

A liar is not believed even when he tells the truth. (Mendaci homini ne verum quidem dicenti credere solemus.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. II, ch. 71, sec. 146.

But liars we can never trust, Though they should speak the thing that's true. ISAAC WATTS, Against Lying.

17 None speaks false, where there is none to hear.

JAMES BRATTE, The Minstrel. Bk. II, st. 24.

18 The greater fool, the greater liar.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Miscellaneous Epigrams. No. 6.

Do not tell everything, but never lie. . . . You may always observe that the greatest fools are the greatest liars.

LOREN CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 Feb., 1754.

19 It isn't every fool that's fit To make a real good lie, that 'll sit On her heel, and answer the helm.

THOMAS EDWARD BROWN, The Doctor.

20 There's a real love of a lie, Liars find ready made for lies they make. ROBERT BROWNING, Mr. Judge "The Madman."

1 He lied with such a fervour of intention,
There was no doubt he earned his laureate pension.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto III, st. 80.

2 With death doomed to grapple
Beneath this cold slab, he
Who lied in the Chapel
Now lies in the Abbey.

BYRON, Epitaph for William Pitt.

Some lie beneath the churchyard stone,
And some before the Speaker.

W. M. PRAED, School and School-fellows. St. 5.

3 It is the man who tells and who acts the lie who is guilty, and not he who honestly and sincerely believes the lie.

LOUIS CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 Sept., 1747.

4 Thou liar of the first magnitude!

7 A splendid liar. (Splendide mendax.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. III, ode. 11, l. 34. Hypernestra alone, of all the fifty daughters of Danaus who had sworn to them to kill their husbands, broke her oath and was imprisoned, but declared innocent by the people.

One only, true to Hymen's flame,
Was traitress to her sire forsworn:
That splendid falsehood lights her name
Through times unborn.

These lies are like the father that begets them:
gross as a mountain, open, palpable.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act II, sc. 4, l. 249.

9 A man who has never been within the tropics does not know what a thunderstorm means; a man who has never looked on Niagara has but a faint idea of a cataract; and he who has not read Barère's Memoirs may be said not to know what it is to lie.

14 I have no use for liars, national, international, or those found in private life.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Arlington Cemetery.

15 He will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
IV, sc. 3, l. 283.

He will lie as fast as a dog will trot.

JOHN PALSGRAVE, *Lesclarissement de la Langue
Françoise*, 610. (1530)

Thou canst cog, face and lie as fast as a dog can trot.

UNKNOWN, Ray Any Worke for Cooper, 65.
(1589)

She will lie as fast as a dog will lick a dish.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. II, ch. 7. (1546)

16 Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart
Too great for what contains it.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act V, sc. 6, l. 103.

A heart for falsehood framed.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act I, sc. 5.

17 Lord, Lord, how subject we old men are to the vice of lying!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act III, sc. 2, l. 325.

Lord, Lord, how this world is given to lying!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act V, sc. 4, l. 149.

How you delight, my lords, I know not, I;

But, I protest, I love to hear him lie.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act I,
sc. 1, l. 175.

18 If thou deny'st it, twenty times thou liest;

And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart,

Where it was forged, with my rapier's point.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 38.

19 Like one
Who having into truth, try talking of it.

make such a mirror of his memory,
to make his own life.

Shakespeare, The Tempest, Act 4, sc. 2, l. 99.

A phrase which has puzzled the commentators. Bowdler explains it: "Who having made his memory such a mirror as to credit his own life by telling of it."

It was generally believed that he was indeed Duke Richard. Nay, himself with long and continual counterfeiting and with oft telling a lie, was turned by habit almost into the thing he seemed to be, and from a liar into a believer.

FRANKIE BACON, History of Henry VII.

An egg is not so full of meat as she is full of lies.

JOHN SMYTH, Gammer Gurton's Needle, Act v, sc. 2. (1563)

Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 1, 24.

An experienced, industrious, ambitious, and often quite picturesque liar.

MARK TWAIN, My Military Campaign.

LIFE

I—Life: Definitions: The Optimists

Life's but a months unto an end—that end,
Beginning, means and end to all things—God.

P. J. BARRY, Pastor: A Comedy Town.

I am convinced that the world is not a mere bog in which men and women trample themselves in the mire and die. Something magnificent is taking place here amid the cruelties and tragedies, and the supreme challenge to intelligence is that of making the noblest and best in our curious heritage prevail.

C. A. BRAND, (Durant, Meaning of Life, p. 43.)

For life is the mirror of king and slave,

"Tis just what we are and do."

Then give to the world the best you have,

And the best will come back to you.

MARKLEIGH BROWN, Life's Mirror.

Life is a pure flame, and we live by an invisible sun within us.

Life is an ecstasy.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Life is a series of surprises, and would not be worth taking or keeping if it were not.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

All life is an experiment. The more experiments you make the better.

EMERSON, Journals.

Life is a perpetual instruction in cause and effect.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion.

Life seems to me like a Japanese picture which our imagination does not allow to end with the margin.

JUSTICE O. W. HOLMES, Marriage to the Federal Bar Association, 1932.

Life is a preparation for the future, and the best preparation for the future is to live as if there were none.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, Vol. ix, p. 46.

Life is a loom, weaving illusion.

VACHEL LINDBRAY, The Chinese Nightingale.

Life is the west-going dream-storms' breath,
Life is a dream, the sigh of the skies,

The breath of the stars, that nod on their pillows
With their golden hair mused over their eyes.

VACHEL LINDBRAY, The Ghost of the Buffaloes.

Life is a mission. Every other definition of life is false, and leads all who accept it astray. Religion, science, philosophy, though still at variance upon many points, all agree in this, that every existence is an aim.

MAZZINI, Life and Writings, Ch. 5.

Life is a flame that is always burning itself out, but it catches fire again every time a child is born.

CHARLES STRAW, The Adventures of the Black Cat in Her Search for God.

Life is a flame whose splendor hides its base.
"Doppelgänger," in letter to Emerson. (See Journals, 1866.)

Life is an arrow—therefore you must know
What mark to aim at, how to use the bow—
Then draw it to the head, and let it go!

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Arrow.

Life is an arrow, flashing as arrow.

 division.
 HENRI BERGSON, Creative Evolution. Ch. 1.
- For life is tendency, and the essence of a tendency is to develop in the form of a shaft, creating, by its very growth, divergent directions among which its impetus is divided.
 HENRI BERGSON, Creative Evolution. Ch. 2.

Life appears as a wave which rises, and which is opposed by the descending movement of matter. At one point alone it passes freely, dragging with it the obstacle which will weigh on its progress but will not stop it. At this point is humanity.

HENRI BERGSON. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 117.)

15 If you choose to represent the various parts in life by holes upon a table, of different shapes,—some circular, some triangular, some square, some oblong,—and the persons acting these parts by bits of wood of similar shapes, we shall generally find that the triangular person has got into the square hole, the oblong into the triangular, and a square person has squeezed himself into the round hole. The officer and the office, the doer and the thing done, seldom fit so exactly that we can say they were almost made for each other.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy.

The world is like a board with holes in it, and the square men have got into the round holes, and the round into the square.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY. (Punch is responsible for the attribution. The quotation has not been found in Berkeley's works.)

A round man cannot be expected to fit a square hole right away. He must have time to modify his shape.

Bubble

- 7 The world's a bubble, and the life of man
less than a span,
In his conception wretched, from the womb
so to the tomb
Curst from his cradle, and brought up to years with cares and fears
Who then to frail mortality shall trust,
But limes on water, or but writes in dust
SIR FRANCIS BACON, The World A paraphrase of a Greek epigram by Posidippus. Sometimes wrongly attributed to Sir Henry Wot-ton. Izaak Walton, a friend of Wotton, definitely ascribed it to Bacon (Reliquae Wottonianae, p. 513 1651). Positively ascribed to Bacon by Thomas Farnaby, a contemporary and a scholar (Florilegium Epigrammaticum 1629)
- What life shall a man choose? In court and mart
Are quarrels and hard dealing; cares at home,
Labors by land; terrors at sea; abroad,
Either the fear of losing what thou hast,
Or worse, nought left to lose, if wedded, much
Discomfort; comfortless unwed; a life
With children troubled, incomplete without:
Youth foolish, age outworn. Of these two choose then;

IX—Life A Game

16 The heroes of ancient and modern fame have treated life and fortune as a game to be well and skilfully played, but the stake not to be so valued but that any time it could be held a trifle light as air and thrown up

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series New England Reformers

As a rule, the game of life is worth playing, but the struggle is the prize

DEAN W R INGE (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge No 199)

17 But helpless Pieces of the Game He plays Upon this Chequer board of Nights and Days,

Hither and thither moves, and checks, and slays,

And one by one back in the Closet lays

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubayyat St 69 (Fitzgerald, tr)

The chess-board is the world, the pieces are the phenomena of the universe, the rules of the game are what we call the laws of Nature The player on the other side is hidden from us We know that his play is always fair, just, and patient. But also we know, to our cost, that he never overlooks a mistake, or makes the smallest allowance for ignorance.

MUXLEY, Lay Sermons, Addresses, and Reviews: A Liberal Education.

While we least think it he prepares his Mate.
Mate, and the King's pawn played, it never ceases.

Though all the earth is dust of taken pieces.
JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street. Pt. I, last lines.

1 We are puppets, Man in his pride, and Beauty fair in her flower;
Do we move ourselves, or are moved by an unseen hand at a game
That pushes us off from the board, and others ever succeed?

TENNISON, Maud, l. 126.

1 I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 4, l. 9.

Life will always remain a gamble, with prizes sometimes for the imprudent, and blanks so often to the wise.

JEROME K. JEROME.

2 We are in the world like men playing at tables; the chance is not in our power, but to play it is; and when it is fallen, we must manage it as we can

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living and Dying: Of Contentedness. Sec. 2.

3 The life of man is like a game with dice: if you don't get the throw you want, you must show your skill in making the best of the throw you do get. (Ita vitast hominum quasi quom ludas tesseris: Si illud quod maxime opus est jacta non cadit, Illud quod cecidit forte, id arte ut corrigas.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 739.

Life is a game of whist. From unseen sources
The cards are shuffled, and the hands are dealt.

Blind are our efforts to control the forces
That, though unseen, are no less strongly felt.

I do not like the way the cards are shuffled,
But yet I like the game and want to play;
And through the long, long night will I, unruffled,

Play what I get, until the break of day.

EUGENE F. WARR, Whist.

Life is a game of whist
Between Man and Nature
In which Nature knows all Man's cards.
CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Handicapped.

X—Life: An Inn

4 We are all but Fellow-Travelers,
Along Life's weary way;
If any man can play the pipes, ..

In God's name, let him play.

JOHN BENNETT, Fellow-Travelers.

Away with funeral music—set
The pipe to powerful lips—
The cup of life's for him that drinks
And not for him that sips.
R. L. STEVENSON, The Cup of Life.

15 A fair, where thousands meet, but none can stay;

An inn, where travellers bait, then post away.
ISAAC HAWKINS BROWNE, Immortality of the Soul. (Tr. from the Latin by Soame Jenyns)

6 For the world I count it not an inn, but an hospital, and a place not to live, but to die in.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 11.

Archbishop Leighton used often to say that if he were to choose a place to die in, it should be an inn; it looking like a pilgrim's going home, to whom this world was all as an inn, and who was weary with the noise and confusion in it. . . . And he obtained what he desired, for he died at the Bell Inn in Warwick Lane.

GILBERT BURNET, History of My Own Times.

7 This world is but a thoroughfare full of woe,
And we but pilgrims passing to and fro.
Death is an end of every worldly sore.

CHAUCER, The Knight's Tale, l. 1989.

Like pilgrims to th' appointed place we tend;
The world's an inn, and death the journey's end.
DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. iii, l. 887.

8 I depart from life as from an inn, and not as from my home. (Ex vita discedo, tamquam ex hospitio, non tamquam e domo.)
CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 23, sec. 84.

9 We are in this life as it were in another man's house. . . . In heaven is our home, in the world is our Inn: do not so entertain thyself in the Inn of this world for a day as to have thy mind withdrawn from longing after thy heavenly home.

PAUL GERHARDT, Meditations. No. 38. (1630)

10 One doth but breakfast here, another dine;
he that lives longest does but sup; we must all go to bed in another World.

JOSEPH HENSHAW, BISHOP OF PETERBOROUGH, Horæ Succisivæ, p. 80. (1651)

Man's life is like unto a winter's day,—
Some break their fast and so depart away;
Others stay dinner, then depart full fed;
The longest age but sups and goes to bed.
O reader, then behold and see

As we are now, so must you be.

Attributed to Bishop Henshaw, but probably an elaboration by an unknown hand of the quotation from Horæ Succisivæ given above. Variations of the stanza were used frequently as epitaphs.

Our Life is nothing but a Winter's day;
Some only break their Fast, and so away:
Others stay to Dinner, and depart full fed:
The deepest Age but Sups, and goes to Bed:
He's most in debt that lingers out the Day:
Who dies betime, has less, and less to pay.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Divine Fancies: On the Life of Man. (1633)

The life of man is a winter's day, and a winter's way.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Man's life is like a Winter's day:
Some only breakfast and away;
Others to dinner stay and are full fed,
The oldest man but sups and goes to bed.
Long is his life who lingers out the day,
Who goes the soonest has the least to pay;
Death is the Waiter, some few run on tick,
And some alas! must pay the bill to Nick!
Tho' I owed much, I hope long trust is given,
And truly mean to pay all bills in Heaven.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, Barnwell Churchyard, near Cambridge, England.

This life at best is but an inn,
And we the passengers.

JAMES HOWELL, A Fit of Mortification.

Nor is this lower world but a huge inn,
And men the rambling passengers.

JAMES HOWELL, The Vote. (Prefixed to his Familiar Letters.)

I came at morn; 'twas spring, I smiled,
The fields with green were clad;
I walked abroad at noon, and lo!

'Twas summer—I was glad;

I sate me down; 'twas autumn eve,
And I with sadness wept;

I laid me down at night, and then

'Twas winter, and I slept.

MARY PYPER, Epitaph: A Life.

Many mortals given up to the belly and to sleep, uninstructed and uncultured, have passed through life like sojourners in strange lands; whose bodies indeed have been given up to pleasure, and their souls to a heavy burden. (Multi mortales dedit ventri atque somno, indocti, incultique vitam sicuti peregrinantes transiere; quibus profecto contra naturam corpus voluptati, anima oneri.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Ch. 2, sec. 8.

This body is not a home but an inn, and that only for a short time. (Nec domum esse hoc corpus, sed hospitium, et quidem breve hospitium.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilius. Epist. cxx, 14.

Born for a very brief space of time, we regard this life as an inn which we are soon to quit that it may be made ready for the coming guest.

SENECA, Ad Polybium de Consolatione. Sec. 21.

Making a perpetual mansion of this poor halting-place.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia.

XI—Life: An Isthmus

Many witty authors compare the present time to an isthmus, or narrow neck of land, that rises in the midst of an ocean, immeasurably diffused on either side of it.

ANDERSON, The Spectator. No. 590.

There is an eternity behind and an eternity before, and this little speck in the center, however long, is comparatively but a minute.

JOHN BROWN, after his arrest at Harper's Ferry, in October, 1859.

The poorest day that passes over us is the conflux of two Eternities; it is made up of currents that issue from the remotest Past and flow onwards into the remotest Future.

CARLYLE, Essays: Signs of the Times.

One life;—a little gleam of Time between two Eternities.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 5.

As stand we perch on point of Time, betwixt the two Eternities,

Whose awful secrets gathering round with black profound oppress our eyes.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ii, st. 4.

Life is a fragment, a moment between two eternities, influenced by all that has preceded, and to influence all that follows. The only way to illumine it is by extent of view.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, Note-book: Life.

Vain, weak-built isthmus, which dost proudly rise

Up between two eternities!

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Life and Fame, l. 18.

Life is a narrow vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities. We strive in vain to look beyond the heights.

R. G. INGERSOLL, At His Brother's Grave.

What shall we call this undetermined state,
This narrow isthmus 'twixt two boundless oceans,

That whence we came, and that to which we tend?

GEORGE LILLO, Arden of Feversham. Act iii, sc. 2.

Life, as we call it, is nothing but the edge of the boundless ocean of existence where it comes on soundings.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 5.

Remember that man's life lies all within this present, as 't were but a hair's breadth of time; as for the rest, the past is gone, the future may never be. Short, therefore, is man's life, and narrow is the corner of the earth wherein he dwells.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iii, sec. 10.

1 This speck of life in time's great wilderness
This narrow isthmus 'twixt two boundless seas,

The past the future, two eternities!
THOMAS MOORE, *Lalla Rookh The Veiled
Prophet of Khorassan* St 42

Placed on this isthmus of a middle state
POPE, Essay on Man Epig. ii, l. 3

3 Amid two seas on one small point of land,
Wearied uncertain and amazed we stand
MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon on the Vanity of Human Wishes Pt. iii l. 616

Lo! on a narrow neck of land,
'Twixt two boundless seas, I stand
CHARLES WESLEY, *O God Mine Inmost Soul
Convert*

4 I desire to have both heaven and hell ever in my eye, while I stand on this isthmus of life, between two boundless oceans

JOHN WESLEY, Letter to Charles Wesley, 1747

XII—Life A Medley

5 From fibers of pain and hope and trouble
And toil and happiness,—one by one,—
Twisted together, or single or double,

The varying thread of our life is spun
Hope shall cheer though the chain be galling,
Light shall come though the gloom be falling,
Faith will hst for the Master calling
Our hearts to his rest,—when the day is done

A. B. BRADTON, When the Day Is Done

Life is patchwork—here and there,
Scraps of pleasure and despair
Join together, but or miss

ANNE BRONAUGH, Patchwork

6 He fixed thee mid this dance
Of plastic circumstance
ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Esra

7 How many lives we live in one,
And how much less than one, in all!
ALICE CARY, Life's Mysteries

8 What is it but a map of busy life,
Its fluctuations and its vast concerns?
COWPER, The Task Bk. iv l. 55

9 In real life serious things and mere trifles, laughable things and things that cause pain, are wont to be mixed in strangest medley. It is necessary, then, that Tragedy, as being a mirror of life must leave room for an element of comic humour

JOHN KIBBLE, Lectures on Poetry

10 Half my life is full of sorrow,
Half of joy, still fresh and new;
One of these lives is a fancy,
But the other one is true
ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Dream-Life

Mingle shades of joy and woe,
Hope and fear, and peace and strife,
In the thread of human life

SCOTT, Guy Mannering Ch. 4

13 We have two lives
The soul of man is like the rolling world,
One half in day the other dipt in night,
The one has music and the flying cloud,
The other silence and the wakeful stars

ALEXANDER SMITH Horton, l. 76

XV—Life: A Voyage

15 We mortals cross the ocean of this world Each in his average cabin of a life;

The best's not big, the worst yields elbow-room.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

Most men make the voyage of life as if they carried sealed orders which they were not to open till they were fairly in mid-ocean.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Dante.

Life hath set No landmarks before us.

OWEN MREDITH, Lucile. Pt. II, canto v, sec. 14.

Life's a voyage that's homeward bound.

HERMAN MELVILLE, (COURNOS, Modern Plutarch, p. 87.)

Life is a perilous voyage. (Πλοῦς ὁφθαλμῶν τῷ ὕπνῳ.)

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. I, No. 65.)

Humble voyagers are we,
O'er Life's dim, unsounded sea,
Seeking only some calm clime;—
Touch us gently, gentle Time.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Middle Age.

O'er Ocean, with a thousand masts, sails forth
The stripling bold—

One boat, hard rescued from the deep, draws
Into port the old!

SCHILLER, Votive Tablets: Expectation and Fulfilment.

Life's uncertain voyage.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act v, sc. 1, l. 205.

Life is a voyage. The winds of life come strong
From every point; yet each will speed thy course
Along,

If thou with steady hand when tempests blow
Canst keep thy course aright and never once let Go.

THEODORE WILLIAMS, The Voyage of Life.

to its close.

A. B. ALCOCK, Table Talk: Learning.

From fields of sense, and mines of thought,
Threads of life are twisted and wrought:
We are weaving Character, weaving Fate,
And Human History, little and great.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Blackberries.

Let us be patient, tender, wise, forgiving,
In this strange task of living;

For if we fail each other, each will be
Fey driftwood lapsing to the bitter sea.

MARTIN ARMSTRONG, Body and Spirit.

For like a child, sent with a fluttering light
To feed his way along a gusty night,
Man walks the world. Again, and yet again,
The lamp shall be by fits of passion slain;
But shall not He who sent him from the door
Relight the lamp once more, and yet once more?

sts. 37-8.

To seek the True, to glad the heart, such is of life the Higher Law.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ix, st.
28.

All is concentrated in a life intense,
Where not a beam, nor air, nor leaf is lost,
But hath a part of being.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto III, st. 89.

To live content with small means; to seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion; to be worthy, not respectable, and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quietly, talk frankly; to listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages, with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasion, hurry never; in a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious grow up through the common: this is to be my symphony.

13 You'll see that, since our fate is ruled by chance,

Each man, unknowing, great,
Should frame life so that at some future hour
Fact and his dreamings meet.

VICTOR HUGO, To His Orphan Grandchildren.

14 Life must be filled up, and the man who is not capable of intellectual pleasures must content himself with such as his senses can afford

SAMUEL JOHNSON (Mrs Piozzi, Johnsoniana)

That kind of life is most happy which affords us the most opportunities of gaining our own esteem

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works Vol ix, p 114

What a deal of cold business doth a man misspend the better part of life in! in scattering compliments, tendering visits, gathering and venting news, following feasts and plays, making a little winter love in a dark corner

BEN JONSON, Explorata Jactura Vita

A sacred burden is this life ye bear
Look on it, lift it bear it solemnly,
Stand up and walk beneath it steadfastly
Fail not for sorrow, falter not for sin,
But onward upward till the goal ye win

FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE, Lines Addressed to the Young Gentlemen Leaving the Lenox Academy, Mass

Who laughs in motley to the crowded court,
And makes for idle days an idle sport,
May teach us yet, in life's impartial school,
'Tis we wear asses' ears and play the fool

JAMES B KENYON, The Harlequin

Measure thy life by loss instead of gain,
Not by the wine drunk, but by the wine poured forth,
For love's strength standeth in love's sacrifice,

And whoso suffers most hath most to give

HARRIET ELEANOR KING, The Disciples

Life's all getting and giving,
I've only myself to give
What shall I do for a living?
I've only one life to live
End it? I'll not find another
Spend it? But how shall I best?
Sure the wise plan is to live like a man
And Luck may look after the rest!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Wishing-Caps

Children of yesterday, heirs of tomorrow,
What are you weaving? Labor and sorrow?
Look to your looms again! Faster and faster
Fly the great shuttles prepared by the Master
Life's in the loom! Room for it, room!

MARY A LATHBURY, Song of Hope

The years of men are the looms of God, let down from the place of the sun
Wherein we are weaving away, till the mystic web is done—

Weaving blindly, but weaving surely, each for himself his fate

We may not see how the right side looks we can only weave and wait

Ich habe gelebt und geliebet)

SCHILLER, Piccolomini Act III, sc 7, l 9

I have lived and I have loved,
I have waked and I have slept,
I have sung and I have danced,
I have smiled and I have wept

CHARLES MACKAY, Vari

3 When a man has said "I have lived" every morning he arises he receives a bonus (Quis quis dixit 'vixi' cotidie ad lucrum surgit)

SENeca, Epistulae ad Lucillum Epist. XII, sec 9

4 What expiating agony
May for him damned to poesy,
Shut in that little sentence be—
What deep austerities of strife—
He 'lived his life' 'He lived his life'

FRANCIS THOMPSON, A Judgement in Heaven
Epilogue

5 I have lived, I have run the course Fortune allotted me,
Now my shade shall descend illustrious to the grave

(Vixi et quem dederat cursum Fortuna, peregi

Et nunc magna mei sub terras currit imago)
VERGIL, Aeneid Bk IV, l 653

XIX—Life Living Life Over

6 Yet for my own part I would not live over my hours past, or begin again the thread of my days, not upon Cicero's ground because I have lived them well, but for fear I should live them worse

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici Pt I,
sec 49

Few men would be content to cradle it once again, except a man can lead his second life better than the first, a man may be doubly condemned for living evilly twice

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, To a Friend Sec 13

7 If I were to live my life over again, I would do all that I have done (Si je recommençais ma carrière, je ferais tout ce que j'ai fait)

FONTANELLE, Dialogues des Morts

Were I to live my life over again, I should live it just as I have done I neither complain of the past, nor fear the future

MONTAIGNE, Essays Bk III in ch 2

Vain was the man, and false as vain,
Who said, were he ordained to run
His long career of life again

He would do all that he had done

THOMAS MOORE, My Birthday

8 I should have no objection to a repetition of the same life from its beginning only asking the advantages authors have in a second edition to correct some faults of the first

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN Autobiography Ch 1

XX—Life Quality, Not Quantity

11 It matters not how long we live but how
P J BAILEY, Festus Wood and Water

12 A short space of life is long enough for living well and honorably (Breve tempus aetatis satis longum est ad bene honesteque vivendum)

CICERO, De Senectute Ch XIV sec 70

Who well lives long lives for this age of ours Should not be numbered by years, days, and hours

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes Week
II, day 4 (Sylvester, tr)

13 The life given us by nature is short, but the memory of a well spent life is eternal (Brevis a natura nobis vita data est, at memoria bene reditae vitae sempiterna)

CICERO, Philippica No XIV, sec 12

No one has lived too short a life who has performed its duties with unblemished character (Nemo parum diu vixit, qui virtutis perfectae perfecto functus est munere)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum Bk I,
ch 45, sec 109

14 Life is not measured by the time we live

GEORGE CRABBE, The Village Bk II

Life is not dated merely by years Events are sometimes the best calendars

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Venetia Bk II, ch 1

15 So that my life be brave, what though not long?

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Sonnets No XII

I have lived enough, for I die unconquered.
(Satis vixi, invictus enim morior.)

ERASMUNDAS. (CORNELIUS NEPOS, Lives: Epimondas.)

It is the depth at which we live and not at all the surface extension that imports.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

To live long is almost everyone's wish, but to live well is the ambition of a few.

JOHN HUGHES, The Lay Month No. 18.

It is not a great thing to have been to Jerusalem, but to have lived well is a great thing. (Non magnum est Hierosolymis fuisse, sed bene vixisse magnum est.)

ST. JEROME. (ERASMUS, De Colloquiorum Utilitate.)

Nor love thy life, nor hate; but what thou livest

Live well; how long or short permit to heaven.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 549.

I have lived to a riper age than years can show. 'Tis deeds make old: these must thou number: with these was my life fulfilled, not with idle years.

OVID, Consolatio ad Liviam, l. 448.

We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;

In feelings, not in figures on a dial.

We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives

Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best.

P. J. BAILEY, Festas: A Country Town.

He, who grown aged in this world of woe, In deeds, not years, piercing the depths of life, So that no wonder waits him.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 5.

A life spent worthily should be measured by a nobler line,—by deeds, not years.

SHERIDAN, Pizarro. Act iv, sc. 1.

Think'st thou existence doth depend on time? It doth; but actions are our epochs.

BYRON, Manfred. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 54.

It is no happiness to live long, nor unhappiness to die soon; happy is he that hath lived long enough to die well.

FRANCIS QUAREZ, Reckridion. Cent. ii, No. 84.

The measure of a man's life is the well-spending of it, and not the length.

PLUTARCH, Consolatio ad Apollonium.

No parent would wish for his children that they might live forever, but rather that their lives might be noble and honored. (Neque quousque parentis liberis uti eterni forent optavit, magis uti boni honestique vitæ exigerent.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. 85, sec. 50.

Life, if thou knowest how to use it, is long enough. (Vita, si scias uti, longa est.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitæ. Sec. II.

Mere living is not a good, but living well. (Non enim vivere bonum est, sed bene vivere.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. lxx, 4.

We should strive, not to live long, but to live rightly. (Non ut diu vivamus curandum est, sed ut satis.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. xciii, 2.

The point is, not how long you live, but how nobly you live. (Quam bene vivas refert, non quam diu.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. ci, sec. 15.

He liveth long who liveth well!

All other life is short and vain;

He liveth longest who can tell

Of living most for heavenly gain.

HORATIUS BONAR, He Liveth Long Who Liveth Well.

Wha' not so much to live long as to live well.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

They only have lived long who have lived virtuously.

SHERIDAN, Pizarro. Act iv, sc. 1.

Desire not to live long, but to live well;

How long we live not years, but actions, tell.

ROWLAND WATKINS, Flamma sine Fumo: The Hour Glass.

For they lived long enough, that have lived well enough.

THOMAS WILSON, Arte de Rhetorique, 83. (1560)

The wise man will live as long as he ought, not as long as he can. . . . He always reflects concerning the quality, and not the quantity, of his life. (Itaque sapiens vivit, quantum debet, non quantum potest. . . . Cogitat semper, qualis vita, non quanta sit.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. lxx, 4.

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

The good man should not live as long as it pleases him, but as long as he ought. (Cum bono viro vivendum sit non quamdiu juvat sed quamdiu oportet.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. civ, 3.

It is with life as with a play: what matters is not how long it is, but how good it is. (Quomodo fabula, sic vita: non quam diu, sed quam bene acta sit, refert.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. lxxvii, 20.

Life is long if it is full. (Longa est vita, si plena est.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. xciii, 2.

Let us see to it that our lives, like jewels of great price, be noteworthy not because of their width, but because of their weight.

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucillum. Epis. xciii, 4.

Just as one of small stature can be a perfect man, so a life of small compass can be a perfect life.

SENeca, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epist. xciii, 7. Circles are praised, not that abound In largeness, but the exactly round: So life we praise that does excel Not in much time, but acting well.

EDMUND WALLER, Long and Short Life.

1 The measure of a happy life is not from the fewer or more suns we behold, the fewer or more breaths we draw, or meals we repeat, but from the having once lived well, acted our part handsomely, and made our exit cheerfully.

LORD SHAFTESBURY, Characteristics. Vol. i, p. 316.

2 The life of a man of virtue and talent, who should die in his thirtieth year, is, with regard to his own feelings, longer than that of a miserable priest-ridden slave who dreams out a century of goodness.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab: Notes.

Perhaps the perishing ephemeron enjoys a longer life than the tortoise.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab: Notes.

3 That life is long, which answers life's great end.

The time that bears no fruit, deserves no name;

The man of wisdom is the man of years.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 773.

See also Simplicity

4 Remote from busy life's bewildered way.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. 2, l. 91.

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,

Their sober wishes never learn'd to stray;

Along the cool, sequester'd vale of life

They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 73. (1751) Last line often misquoted "even tenor." "Far From the Madding Crowd" used by Thomas Hardy as the title of a novel.

Through the sequester'd vale of rural life

The venerable patriarch guileless held

The tenor of his way.

BELLEV PORTERUS, Death, l. 109. (c. 1775)

5 The supreme Good they believed to be the thing which . . . they expressed by the formula, "Life according to nature." (Secundum naturam vivere.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iv, ch. 10, sec. 26.

CICERO is speaking of the Stoics.

I sought the simple life that Nature yields.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Village. Bk. i.

A child has beaten me in simplicity of living. (Infans me simpliciter superavit.)

DIOCRATES, throwing away his only utensil, a shell from which to drink, when he saw a boy drinking from his hands. (DIOCRATES LAERTIUS, Diogenes Bk. vi, sec. 37.)

6 If you live according to nature, you will never be poor; if according to the world's opinion, you will never be rich. (Si ad naturam vives, numquam eris pauper; si ad opinionem, numquam eris dives.)

EPICURUS, Fragments. No. 201. (SENeca, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epist. xvi, sec. 7.)

7 We have learned the lesson of Time, and we know three things of worth;

Only to sow and sing and reap in the land of our birth.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, The Cry of the Little Peoples.

8 Anything for a quiet life!

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Captives. Act iii, sc. 3.

(1624) MIDDLETON, Title of play. (1662)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation Dial. 1, etc., etc.

Anythin' for a quiet life, as the man said when he took the situation at the lighthouse.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 43.

9 Taught to live

The easiest way, nor with perplexing thoughts To interrupt the sweet of life.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 182.

His life

Private, unactive, calm, contemplative.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. ii, l. 80.

His life is neither tossed in boisterous seas Of troublous world, nor lost in slothful ease.

PHILIPAS FLETCHER, The Happiness of the Shepherd's Life.

10 Among good things, I prove and find

The quiet life doth most abound.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

What sweet delight a quiet life affords.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Sonnet.

11 The happy life, which flows along with steady course, completely under the soul's control. (Beata vita, secundo defluens cursu, arbitrii sui tota.)

SENeca, Epistulae ad Lucillum. Epist. cxi, 11.

12 A loving little life of sweet small works.

SWINBURNE, Bohewell. Act i, sc. 1.

13 So passed their life, a clear united stream, By care unruffled.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1189.

So his life has flowed

From its mysterious urn a sacred stream, In whose calm depth the beautiful and pure Alone are mirrored.

THOMAS N. TALFOURD, Ion. Act i, sc. 1, l. 138.

A life that leads melodious days.

THOMSON, In Memoriam. Sec. xxxiii, st. 2.

Whose life was like the violet sweet,

As climbing jasmine pure.

WORDSWORTH, Elegiac Stanzas.

1 An elegant sufficiency, content,
Retirement, rural quiet, friendship, books,
Ease and alternate labour, useful life,
Progressive virtue, and approving Heaven!
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 1161.

2 I love a life whose plot is simple,
And does not thicken with every pimple.
H. D. THOREAU, Conscience.

My life is like a stroll upon the beach,
As near the ocean's edge as I can go.
H. D. THOREAU, The Fisher's Boy.

3 What is the simple life? . . . It is a form of life described by pastoral poets, or the New Testament, but not livable today.

CHARLES WAGNER, The Simple Life. Ch. 7.

Humanity lives and always has lived on certain elemental provisions.

CHARLES WAGNER, The Simple Life. Ch. 3.

4 For all her quiet life flowed on
As meadow streamlets flow,
Where fresher green reveals alone
The noiseless ways they go.
J. G. WHITTIER, The Friend's Burial. St. 9.

So didst thou travel on life's common way
In cheerful godliness.

WORDSWORTH, *Poems Dedicated to National
Independence*. Pt. i, No. 14.

5 Plain living and high thinking are no more:
The homely beauty of the good old cause
Is gone; our peace, our fearful innocence,
And pure religion breathing household laws.

WORDSWORTH, *Poems Dedicated to National
Independence*. Pt. i, No. 13.

A conspicuous example of plain living and high thinking.

THOMAS HAWES, Evenings for the People:
George Herbert.

I will show myself highly fed and lowly taught.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 2, l. 3.

6 Who God doth late and early pray
More of his grace than gifts to lend;
And entertains the harmless day
With a religious book or friend.

SIR HENRY WOTTON, The Character of a Happy Life.

7 Oh, for the simple life,
For tents and starry skies!
ISRAEL ZANGWILL, Aspiration.

XXII—Life: The Simple Life: Its Faults

1 They do not live but linger.

ROBERT BURNES, Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 10.

A quiet life, which was not life at all.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 289.

To live a life half dead, a living death.
MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 100.

A life both dull and dignified.
SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, st. 1.

9 Born with a monacle he stares at life,
And sends his soul on pensive promenades.
DONALD EVANS, En Monocle.

10 Was it for this I uttered prayers,
And sobbed and cursed and kicked the stairs,
That now, domestic as a plate,
I should retire at half-past eight?

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Grown-Up.

11 For to live at ease is not to live.

See dying vegetables life sustain,
See life dissolving vegetate again.

POPE, Essay on Man. Ep. iii, l. 15.

One really lives nowhere; one does but vegetate and wish it all at an end.

FANNY BURNES, Cecilia. Bk. iv, ch. 7.

13 Degenerate sons and daughters,
Life is too strong for you—
It takes life to love Life.

EDGAR LEE MASTERS, Lucinda Matlock.

XXIII—Life: A Little Work, A Little Play

14 We are the voices of the wandering wind,
Which moan for rest and rest can never find;

Lo! as the wind is so is mortal life,
A moan, a sigh, a sob, a storm, a strife.
EDWIN ARNOLD, Light of Asia. Bk. iii, l. 23.

15 I've played a little, And I've worked a lot,
I've loved and I've hated, As who would not?
I've had some fun And I've had some sorrow,
I've had to steal And I've had to borrow,
I've sinned a little, But all in all
I've hardly tasted Life at all.
But Death just smiled as he beckoned ahead—
"That was life," He gently said.

MILT BRONSTON, Merry-Go-Round.

16 A little sun, a little rain,
A soft wind blowing from the west,
And woods and fields are sweet again,
And warmth within the mountain's breast.

A little love, a little trust,
A soft impulse, a sudden dream,
And life as dry as desert dust,
Is fresher than a mountain stream.
STOPFORD A. BROOKE, Earth and Man.

¹ The king commands us, and the doctor quacks us,

The priest instructs, and so our life exhales,
A little breath love, wine, ambition fame
Fighting, devotion, dust—perhaps a name

BYRON, Don Juan Canto II, st. 4

² We come, we cry, and that is life,
We yawn, we go, and that is death
(On entre, on crie, et c'est la vie!
On bâille on sort, et c'est la mort!)

AUSONDE DE CHANCEL, Lines in an Album
(1836)

⁴ They are not long, the weeping and the laughter,
Love and desire and hate
I think they have no portion in us after
We pass the gate

ERNEST DOWSON, Vita Summa Brevis

⁵ They are not long, the days of wine and roses
Out of a misty dream
Our path emerges for a while, then closes
Within a dream
ERNEST DOWSON, Vita Summa Brevis

⁶ A crust of bread and a corner to sleep in,
A minute to smile and an hour to weep in,
A pint of joy to a peck of trouble
And never a laugh but the moans come double,
And that is life!

PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR, Life

⁷ A little rule a little sway,
A sunbeam in a winter's day
Is all the proud and mighty have Between the cradle and the grave
JOHN DYER, Grongar Hill, l. 89

⁸ He lives not who can refuse me,
All my force saith, Come and use me
A gleam of sun, a summer rain,
And all the zone is green again

EMERSON, Fragments: Nature Frag. 28

A train of gay and clouded days
Dappled with joy and grief and praise,
Beauty to fire us, saints to save,
Escort us to a little grave

EMERSON, Fragments: Life Frag. 1.

⁹ A little season of love and laughter,
Of light and life, and pleasure and pain,
And a horror of outer darkness after,
And the dust returneth to dust again

Then the lesser life shall be as the greater,
And the lover of life shall join the hater,
And the one thing cometh, sooner or later,
And no one knoweth the loss or gain

ADAM LINDSAY GORDON, The Swimmer St. 10

¹⁰ Life has given me of its best—
Laughter and weeping, labour and rest,
Little of gold but lots of fun,
Shall I then sigh that all is done?
No not I, while the new road lies
All untrodden before my eyes

NORAH M. HOLLAND, Life

¹¹ None knoweth a better thing than this
The Sword, Love Song, Honour Sleep
None knoweth a surer thing than this Birth Sorrow Pain Weariness Death
WILLIAM SHARP, Chant of Ardon the Pict

¹² A little while the tears and laughter,
The willow and the rose,
A little while and what comes after
No man knows

An hour to sing, to love and linger,
Then lutanist and lute
Will fall on silence song and singer
Both be mute
DON MARQUIS, A Little While

¹³ A little time for laughter,
A little time to sing
A little time to kiss and cling,
And no more kissing after PHILIP BOURKE MARSTON, After

¹⁴ A little work, a little sweating, a few brief, flying years, a little joy a little fretting some smiles and then some tears, a little resting in the shadow a struggle to the height, a futile search for El Dorado, and then we say Good Night

WALT MASON, The Journey

¹⁵ Life is vain, a little love, a little hate, and then—Good-day! Life is short, a little hopping a little dreaming and then—Good night!
Life is whatever God wills it, and, such as it is it's enough!

(La vie est vaine Un peu d'amour,
Un peu de haine Et puis—bon jour!
La vie est breve Un peu d'espoir,
Un peu de rêve Et puis—bon soir!
La vie est telle Que Dieu la fit,
Et telle qu'elle, Elle suffit!)

LEON VON MONTENAPPEL, Peu de Chose et Presque Trop

Life is but jest a dream, a doom,
A gleam, a gloom—and then, good rest!
Life is but play, a throb, a tear,
A sob, a sneer—and then, good day
LEON VON MONTENAPPEL, Nothing and Too Much His English version of Peu de Chose.

A little work, a little play
To keep us going—and so, good-day!
A little warmth, a little light
Of love's bestowing—and so, good-night!
A little fun, to match the sorrow
Of each day's gowing—and so, good-morrow!
A little trust that when we die
We reap our sowing—and so, good-bye!
GEORGE DU MAURIER. Paraphrase of Peu de
Chose by Montaigne, used as conclusion for Tribby. Last couplet inscribed on Du Maurier memorial tablet, Hampstead churchyard.

Enough! or Too much.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

1
A little pain, a little pleasure,
A little heaping up of treasure;
Then no more gazing upon the sun.
All things must end that have begun.
JOHN PAYNE, Kynelle.

2
A sudden wakin', a sudden weepin',
A li'l suckin', a li'l sleepin';
A cheel's full joys an' a cheel's short sorrows,
Wi' a power o' faith in gert tommorrows.
EDEN PHILLIPOTS, Man's Days.

3
One wakes, rises, dresses, goes out;
One comes home, dines, sups, goes to bed,
sleeps.
(On s'éveille, on se lève, on s'habille, et on sort;
On rentre, on dine, on soupe, on se couche,
on dort.)

DE PIS, C'Est la Vie!

What trifling coil do we poor mortals keep;
Wake, eat and drink, evacuate, and sleep.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Human Life.

To get the whole world out of bed
And washed, and dressed, and warmed, and fed,
To work, and back to bed again,
Believe me, Saul, costs worlds of pain.
JOHN MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy.

4
Man has here two and a half minutes—one to smile, one to sigh, and a half to love: for in the midst of this minute he dies. (Der Mensch hat hier dritthalb Minuten, eine zu lächeln—eine zu seufzen—und eine halbe zu lieben: denn mitten in dieser Minute stirbt er.)
JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Hesperus Ch. 4.

5
Say, what is life? 'Tis to be born,
A helpless Babe, to greet the light
With a sharp wail, as if the morn
Foretold a cloudy noon and night;
To weep, to sleep, and weep again,
With sunny smiles between; and then?
J. G. Saxe, The Story of Life.

6
A little gain, a little pain,
A laugh, lest you may moan;
A little blame, a little fame,
A star-gleam on a stone.
RUDY W. SUTCH, Just Think.

7
Forenoon and afternoon and night—Forenoon
And afternoon and night—forenoon and what!

The empty song repeats itself. No more?
Yea, that is life: Make this forenoon sublime.
This afternoon a psalm, this night a prayer,
And time is conquered and thy crown is won.
E. R. SALT, Life.

8
A little fruit a little while is ours,
And the worm finds it soon.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

A little sorrow, a little pleasure,
Fate metes us from the dusty measure
That holds the date of all of us;
We are born with travail and strong crying,
And from the birth-day to the dying
The likeness of our life is thus.
SWINBURNE, Illust. St. 18.

9
What is this passing scene?

A peevish April day!

A little sun—a little rain,
And then night sweeps along the plain,
And all things fade away.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE, On Disappointment.

10
This is the height of our deserts:

A little pity for life's hurts;
A little rain, a little sun,
A little sleep when work is done.

UNKNOWN, Deservings

XXIV—Life: Whence and Whither

11
I was born some time ago, but I know not
why:

I have lived—I hardly know either how or where:

Some time or another, I suppose, I shall die;
But where, how, or when, I neither know nor care!

GEORGE ARNOLD, An Autobiography.

12
What endless questions vex the thought, of Whence and Whither, When and How.
SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. II, st. 3.

Between two worlds, life hovers like a star
'Twixt night and morn, upon the horizon's verge.
How little do we know that which we are!
How less what we may be!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 99

13
Seek not the wherefore, race of human kind.
DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto III, l. 35.

14
You hail from Dream-land, Dragon-fly?
A stranger hither? So am I,
And (sooth to say) I wonder why
We either of us came!

AGNES M. DARRINGTON, To a Dragonfly.

15
A man's ingress into the world is naked and
bare,

His progress through the world is trouble and care;
And lastly, his egress out of the world, is nobody knows where.
If we do well here, we shall do well there;
I can tell you no more if I preach a whole year.

JOHN EDWIN, The Eccentricities of John Edwin. Vol. i, p. 74.

Our ingress into the world
Was naked and bare;
Our progress through the world
Is trouble and care;
Our egress from the world
Will be nobody knows where:
But if we do well here,
We shall do well there.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. ii, The Cobbler of Hagenau. Quoted as "a familiar tune."

1 Not whence, but why and whither are the vital questions.

A. W. GREELY, Reminiscences, p. 338.

2 I think, oftentimes, that lives of men may be likened to wandering winds that come and go

Not knowing whence they rise, whither they blow

O'er the vast globe, voiceful of grief or glee.
PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, A Comparison.

Our life is but a dark and stormy night,
To which sense yields a weak and glimmering light.

While wandering man thinks he discerneth all
By that which makes him but mistake, and fall.

Our future's a sealed seedplot,
And what betwixt them are we?

D. G. ROSSINI, The Cloud Confines. St. 5.

9 If we could push ajar the gates of life,
And stand within, and all God's workings see,

We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery could find a key.

MARY LOUISE SMITH, Sometime.

10 What use to brood? This life of mingled pains

And joys to me

Despite of every Faith and Creed, remains
The Mystery.

TENNYSON, To Mary Boyle.

11 Never had anyone so correct an estimate of life but that circumstances, time and experience ever bring him something new and ever instruct him. (Numquam ita quisquam bene subducta ratione ad vitam fuit, Quin res, ætas usus semper aliquid apponet novi, Aliquid moneat.)

2 There are three wicks, you know, to the lamp of a man's life: brain, blood, and breath.
Press the brain a little, its light goes out followed by both the others. Stop the heart a minute, and out go all three of the wicks.
Choke the air out of the lungs, and presently the fluid ceases to supply the other centers of flame, and all is soon stagnation, cold, and darkness

3 As leaves on the trees, such is the life of man
(Ὡς περ φύλλων γερῆς, τοῖς δὲ καὶ ἀνθρώπων)

HOMER, Iliad Bk. vi, l. 146
Like leaves on trees the race of man is found,
Now green in youth, now withering on the ground

Another race the following spring supplies,
They fall successive, and successive rise
HOMER, The Iliad Bk. vi, l. 181 (Pope, tr.)

Like phantoms painted on the magic slide,
Forth from the darkness of the past we glide,
As living shadows for a moment seen
In airy pageant on the eternal screen,
Traced by a ray from one unchanging flame,
Then seek the dust and stillness whence we came

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 73
There, like the wind through woods in riot,
Through bun the gale of life blew high,

TENNISON, Lucretius, l. 228.

My life is like a summer rose
That opens to the morning sky,
But ere the shades of evening close,
Is scattered on the ground—to die.

RICHARD HENRY WILDE, My Life. Fraudulently claimed by Patrick O'Kelly.

My life is like the autumn leaf
That trembles in the moon's pale ray;
Its hold is frail—its date is brief,
Restless,—and soon to pass away.
RICHARD HENRY WILDE, My Life.

XXVI—Life: Its Sweetness

"Life is sweet, brother." "Do you think so?"
"Think so!—There's night and day, brother, both sweet things; sun, moon, and stars,
brother, all sweet things; there's likewise
a wind on the heath. Life is very sweet, brother; who would wish to die?"

GEORGE BORROW, Lovestory. Ch. 25.

So precious life is! Even to the old
The hours are as a miser's coins!

T. B. ALDRICH, Broken Music.

Have you found your life distasteful?
My life did, and does, smack sweet.
Was your youth of pleasure wasteful?
Mine I saved and hold complete.

Do your joys with age diminish?
When mine fail me, I'll complain.
Must in death your daylight finish?

My sun sets to rise again.

ROBERT BROWNING, At the "Mermaid". St. 10.

How good is man's life, the mere living! how fit to employ
All the heart and the soul and the senses forever in joy.

ROBERT BROWNING, Saul. Sec. 9.

The life of man, says our friend Herr Sauerteig, the life even of the meanest man, it were good to remember, is a Poem.

CARLSTADT, Count Cayliastro: Flight First.

Life is not void or stuff for scorners:
We have laughed loud and kept our love,
We have heard singers in tavern corners
And not forgotten the birds above:
We have known smiters and sons of thunder
And not unworthily washed with them,
We have grown wiser and lost not wonder;
And we have seen Jerusalem.

G. K. CHAMBERS, To F. C.

Life to the last enjoy'd, here Churchill lies.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Candidate, l. 152.

Of divers voices is sweet music made:
So in our life the different degrees
Render sweet harmony among these wheels.

DANTE, Paradise. Canto vi, l. 127. (Cary, tr.)

By the Lord of Ludgate it's a mad life to be lord mayor; it's a stirring life, a fine life,
a velvet life, a careful life.

DEKKER, The Shoemaker's Holiday. Act v, sc. 1.

'Tis not for nothing that we life pursue;
It pays our hopes with something still that's new.

DRYDEN, Aureng-Zebe. Act iv, sc. 1.

The life of man is the true romance, which,
when it is valiantly conducted, will yield the imagination a higher joy than any fiction.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: New England Reformers.

Life is a festival only to the wise. Seen from the rook and chimney-side of prudence, it wears a ragged and dangerous front.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Heroism.

Life is good only when it is magical and musical,
a perfect timing and consent, and when we do not anatomize it. . . . You must hear the bird's song without attempting to render it into nouns and verbs.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

When life is true to the poles of nature, the streams of truth will roll through us in song.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

Sooner or later that which is now life shall be poetry, and every fair and manly trait shall add a richer strain to the song.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

Chance cannot touch me! Time cannot hush
me!

Fear, hope, and longing, at strife,
Sink as I rise, on, on, upward forever,
Gathering strength, gaining breath—naught can sever

Me from the Spirit of Life!

MARGARET FULLER, Dryad Song. St. 4.

When life leaps in the veins, when it beats in the heart,
When it thrills as it fills every animate part,
Where lurks it? how works it? . . . we scarcely detect it.

OWEN MERZETTE, Lucile. Pt. II, canto i, sec. 5.

Life's a pudding full of plums,
Case's a causer than benjamins,
Wherefore waste our elocution
On impossible solution?

Life's a pleasant institution,
Let us take it as it comes!
W. S. GILBERT, The Gondoliers. Act I.

1 When life ceases to be a promise it does not cease to be a task; its true name even is trial.

AMIEL, Journal, 29 Jan., 1866.

2 Ah, love, let us be true
To one another! for the world, which seems
To lie before us like a land of dreams.
So various, so beautiful, so new,
Hath really neither joy, nor love, nor light,
Nor certitude, nor peace, nor help for pain;
And we are here as on a darkling plain Swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight,

Where ignorant armies clash by night.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Dover Beach, l. 29.

4 Wandering between two worlds, one dead,
The other powerless to be born,
With nowhere yet to rest my head,
Like these, on earth I wait forlorn.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Grande Chartreuse, l. 85.

What shelter to grow ripe is ours?

What leisure to grow wise? . . .

Too fast we live, too much are tried,
Too harassed, to attain
Wordsworth's sweet calm, or Goethe's wide
And luminous view to gain.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, In Memory of the Author of Obermann, l. 71.

How many noble thoughts,
How many precious feelings of man's heart,
How many loves, how many gratitudes,
Do twenty years wear out, and see expire!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Merope, l. 177.

5 With aching hands and bleeding feet
We dig and heap, lay stone on stone;
We bear the burden and the heat
Of the long day, and wish 'twere done.
Not till the hours of light return,
All we have built do we discern.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Mortality, St. 2.

For most men in a brazen prison live,
Where, in the sun's hot eye,
With heads bent o'er their toil, they languidly
Their lives to some unmeaning taskwork give.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, A Summer Night, l. 37.

4 Every life, even the most selfish and the most frivolous, is a tragedy at last, because it ends with death.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Savonarola: Preface.

I love the doubt, the dark, the fear,
That still surroundeth all things here.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Bysses to Death.

6 It is a misery to be born, a pain to live, a trouble to die. (*Nasci miserum, vivere poema,

ST. BERNARD, De Consideratione, Ch. 3.

6 There is so much trouble in coming into the world, and so much more, as well as meanness, in going out of it, that 'tis hardly worth while to be here at all.

LORD BOLINGBROKE. (EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.)

7 My life is read all backward, and the charm of life undone.

E. B. BROWNING, Lady Geraldine's Courtship.

Life treads on life, and heart on heart;
We press too close in church and mart
To keep a dream or grave apart.

E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets; l. 820.

8 O Life! thou art a galling load,
Along a rough, a weary road.

BURNS, Despondency.

9 Desolate—Life is so dreary and desolate—Women and men in the crowd meet and mingle,

Yet with itself every soul standeth single,
. . . Fighting its terrible conflicts alone.

ALICE CARY, Life, St. 2.

10 Tell me, all-judging Jove, if this be fair,
To make so short a life so full of care?

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, On Human Life.

11 I took one draught of life,
I'll tell you what I paid,
Precisely an existence—
The market-price, they said.

EMILY DICKINSON, Further Poems, cxx.

12 Ah, life could be so beautiful, Yet never is.
CARLETON DREWRY, Father and Son.

13 When I consider life, 'tis all a cheat.
Yet fool'd with hope, men favour the deceit;
Trust on, and think tomorrow will repay.
Tomorrow's falser than the former day; . . .
Strange cozenage! none would live past years
again,

Yet all hope pleasure in what yet remain;
And from the dregs of life think to receive
What the first sprightly running could not give.

DRYDEN, Aureng-Zebe, Act iv, sc. 1.

When I consider Life and its few years—
A wisp of fog betwixt us and the sun;
A call to battle, and the battle done
Ere the last echo dies within our ears;
A rose choked in the grass; an hour of fears;
The gusts that past a darkening shore do beat;
The burst of music down an unlistening street—
I wonder at the idleness of tears.

And twins, ev'n from the birth, are Misery and Man!

HOMER, Odyssey Bk vii, l 263 (Pope, tr)
I say that I am myself, but what is this Self of mine

But a knot in the tangled skein of things where chance and chance combine?
DON MARQUIS, Heir and Serf

7 Oh! take, young seraph, take thy harp,
And play to me so cheerily,

For grief is dark, and care is sharp,
And life wears on so wearily

THOMAS HOOD, To Hope

8 When I meet the morning beam,
Or lay me down at night to dream,
I hear my bones within me say,
"Another night, another day"

A E HOUSMAN, The Immortal Part

9 Life is a pill which none of us can bear to swallow without gilding

SAMUEL JOHNSON (Piozzi, Johnsoniana)

Life is to most a nauseous pill,
A treat for which they dearly pay
Let's take the good, avoid the ill,
Discharge the debt, and walk away
PHILIP FRENEAU, Human Frailty

8 Life is barren enough surely with all her trappings, let us therefore be cautious how we strip her

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellaneous Vol I, p 345

9 Human life is everywhere a state in which much is to be endured, and little to be enjoyed
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas Ch 11

Condemn'd to Hope's delusive mme,
As on we toil from day to day,
By sudden blasts, or slow decline,
Our social comforts drop away
SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Dr Robert Levett

10 Enlarge my life with multitude of days!"
In health, in sickness, thus the suppliant prays

Hides from himself his state, and shuns to know

XXX—Life: A Preparation for Death

May we so live we dread not here to die;
So die, we dread not afterward to live.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Wood and Waters.

So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan, which moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed

By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

 The great world of light that lies
 Behind all human destinies

LONGFELLOW, To a Child

7
 Medicinal as light

J R LOWELL, Commemoration Ode

8
 To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace.

New Testament Luke, i, 79

9
 The tolerance and equity of light
 That gives as freely to the shrinking flower
 As to the great oak flaring to the wind

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

10
 In the dark a glimmering light often suffices for the pilot to find the pole star and set his course.

METASTASIO, Achille Act i, sc 6.

11
 With thy long level'd rule of streaming
 light

MILTON, Comus, l 340

Where glowing embers through the room
 Teach light to counterfeit a gloom

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l 79

12
 He that has light within his own clear breast
 May sit i' the center and enjoy bright day,
 But he that hides a dark soul and foul thoughts

Benighted walks under the mid-day sun

MILTON, Comus, l 381

Not always right in all men's eyes,
 But faithful to the light within

O W HOLMES, A Birthday Tribute

13
 Dark with excessive bright thy skirts appear MILTON Paradise Lost Bk iii, l 380 Often misquoted "dark with excessive light"

14 Shut the windows that the house may be lighted (Claude fenestras ut luceat domus)
 DR HENRY MORE, his motto (WARD, Life
 Ch 12)

15
 Lead Kundry Light, amid the encircling gloom,

Lead Thou me on!

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, Pillar of the Cloud

16
 And thus I know whether the one True
 Light

Kindle to Love, or Wrath consume me quite,
 One flash of It within the Tavern caught
 Better than in the Temple lost outright

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubaiyat St 77 (Fitzgerald, tr)

17
 Where art thou, beam of light? Hunters from the mossy rock saw ye the blue eyed fair?
 OSSIAN, Temora Bk vi

18
 Out of light a little profit (Ex luce lucellum)

WILLIAM PITT, referring to the tax on windows Suggested by Robert Lowe, Chancellor of the Exchequer, as a motto for match boxes, in 1871, when a match tax was recommended by the government

19
 Light is sown for the righteous Old Testament Psalms, xcvi, 11 (Lux orta est —Vulgate)

A lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path
 Old Testament Psalms, cxii, 105

20 Lucus, a grove, is so called because, from the dense shade, there is very little light there (Lucus, quia, umbra opacus, parum luceat)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoris Bk i, ch 6, sec 34 Hence the proverb, "Lucus a non lucendo," a grove (lucus) from not being lucent

As by the way of innuendo,
Lucas is made a non lucendo

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost Bk II, l 257
Having entirely banished the letter A from his first book, which was called Alpha (as Lucas a non Lucendo) because there was not an Alpha in it

ADDISON, The Spectator No 59

Light seeking light doth light of light beguile

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost Act I, sc 1, l 77

Put out the light and then put out the light
If I quench thee thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,
Should I repent me but once put out thy light

Thou cunningst pattern of excelling nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat
That can thy light relume

SHAKESPEARE, Othello Act V, sc 2, l 7

The two noblest things which are sweetness and light

SWIFT, The Battle of the Books See also under CULTURE

Where God and Nature met in light

TENNYSOON, In Memoriam Pt CXI, st 5

The thing to do is to supply light and not heat

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Pittsburgh 29 Jan., 1916

The light that never was, on sea or land,
The consecration and the Poet's dream

WORDSWORTH, Elegiac Stanzas, Suggested by a Picture of Peele Casile in a Storm, l 15

But ne'er to a seductive lay
Let faith be given,
Nor deem that light which leads astray
Is light from Heaven

Then flash'd the living lightning from her eyes

POPE, The Rape of the Lock Canto II, l 155

Be thou as lightning in the eyes of France,
For ere thou canst report I will be there,
The thunder of my cannon shall be heard
So hence! Be thou the trumpet of our wrath

SHAKESPEARE, King John Act I, sc 1, l 24

Sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vaunt-couriers to oak-cleaving thunderbolts

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear Act III, sc 2, l 4

You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames

Into her scornful eyes!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear Act II, sc 4, l 167

The most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross lightning!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear Act IV, sc 7, l 34.

Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt

Splitt'st the unwedgeable and gnarled oak
Than the soft myrtle

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure Act II, sc 2, l 114

Brief as the lightning in the collied night,

That, in a spleen, unfolds both heaven and earth,

And ere a man hath power to say "Behold!"
The jaws of darkness do devour it up:
So quick bright things come to confusion.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act i, sc. 1, l. 145.

It is too rash, too unadvised, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which does cease to be Ere one can say "It lightens."

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 118.

Thunder crumples the sky,
Lightning tears at it.

LEONORA SPEYER, The Squall.

We saw the large white stars rise one by one,
Or, from the darken'd glen,

Saw God divide the night with flying flame,
And thunder on the everlasting hills.

TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women, l. 223.

The lightnings flash a larger curve, and more
The noise astounds; till overhead a sheet
Of livid flame discloses wide, then shuts
And opens wider; shuts and opens still Expansive, wrapping ether in a blaze.
Follows the loosen'd aggravated roar,
Enlarging, deepening, mingling, peal on peal,
Crush'd horrible, convulsing heaven and earth.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1136.

Knowledge hath clipped the lightning's wings,
and mewed it up for a purpose.

blue has hit strange victims.

THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. iii, p. 347.

Reach the boys—

I'll tie a garland here about his head;
I'll keep my boy from lightning.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil, v. 4. The boy was supposed by the Romans to protect against lightning because it was the tree of Apollo; hence, according to Pliny, Tiberius and other Roman emperors wore a wreath of bay as an amulet, especially in thunder storms.

LIKENESS

Our houses . . . are so like to another, that ye can less discern an egg from an egg.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works, p. 90. (1542)

LILAC

10 O lilac, whiter than swan's down,
Among your soft-green leaves,
Purer than snow new-fallen on the boughs.
F. S. FLINT, Lilac.

11 Lilacs, False blue, White, Purple,
Colour of lilac,
Your great puffs of flowers
Are everywhere in this my New England. . . .

Lilacs in dooryards
Holding quiet conversation with an early moon;

Lilacs watching a deserted house; . . .
Lilacs, wind-beaten, staggering under a lopsided shock of bloom, . . .

You are everywhere.

AMY LOWELL, Lilacs.

Now you are a very decent flower,
A reticent flower,
A curiously clear-cut, candid flower,
Standing beside clean doorways,
Friendly to a house-cat and a pair of spectacles,
Making poetry out of a bit of moonlight
And a hundred or two sharp blossoms.

AMY LOWELL, Lilacs.

12 Go down to Kew in lilac-time, in lilac-time,
in lilac-time;

Go down to Kew in lilac-time (it isn't far from London!)

And you shall wander hand in hand with love in summer's wonderland;

Go down to Kew in lilac-time (it isn't far from London!)

ALFRED NOYES, The Barrel-Organ.

AMELIA C. WELBY, Hopeless Love.

14 Warble me now for joy of lilac-time.

WALT WHITMAN, Warble for Lilac-Time.

When lilacs last in the dooryard bloom'd,
And the great star early droop'd in the western sky in the night,

I mourn'd, and yet shall mourn with ever-returning spring.

WALT WHITMAN, When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd. St. 1.

The lilac-bush tall-growing with heart-shaped leaves of rich green,
With many a pointed blossom rising delicate, with the perfume strong I love,

With every leaf a miracle

WALT WHITMAN, When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd St 3

1 Who thought of the lilac? "I," dew said,
"I made the lilac out of my head"
"She made the lilac? Pooh!" trilled a linnet,
And each dew-note had a lilac in it

LINCOLN, ABRAHAM

2 Abraham wore a stovepipe hat
That brushed the stars down where he walked;
His eyes were terrible to look at,

His eyes were black pools when he talked.
JOSEPH AUSLANDER, Abraham Lincoln.

3 Some opulent force of genius, soul, and race,
Some deep life-current from far centuries
Flowed to his mind and lighted his sad eyes,
And gave his name, among great names, high place.

JOEL BENTON, Another Washington.

4 Into his heart's great jar Truth's brother poured
Strong love for men and freedom—fatal
deed!

Some liked the wine, and some its making scared;

One broke the jar that held his own life's

CHARLES GRANGER BLANDIN, Lincoln.

5 No king this man, by grace of God's intent;
No, something better, freeman,—President!

A nature, modeled on a higher plan,
Lord of himself, an inborn gentleman!

GEORGE HENRY BOKER, Our Heroic Themes.
Read before Phi Beta Kappa at Harvard, 20 July, 1865, one of the earliest and most discriminating tributes to Lincoln.

Great in his goodness, humble in his state,
Firm in his purpose, yet not passionate,
He led his people with a tender hand,
And won by love a sway beyond command.

GEORGE HENRY BOKER, Our Heroic Themes.

6 Oh, slow to smite and swift to spare,
Gentle and merciful and just!

Who, in the fear of God, didst bear
The sword of power, a nation's trust!

Of chance, he was by liberal Nature sent
To lead men nobly with unconscious power,
And justify the law of accident.

REMBRANDT W. B. DITMARS, Lincoln.

10 Hail, Lincoln! As the swift years lengthen
Still more majestic grows thy fame;

The ties that bind us to thee strengthen;
Starlike-immortal shines thy name
NATHAN HASKELL DOLE, Lincoln's Birthday.

15 Strange mingling of mirth and tears, of the tragic and grotesque, of cap and crown, of Socrates and Rabelais, of Æsop and Marcus Aurelius—Lincoln, the gentlest memory of the world.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Lincoln.

Lincoln was not a type. He stands alone—no ancestors, no fellows, no successors.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Lincoln.

1
Hundreds of people are now engaged in smoothing out the lines on Lincoln's face—forcing all features to the common mold—so that he may be known, not as he really was, but, according to their poor standard, as he should have been.

If the good people in their wisdom shall see fit to keep me in the background, I have been too familiar with disappointment to be much chagrined.

Nobody ever expected me to be President. In my poor, lean, lank face nobody has ever seen that any cabbages were sprouting.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, against Douglas, in campaign of 1860.

They have seen in his [Douglas's] round, jolly, fruitful face, post-offices, land-offices, marshals-ships and cabinet-appointments, charge-ships and foreign missions, bursting out in wonderful exuberance.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, against Douglas, in campaign of 1860.

4
His head is bowed. He thinks of men and kings.

Yea, when the sick world cries, how can he sleep?

Too many peasants fight, they know not why;

Too many homesteads in black terror weep.

VACHEL LINDSAY, Abraham Lincoln Walks at Midnight.

5
That nation has not lived in vain which has given the world Washington and Lincoln, the best great men and the greatest good men whom history can show.

HENRY CABOT LODGE, Lincoln. Address before Massachusetts Legislature, 12 Feb., 1909.

6
Great captains, with their guns and drums,
Disturb our judgment for the hour,
But at last silence comes;
These are all gone, and, standing like a tower,
Our children shall behold his fame,

The kindly-earnest, brave, foreseeing man,
Sagacious, patient, dreading praise, not blame,
New birth of our new soil, the first American.
J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

Nature, they say, doth dote,
And cannot make a man
Save on some worn-out plan
Repeating us by rote:
For him her Old World moulds aside she threw
And, choosing sweet clay from the breast
Of the unexhausted West,
With stuff untainted shaped a hero new.
J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

7
A blend of mirth and sadness, smiles and tears;

A quaint knight-errant of the pioneers;
A homely hero, born of star and sod;
A Peasant-Prince; a Masterpiece of God.
WALTER MALONE, Abraham Lincoln.

8
When the Norn Mother saw the Whirlwind
Hour
Greatening and darkening as it hurried on,
She left the Heaven of Heroes and came down
To make a man to meet the mortal need.
She took the tried clay of the common road—

Clay warm yet with the genial heat of earth,
Dashed through it all a strain of prophecy,
Tempered the heap with thrill of human tears
Then mixed a laughter with the serious stuff.
EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

Here was a man to hold against the world,
A man to match the mountains and the sea.
EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

The color of the ground was in him, the red earth,
The smack and tang of elemental things:
The rectitude and patience of the cliff,
The goodwill of the rain that loves all leaves,
The friendly welcome of the wayside well,
The courage of the bird that dares the sea,
The gladness of the wind that shakes the corn,
The pity of the snow that hides all scars, . . .
The tolerance and equity of light.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

One fire was on his spirit, one resolve—
To send the keen axe to the root of wrong,
Clearing a free way for the feet of God,
The eyes of conscience testing every stroke.
EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

So came the Captain with the mighty heart;
And when the judgment thunders split the house,
Wrenching the rafters from their ancient rest,
He held the ridgepole up, and spiked again
The rafters of the house.
EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

And when he fell in whirlwind, he went down
As when a lordly cedar, green with boughs,
Goes down with a great shout upon the hills,
And leaves a lonesome place against the sky.
EDWIN MARKHAM, Lincoln, The Man of the People.

His grave a nation's heart shall be,
His monument a people free!
CAROLINE ATHERTON MASON, President Lincoln's Grave.

I am Ann Rutledge who sleeps beneath these

Wedded to him, not through union,
But through separation.

But from her beauty and her doom
A man rose merciful and just;
And a great People still can feel
The passion of her dust.
EDWIN MARKHAM, Ann Rutledge.

When Abraham Lincoln was murdered
The one thing that interested Matthew Arnold

Was that the assassin Shouted in Latin
As he leapt on the stage.
This convinced Matthew
There was still hope for America.

CHRISTOPHER MOSELEY, Point of View. The Latin phrase was "Sic semper tyrannis."

MARY OWENS, explaining her refusal to marry
Lincoln.

I have now come to the conclusion never again to think of marrying, and for this reason: I can never be satisfied with anyone who would be blockhead enough to have me.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to Mrs. Browning,
1 April, 1838, after being rejected by Mary Owens.

For he, to whom we had applied
Our shopman's test of age and worth,
Was elemental when he died,
As he was ancient at his birth:
The saddest among kings of earth,
Bowed with a galling crown, this man
Met rancor with a cryptic mirth,
Laconic—and Olympian.

That bore a nation in its hold;

From this mute witness understand
What Lincoln was—how large of mould.
E. C. STEDMAN, The Hand of Lincoln.

Built up from yon large hand appears:
A type that nature wills to plan
But once in all a people's years.

O Captain! my Captain! our fearful trip is done,
The ship has weather'd every rack, the prize we sought is won,
The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting,
While follow eyes the steady keel, the vessel grim and daring,
But O heart! heart! heart!
O the bleeding drops of red,
Where on the deck my Captain lies,
Fallen cold and dead

You lay a wreath on murdered Lincoln's bier,
You, who with mocking pencil went to trace
Broad for the self-complacent British sneer,
His length of shambling limb, his furrowed face
TOM TAYLOR, Abraham Lincoln This poem appeared in Punch, 6 May, 1865, accompanying a full-page cartoon with the caption, "Britannia Sympathizes with Columbia," representing Punch among the mourners at Lincoln's bier, upon which Britannia is laying a wreath. It was Punch's apology for its scurrilous abuse and caricature of Lincoln during the whole period of the war. The poem has often been ascribed to Shirley Brooks, but an entry in his diary, under date of 10

- May, 1865, is conclusive evidence that the verses were written by Taylor. Brooks wrote 'Dined Punch all there. Let out my views about some verses on Lincoln in which T. T. had not only made P. eat umble pie, but swallow dish and all.' So far from being the writer of the verses, he condemned their publication. At the time the poem appeared, it was also ascribed to Tennyson.
- Beside this corpse that bears for winding sheet
The Stars and Stripes he lived to rear anew,
Between the mourners at his head and feet,
Sav, scurril jester, is there room for you?
Yes, he had lived to shame me from my sneer,
To lame my pencil and confute my pen—
To make me own this hind of Princes peer,
This rail splitter a true born king of men
TOM TAYLOR, Abraham Lincoln
- Sore heart, so stopped when it at last beat high!
Sad life, cut short just as its triumph came!

In short, there never was a better hearer

BYRON, Don Juan Canto xiv, st 37

And listens like a three years' child

S T COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner Pt 1

It takes a great man to make a good listener

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Brevia

Give us grace to listen well

JOHN KEBLE, Christian Year Palm Sunday

To listen well is a second inheritance (Bene audire alterum patrimonium est)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae No 93

2 Were we as eloquent as angels, yet we should please some men, some women and some children much more by listening, than by talking

C C COLTON, Lacon No 13

3 He listens to good purpose who takes note (Bene ascolta chi la nota)

DANTE, Inferno Canto xv, l 100

4 The grace of listening is lost if the listener's attention is demanded not as a favor but as a right (In audiendi officio perit gratia, si reposita)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles Bk 1, epis 13

5 Listeners seldom hear good of themselves

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs

Hearkeners, we say, seldom hear good of them selves

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries Ecclesiastes, vii

I—Literature Definitions

10 Literature is the thought of thinking Souls
CARLYLE, Essays Memoirs of the Life of Scott

11 Literature is "The expression of a nation's mind in writing"

CHANNING, Remarks on American Literature

12 Literature is an art a science, a profession, a trade, and an accident The literature that is of lasting value is an accident It is something that happens

S MCC CROTHERS, Free Trade vs Protectionism in Literature

13 There is first the literature of knowledge, and secondly the literature of power The function of the first is—to teach, the function of the second is—to move, the first is a rudder, the second an oar or a sail The first speaks to the mere discursive understanding the second speaks ultimately it may happen, to the higher understanding of reason

DE QUINCEY, Essays on the Poets Pope

Books, we are told, propose to instruct or to amuse Indeed! The true antithesis to knowledge, in this case is not pleasure but power All that is literature seeks to communicate power all that is not literature seeks to communicate knowledge

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Letters to a Young Man

No 3 De Quincey adds that he is indebted for this distinction to "many years' conversation with Mr Wordsworth"

Literature exists to please—to lighten the burden of men's lives to make them for a short while forget their sorrows and their sins, their silent hearths, their disappointed hopes, their grim futures—and those men of letters are the best loved who have best performed literature's truest office

BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta Office of Literature

Literature does not please by moralizing us, it moralizes us because it pleases

H W GARROD, The Profession of Poetry p 264

14 Literature is an avenue to glory, ever open for those ingenious men who are deprived of honours or of wealth

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius Ch 24

Literature—the most seductive, the most deceiving, the most dangerous of professions

JOHN MORLEY, Life of Burke, p 9

15 Literature is the effort of man to indemnify himself for the wrongs of his condition

EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect London

16 Literature, taken in all its bearings, forms the grand line of demarcation between the human and the animal kingdoms.

WILLIAM GOSWOLD, The Enquirer: Early Tastes for Reading.

Literature flourishes best when it is half a trade and half an art.

WILLIAM RALPH INGE, The Victorian Age.

Literature was formerly an art and finance a trade: to-day it is the reverse.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. I, No. 65.

The classics are only primitive literature. They belong to the same class as primitive machinery and primitive music and primitive medicine.

STEPHEN LEACOCK, Behind the Beyond: Homer and the Humbug.

The fashion of liking Racine will pass like that of coffee. (La mode d'aimer Racine passera comme la mode du café.)

MADAME DE SÉVIGNÉ, as quoted by Voltaire. (Lettres, 29 Jan., 1690.) La Harpe compressed the epigram to, "Racine passera comme le café." Since neither Racine nor coffee has passed, the prophecy may, from one angle, be considered a good one.

Language put to its best purpose, used at its utmost power and with the greatest skill, and recorded that it may not pass away, evaporate and be forgotten, is what we call, for want of a better word, literature.

J. W. MACCALL, Classical Studies, p. 214.

American literature is English literature made in this country. . . . The American spirit in literature is a myth.

JOHN MACY, Spirit of American Literature. Ch. 1.

Alas for the South! Her books have grown fewer—

She was never much given to literature.

J. GORDON COOGLER, An immortal rhyme by a southern bard.

Take the whole range of imaginative literature, and we are all wholesale borrowers. In every matter that relates to invention, to use, or beauty, or form, we are borrowers.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, The Lost Arts.

Literature is a succession of books from books. . . . Every novel was suckled at the breasts of older novels, and great mothers are often prolific of anemic offspring.

JOHN MACY, Spirit of American Literature. Ch. 1.

Great literature is simply language charged with meaning to the utmost possible degree.

ESRA POUND, How to Read. Pt. II.

To turn events into ideas is the function of literature.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Review, p. 133.

Just as we suffer from excess in all things, so we suffer from excess in literature. (Quemadmodum omnium rerum, sic litterarum quoque intemperantia laboramus.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilius. Epist. cvi, 12.

Unhealthy literature. (Nihil sanantibus litteris.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilius. Epist. lix, sec. 15.

Literature in many of its branches is no other than the shadow of good talk.

R. L. STEVENSON, Memories and Portraits: Talk and Talkers.

Literature must be an analysis of experience and a synthesis of the findings into a unity.

REBECCA WEST, Ending in Earnest.

Literature always anticipates life. It does not copy it, but moulds it to its purpose.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying.

Literature is the orchestration of platitudes.

THORNTON WILDER, Literature.

II—Literature: Apothegms

Life comes before literature, as the material always comes before the work. The hills are full of marble before the world blooms with statues.

PHILLIPS BROOKS, Literature and Life.

There is no such thing as either literature or poetry for the masses.

JEAN COCTEAU, Le Rappel à l'Ordre, p. 136.

I made a compact with myself that in my person literature should stand by itself, of itself, and for itself.

DICKENS, Speech, at Liverpool, 1869.

Time, the great destroyer of other men's happiness, only enlarges the patrimony of literature to its possessor.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 22.

Our high respect for a well-read man is praise enough of literature.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation.

It is life that shakes and rocks us; it is literature which stabilizes and confirms.

H. W. GARROD, Profession of Poetry, p. 237.

Literature, like a gypsy, to be picturesque, should be a little ragged.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Literary Men.

One of the evils of our literature is that our learned men are without wit, and our witty men without learning. (Un des maux de notre littérature, c'est que nos savants ont peu d'esprit, et que nos hommes d'esprit ne sont pas savants)

JOUBERT, Pensées No 258

1 National literature begins with fables and ends with novels (La littérature des peuples commence par les fables et finit par les romans)

JOUBERT, Pensées No 383

Literature and fiction are two entirely different things. Literature is a luxury, fiction is a necessity

4 The republic of letters (La république des lettres)

MOLIERE, Le Mariage Forcé Sc 4, l 2 (1664)

A pamphlet which should make a great noise in the republic of letters (Une brochure qui doit faire grand bruit dans la république des lettres)

Le SAGE Gil Blas Bk xii, ch 7 (1715)

The death of Dr Hudson is a loss to the republic of letters

WILLIAM KING Letter 7 Jan, 1719 FIELDING, Tom Jones Bk xiv, ch 1 (1749)

"The Republic of Letters" is a very common expression among the Europeans

GOLDSMITH, Citizen of the World Letter 20

The Commonwealth of Letters

ANDERSON, The Spectator No 529 (1712)

5 Literary fame is the only fame of which a wise man ought to be ambitious because it is the only lasting and living fame

ROBERT SOUTHEY, as quoted by Lander (FORSTER, Life of Lander Bk vii, ch 13)

6 Literature is full of perfumes

LONDON

I—London—Praise

7 As I came down the Highgate Hill,
The Highgate Hill, the Highgate Hill,
As I came down the Highgate Hill
I met the sun's bravado.

And saw below me, fold on fold,
Grey to pearl and pearl to gold,
Thus London like a land of old,
The land of Eldorado

HENRY BASHFORD, Romances

8 What a place to plunder! (Was fur Plunder!)

FIELD MARSHAL VON BLÜCHER, on viewing London from St Paul's, after the Peace Banquet at Oxford, 1814 The correct translation is, of course, "What rubbish!"

The bold old Renter looked down from St Paul's and sighed out, "Was fur Plunder!" The German women plundered, the German cooks and attendants plundered, even Mustapha and Mahomet, the German negroes, had a share of the booty

THACKERAY, The Four Georges George I

9 London is the clearing house of the world
JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech, Guildhall, London, 19 Jan, 1904

The centre of a thousand trades
COWPER, Hope, l 248

10 Oh London is a fine town,
A very famous city,

Where all the streets are paved with gold,
And all the maidens pretty

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Heir-at-Law Act I, sc 2

11 Where has commerce such a mart,
So rich, so throng'd, so dram'd, and so supplied

As London, opulent, enlarg'd, and still Increasing, London?

COWPER, The Task Bk i, l 719

Oh thou, resort and mart of all the earth,
Chequer'd with all complexions of mankind,
And spotted with all crimes, in which I see Much that I love, and more that I admire,
And all that I abhor, thou freckl'd fair,
That pleasest and yet shock'st me

COWPER, The Task Bk iii, l 835

15 The Old Lady in Threadneedle Street in Danger

JAMES GILRAY Title of caricature dated 22 May, 1797, referring to the Bank of England, which is situated in Threadneedle Street London, and which had suspended cash payments 26 Feb, 1797 The directors of the Bank were so-called by William Cobbett, because, like Mrs Partington, they tried with their brooms to sweep back the Atlantic flood of national progress

A silver curl paper that I myself took off the shining locks of the ever-beautiful old lady of Threadneedle Street

DICKENS, Dr Marigold Referring to a bank note

1 London is the only place in which the child grows completely up into the man.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Essays: On Londoners and Country People.

I do not think there is anything deserving the name of society to be found out of London. . . . You can pick your society nowhere but in London.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk: On Coffee-House Politicians.

2 When a man is tired of London he is tired of life; for there is in London all that life can afford.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1777.)

3 The noble spirit of the metropolis is the life-blood of the state, collected at the heart.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 37.

4 Ah London! London! our delight,
Great flower that opens but at night,
Great City of the midnight sun.
Whose day begins when day is done.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, A Ballad of London.

Paris, half Angel, half Grisette,
I would that I were with thee yet;
But London waits me, like a wife,
London, the love of my whole life.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Paris Day by Day.

5 I love the haunts of old Cockaigne,
Where wit and wealth were squandered.
F. LOCKYER-LAMPSON, St. James's Street.

6 In that temple of silence and reconciliation where the enmities of twenty generations lie buried, in the Great Abbey which has during many ages afforded a quiet resting-place to those whose minds and bodies have been shattered by the contentions of the Great Hall.

MACAULAY, Essays: Warren Hastings.

7 Go where we may, rest where we will,
Eternal London haunts us still.

THOMAS MOORE, Rhymes on the Road. No. 9.

8 In town let me live then, in town let me die
For in truth I can't relish the country, not I.
If one must have a villa in summer to dwell,
Oh give me the sweet shady side of Pall Mall.

CHARLES MORRIS, The Contrast.

9 Dear, damn'd, distracting town.
PORT, A Farewell to London, l. 1.

10 I hope to see London once ere I die.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 3, l. 64.

11 The way was long and weary,
But gallantly they strode,
A country lad and lassie,
Along the heavy road.

The night was dark and stormy,
But blithe of heart were they,
For shining in the distance
The lights of London lay.

O gleaming lights of London,
That gem of the city's crown;
What fortunes be within you,
O Lights of London Town!

GEORGE R. SIMES, Lights of London: Song.

12 To merry London, my most kindly nurse,
That to me gave this life's first native source.
EDMUND SPENSER, Prothalamion, l. 128.

13 Oh, mine in snows and summer heats,
These good old Tory brick-built streets!
My eye is pleased with all it meets
In Bloomsbury

WILFRED WHITTEN, Bloomsbury.

And as sure as London is built of bricks.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansiegg: Her Education.

14 Earth has not anything to show more fair:
Dull would he be of soul who could pass by
A sight so touching in its majesty.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. ii,
No. 36. Composed upon Westminster Bridge.

Ne'er saw I, never felt, a calm so deep!
The river glideth at his own sweet will:
Dear God! the very houses seem asleep;
And all that mighty heart is lying still!

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. ii,
No. 36.

II—London: Criticism

15 Lo, where huge London, huger day by day,
O'er six fair counties spreads its hideous sway!
ALFRED ATCHIN, The Golden Age.

16 I came to Gotham, where many, if not all,
I saw were fools. (Veni Gotham, ubi multos, Si non omnes, vidi stultos.)

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, Barnaba Ritractum.
(1638)

A mighty mass of brick, and smoke, and shipping,
Dirty and dusty, but as wide as eye Could reach, with here and there a sail just skipping

In sight, then lost amidst the forestry
Of masts; a wilderness of steeples peeping
On tiptoe through their sea-coal canopy;
A huge, dun cupola, like a foolscap crown
On a fool's head—and there is London Town!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 82.

Thou art in London—in that pleasant place,
Where every kind of mischief's daily brewing.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 23.

17 That monstrous tuberosity of civilised life,
the capital of England.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 6.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 93

For who would leave unbrib'd Hibernia's land,
Or change the rocks of Scotland for the Strand?

Here malice rapine, accident, conspire,
And now a rabble rages, now a fire,
Their ambush here relentless ruffians lay,
And here the fell attorney prowls for prey,
Here falling houses thunder on your head,
And here a female atheist talks you dead

LONGFELLOW, HENRY WADSWORTH

O gracious Poet and benign,
Beloved presence! now as then
Thou standest by the hearths of men
THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Longfellow

The New World's sweetest singer! Time may lay

Rude touch on some, thy betters, yet for thee
Thy seat is where the throned immortals be CRAVEN L. BETTS, Longfellow

Whose Muse, benignant and serene,
Still keeps his Autumn chaplet green
Because his verse is pure!

AUSTIN DOBSON, Longfellow

Ah! gentlest soul! how gracious, how benign Breathes through our troubled life that voice of thine,

Filled with a sweetness born of happier spheres,
That wins and warms, that kindles, softens,
cheers,

That calms the wilkiest woe and stays the bitterest tears!

O. W. HOLMES, To H. W. Longfellow.

You may say that he's smooth and all that till you're hoarse,
But remember that elegance also is force;
After polishing granite as much as you will,
The heart keeps its tough old persistency
still.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1311.

The winds have talked with him confidingly;
The trees have whispered to him; and the night

Hath held him gently as a mother might,
And taught him all sad tones of melody.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, Longfellow.

A pure sweet spirit, generous and large
Was thine, dear poet. Calm, unturbulent,
Its course along Life's various ways it went,
Like some broad river. . . . Ever to the sea . . .

Thy life flowed on, from all low passions free,
Filled with high thoughts, charmed into Poesy
To all the world a solace and delight.

W. W. STORY, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

The gentleman was a sweet, beautiful soul, but I have entirely forgotten his name.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Remark, as he stood

13 In that dark land of mystic dream
Where dark Osiris sprung,
It bloomed beside his sacred stream
While yet the world was young;
And every secret Nature told,
Of golden wisdom's power,
Is nestled still in every fold,
Within the Lotos flower.
WILLIAM WINTER, A Lotos Flower.

LOUSE

14 Ha! Wha're ye gaun, ye crowlin' ferlie!
Your impudence protects you sairly;
I canna say but ye strunt rarely
Owre gauze an' lace;
Tho' faith! I fear ye dine but sparely
On sic a place.
BURNS, To a Louse.

Ye ugly, creepin', blashit wonner,
Detested, shunn'd by saunt an' sinner!
How dare ye set your fit upon her,
Sae fine a lady?
Gae somewhere else, and seek your dinner
On some poor body.
BURNS, To a Louse.

15 Better a louse in the pot than no flesh at all.
JOHN CLARKE, Paramiologia, 241. (1639)

16 I care not I, sir, not three skips of a louse.
BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub, ii, l. (1633)

Lady Montague told me, and in her own house,
"I do not care for you three skips of a louse."
I forgive her, for women, however well-bred,
Will still talk of that which runs most in their head.

HENRY FOX, Impromptu Retort, to Lady
Montague.

17 It is a familiar beast to man, and signifies
—love.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 21.

I—Love: Definitions

18 Nuptial love maketh mankind; friendly love perfecteth it; wanton love corrupteth and debaseth it.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love.

If divine Plato's tenets they be true,
Two Venuses, two loves there be;
The one from heaven, unbegotten still,
Which knits our souls in unity;
The other famous over all the world,

Binding the hearts of gods and men,
Disonest, wanton, and seducing she,
Rules whom she will, both where and when.
BERNARDUS, Epigram. (BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. i, mem. 1, subs. 2.)

1 Ask not of me, love, what is love?
Ask what is good of God above—
Ask of the great sun what is light—
Ask what is darkness of the night—
Ask sin of what may be forgiven—
Ask what is happiness of Heaven—
Ask what is folly of the crowd—
Ask what is fashion of the shroud—
Ask what is sweetness of thy kiss—
Ask of thyself what beauty is
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Large Party and Entertainment. See also BEAUTY AND LOVE.

2 Love is a fiend, a fire, a heaven, a hell,
Where pleasure, pain, and sad repentance dwell.
RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Shepherd's Content. St. 38.

3 Love is that orbit of the restless soul
Whose circle grazes the confines of space,
Bounding within the limits of its race
Utmost extremes.
GEORGE HENRY BAKER, Sonnet: Love.

4 Unless you can think, when the song is done,
No other is soft in the rhythm;
Unless you can feel, when left by One,
That all men else go with him;
Unless you can know, when unpraised by his breath,
That your beauty itself wants proving;
Unless you can swear "For life, for death!"—
Oh, fear to call it loving!
E. B. BROWNING, A Woman's Shortcomings.

✓ Unless you can muse in a crowd all day
On the absent face that fixed you;
Unless you can love, as the angels may,
With the breadth of heaven betwixt you;
Unless you can dream that his faith is fast,
Through befoving and unbehaving;
Unless you can die when the dream is past—
Oh, never call it loving!
E. B. BROWNING, A Woman's Shortcomings.

5 Love is the business of the idle, but the idleness of the busy.
BULWER-LYTTON, Riensi. Ch. 4.

✓ Love has no thought of self!
Love buys not with the ruthless usurer's gold
The loathsome prostitution of a hand
Without a heart! Love sacrifices all things
To bless the thing it loves!
BULWER-LYTTON, The Lady of Lyons. Act v, sc. 2, l. 23.

6 All love, at first, like generous wine,
Ferments and frets until 'tis fine;

But, when 'tis settled on the lee,
And from th' impurer matter free,
Becomes the richer still the older,
And proves the pleasanter the colder.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 361.

7 Yes, Love indeed is light from heaven;
A spark of that immortal fire
With angels shared, by Allah given,
To lift from earth our low desire.
BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1131

Love! the surviving gift of Heaven,
The choicest sweet of Paradise,
In life's else bitter cup distilled
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Ode to the Memory of Burns, l. 16.

8 Love is ever the beginning of Knowledge as fire is of light.

CARLYLE, Essays: Death of Goethe.

A loving heart is the beginning of all knowledge.
CARLYLE, Essays: Biography.

Knowledge is the parent of love; wisdom, love itself.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

9 What is love? 'tis nature's treasure,
'Tis the storehouse of her joys;
'Tis the highest heaven of pleasure,
'Tis a bliss which never cloy.
THOMAS CHATTERTON, The Revenge. Act i, 2.

✓ Ah, what is love? It is a pretty thing,
As sweet unto a shepherd as a king,
And sweeter too,
For kings have cares that wait upon a crown,
And cares can make the sweetest love to frown.
ROBERT GREENE, The Shepherd's Wife's Song.

What thing is love?—for (well I wot) love is a thing.

It is a prick, it is a sting.
It is a pretty, pretty thing;
It is a fire, it is a coal,
Whose flame creeps in at every hole!
GEORGE PEELE, The Hunting of Cupid.

10 Love's but the frailty of the mind,
When 'tis not with ambition join'd.
CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iii, sc. 12

And love's the noblest frailty of the mind.
DRYDEN, The Indian Emperor. Act ii, sc. 2.

✓ That reason of all unreasonable actions.
DRYDEN, The Assignment. Act iii, sc. 1.

11 When too much zeal doth fire devotion,
Love is not love, but superstition.
RICHARD CORBET, R. C.

12 Our love is principle, and has its root
In reason, is judicious, manly, free.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 353.

13 Love is a sickness full of woes,
All remedies refusing;

A plant that with most cutting grows,
Most barren with best using.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Hymen's Triumph.

Many are the names applied to friendship;
but where youth and beauty enter in, there friendship is rightly called love and is held to be the fairest of the gods.

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, Third Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 99.

Knightly love is blent with reverence
As heavenly air is blent with heavenly blue.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i.

In the last analysis, love is only the reflection of a man's own worthiness from other men.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

Love, which is the essence of God, is not for levity, but for the total worth of man.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

Love is the blossom where there blows
Every thing that lives or grows.

GILES FLETCHER, Christ's Victory.

Love is life's end (an end, but never ending);
All joys, all sweets, all happiness, awarding;
Love is life's wealth (ne'er spent, but ever spending);

More rich by giving, taking by discarding;
Love's life's reward, rewarded in rewarding.

GILES FLETCHER, Britann's Ida. Canto ii,
st. 8.

Love is the tyrant of the heart; it darkens
Reason, confounds discretion; deaf to counsel,
It runs a headlong course to desperate madness.

JOHN FORD, The Lover's Melancholy. Act iii,
sc. 3, l. 105.

Love is God's essence; Power but his attribute: therefore is his love greater than his power.

RICHARD GARNETT, De Flagello Myrteo. Pt. iv.

Thou canst not pray to God without praying to Love, but mayest pray to Love without praying to God.

RICHARD GARNETT, De Flagello Myrteo. Pt.
xiii.

It is the special quality of love not to be able to remain stationary, to be obliged to increase under pain of diminishing.

ANDRÉ GIDE, The Counterfeiters. Pt. iii, ch. 5.

Love is a platform upon which all ranks meet.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act ii.

Love and desire are the spirit's wings to great deeds. (Lust und Liebe sind die Fittige zu grossen Thaten.)

GÖTTE, Iphigenia auf Tauris. Act ii, sc. 1.

Love is a lock that linketh noble minds,
Faith is the key that shuts the spring of love.

ROBERT GREENE, Alcida.

10

Love is a circle, that doth restless move
In the same sweet eternity of love.

ROBERT HEARICK, Love, What It Is.

To love is to know the sacrifices which eternity exacts from life.

JOHN OLIVER HOBBS, School for Saints. Ch.
25.

In love inhere these evils—first war, then peace. (In amore hæc sunt mala, bellum, Pax rursum.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 267.

Love's like the flies, and, drawing-room or garden, goes all over a house.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Jerrold's Wit: Love.

Love is only one of many passions . . . and has no great influence on the sum of life.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. ix, p. 244.

Love is the leech of life, next to our Lord,
It is the graft of peace, the nearest road to heaven.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus ii, l. 201.

Love keeps the cold out better than a cloak.
It serves for food and raiment.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc.
5, l. 52.

True Love is but a humble, low-born thing,
And hath its food served up in earthen ware;
It is a thing to walk with, hand in hand,
Through the everydayness of this workday world.

J. R. LOWELL, Love, l. 1.

Love is a beautiful dream.

WILLIAM SHARP, Cor Cordium.

Therefore the love which us doth bind,
But Fate so enviously debars,

Is the conjunction of the mind,
And opposition of the stars.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Definition of Love.

Love is a flame to burn out human wills,
Love is a flame to set the will on fire,
Love is a flame to cheat men into mire. . . .
Love puts such bitter poison on Fate's arrow.

JOHN MASEFIELD, *The Widow in the Bye
Street*. Pt. ii.

Love is all in fire, and yet is ever freezing;
Love is much in winning, yet is more in leas-
ing;

Love is ever sick, and yet is never dying;
Love is ever true, and yet is ever lying;
Love does doat in liking, and is mad in loathing;

Love indeed is anything, yet indeed is nothing.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt. Act ii, sc. 2.

Love is the mind's strong physic, and the pill
That leaves the heart sick and o'erturns the will.
THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt. Act iii, sc. 1.

1 This have I known always: Love is no more Than the wide blossom which the wind assails,
Than the great tide that treads the shifting shore,
Strewing fresh wreckage gathered in the gales;
Pity me that the heart is slow to learn
What the swift mind beholds at every turn.
EDNA ST. VINCENT MULLAY, Sonnets. No vi.
(The Harp-Weaver and Other Poems.)

As God's my judge, I do cry Holy! Holy!
Upon the name of Love, however brief.
EDNA ST. VINCENT MULLAY, Love Sonnet.

2 Love is nothing else but an insatiate thirst of enjoying a greedily desired object.
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

3 One of the glories of society is to have created woman where Nature made a female, to have created a continuity of desire where Nature only thought of perpetuating the species; in fine, to have invented love.
GEORGE MOORE, Impressions.

Love is based upon a view of women that is impossible to any man who has had any experience of them.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iv, p. 67.

4 "Tell me, what's Love?" said Youth, one day,
To drooping Age, who crost his way.—
"It is a sunny hour of play,
For which repentance dear doth pay,
Repentance! Repentance!
And this is Love, as wise men say."

THOMAS MOORE, Youth and Age.

5 Romantic love is the privilege of emperors, kings, soldiers and artists; it is the butt of democrats, traveling salesmen, magazine poets and the writers of American novels.
G. J. NATHEAN, Testament of a Critic, p. 14.

Romance cannot be put into quantity production
—the moment love becomes casual, it becomes commonplace.

F. L. ALLEN, Only Yesterday, p. 139.

6 Youth's for an hour, beauty's a flower,
But love is the jewel that wins the world.
MORRA O'NEILL, Beauty's a Flower.

7 Love is a kind of warfare. (Militar species amor est.)

OVIO, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 233.

Every lover is a soldier, and Cupid has a camp of his own. The age that is meet for the wars is also suited to Venus. (Militat opibus armata, et habet sua castra Cupido; Quis bello est habilis, Veneri quoque convenit arma.)

OVIO, Amores. Bk. i, epig. 9, l. 1.

Love, an' please your Honour, is exactly like war,
in this, that a soldier, though he has escaped three weeks complete o' Saturday night, may, nevertheless, be shot through his heart on Sunday morning.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. vii, ch. 21.

Who sell their laurel for a myrtle wreath,
And love when they should fight.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 229.

8 'Tis that delightful transport we can feel
Which painters cannot paint, nor words reveal,

Nor any art we know of can conceal.

THOMAS PAINE, What Is Love?

9 We may, without undue tension of speech, speak of Goodness as Love in conduct; of Truth as Love in thought; of Beauty as Love in self-expression, in whatever medium.

RICHARD ROBERTS. (NEWTON, My Idea of God,
p. 81.)

10 Love is the fulfilling of the law.
New Testament: Romans, xiii, 10.

11 Love indeed is a light burden, not cumbering but lightening the bearer; and maketh glad both young and old. . . . Love is the fairest and most profitable guest that a reasonable creature can entertain. . . . In the light and warmth of love our life grows strong and comely: a better dwelling, not a sweeter, never
I found.

RICHARD ROLLE, Incendium Amoris.

12 To love is to choose.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. ix, No. 1.

13 Love is an egotism of two. (L'amour est un égoïsme à deux.)

ANTOINETTE DE SALLE.

Many people when they fall in love look for a little haven of refuge from the world, where they can be sure of being admired when they are not admirable, and praised when they are not praiseworthy.

BERTHARD RUSSELL, The Conquest of Happiness, p. 180.

14 True love's the gift which God has given
To man alone beneath the heaven: . . .
It is the secret sympathy,
The silver link, the silken tie,
Which heart to heart, and mind to mind,
In body and in soul can bind.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Can. v, st. 13.

15 Good shepherd, tell this youth what 'tis to love.

It is to be all made of sighs and tears; . . .
It is to be all made of faith and service; . . .

It is to be all made of fantasy.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 2, l. 89.

✓ Love is merely a madness, and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark house and a whip as madmen do.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 420.

✓ Love is a familiar; Love is a devil: there is no evil angel but Love.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 2, l. 177.

It adds a precious seeing to the eye.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 333.

✓ And when Love speaks, the voice of all the gods Make heaven drowsy with the harmony.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 344.

✓ Love is a smoke raised with the fume of sighs; Being purged, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes; Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears: What is it else? a madness most discreet, A choking gall and a preserving sweet.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 196. (1595)

✓ Love is a sour delight, a sugar'd grief, A living death, an ever-dying life; A breach of Reason's law, a secret thief, A sea of tears, an everlasting strife; A bait for fools, a scourge of noble wits, A deadly wound, a shot which ever hits.

THOMAS WATSON, The Passionate Centurie of Love. Sonnet xviii (1582) Watson's eighteen-line "sonnets" were closely studied by Shakespeare, whose own sonnets appeared in 1600

✓ Love's heralds should be thoughts, Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams.

Driving back shadows over louring hills: Therefore do humble-pinion'd doves draw love, And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 4.

✓ Love is not love Which alters when it alteration finds, Or bends with the remover to remove: O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark That looks on tempests and is never shaken; It is a star to every wandering bark, Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.

Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks

Within his bending sickle's compass come; Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks, But bears it out even to the edge of doom.

If this be error and upon me proved, I never writ, nor no man ever loved.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxi.

Love's not love

When it is mingled with regards that stand Aloof from the entire point.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 241.

✓ Love is the salt of life.

JOHN SHEPHERD, Ode on Love. Canto v.

✓ Love is a pleasing but a various clime.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Elegy, v.

✓ Love is an April's doubtful day:

Awile we see the tempest lour;

Amid the radiant heav'n survey,

And quite forget the flitting show'r.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Song, vii.

✓ Love is an appetite of generation by the mediation of beauty.

✓ SOCRATES. (MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.)

✓ Love is the emblem of eternity: it confounds all notion of time; effaces all memory of a beginning, all fear of an end.

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. viii, ch. 2.

✓ Love in its essence is spiritual fire.

SWEDENBORG, True Christian Religion. Sec. 31.

✓ Love consists in desiring to give what is our own to another and feeling his delight as our own.

SWEDENBORG, Divine Love and Wisdom. Sec. 47.

✓ A reality in the domain of the imagination.

TALLEYRAND, defining love. (COOPER, Talleyrand.)

✓ Love is swift, sincere, pious, pleasant, gentle, strong, patient, faithful, prudent, long-suffering, manly and never seeking her own; for whosoever a man seeketh his own, there he falleth from love.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

✓ Love is the strange bewilderment which overtakes one person on account of another person.

JAMES THURBER and E. B. WHITE, Is Sex Necessary?

✓ You are as prone to love as the sun is to shine; it being the most delightful and natural employment of the Soul of Man: without which you are dark and miserable. For certainly he that delights not in Love makes vain the universe, and is of necessity to himself the greatest burden.

THOMAS TRAHERNE, Centuries of Meditations.

✓ The bodies of lovers are the forms of ineffable Desire,

Male and female serpents of the Holy Spirit Breathing out its essence in individual outline.

W. J. TURNER, The Pursuit of Psyche.

✓ Love is the child of illusion and the parent

For love is but the heart's immortal thirst
To be completely known and all forgiven

HENRY VAN DYKE, Little Rivers A Handful of Heather

Love is not getting, but giving, not a wild dream
Of pleasure, and a madness of desire—oh, no, Love is not that—it is goodness, and honor, and peace and pure living

HENRY VAN DYKE, Little Rivers A Handful of Heather

To love is to believe, to hope, to know,
'Tis an essay, a taste of Heaven below!

EDMUND WALLER, Divine Love Canto iii, l 17

Life's one joy is this,
To love, to taste the soul's delight
Of loving some most lovely soul or sight—
To worship still, though never an answering sign
Should come from Love asleep within the shrine

THEODORE WATTS DUNTON, The Coming of Love Pt x, l 12

And I know that the hand of God is the promise
of my own,
And I know that the spirit of God is the brother
of my own,

And that all the men ever born are also my brothers, and the women my sisters and lovers,

And that a kelson of the creation is love

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself Sec 5

Say not you love a roasted fowl,
But you may love a screaming owl,
And if you can the unwieldy toad

III—Love: Its Blindness

12 If things were seen as they truly are, the beauty of bodies would be much abridged.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. ii, sec. 9.

13 For love is blind all day and may not see.
CHAUCER, The Merchant's Tale, l. 354.

✓ 14 I have heard of reasons manifold
Why Love must needs be blind,
But this the best of all I hold—
His eyes are in his mind.
What outward form and feature are
He guesseth but in part;
But that within is good and fair
He seeth with the heart.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Reason for Love's Blindness.

15 Never was owl more blind than a lover.
DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Magnus and Morna.

✓ 16 Love is not a hood, but an eye-water.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

17 Every one is blind when maddened by love. (Scilicet insano nemo in amore videt.)
PROPERTIUS, Élegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 14, l. 18.

18 But love is blind, and lovers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 36.

Things base and vile, holding no quality,
Love can transpose to form and dignity:
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind;
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind:
Nor hath Love's mind of any judgement taste;
Wings and no eyes figure unbodily haste;
And therefore is Love said to be a child.

Because in choice he is so oft beguill'd.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act I, sc. 1, l. 232.

The lover . . .
Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 10.

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes,
That they behold, and see not what they see?
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxxxvii.

Love doth to her eyes repair,
To help him of his blindness.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act IV, sc. 2, l. 46.

I joyed; but straight thus water'd was my wine,—
That love she did, but loved a love not blind.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet lxi.

IV—Love and Pity

Of all the paths that lead to a woman's love
Pity's the straightest.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of Malta. Act I, sc. 1, l. 73.

Pity, some say, is the parent of future love.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Spanish Curate. Act v, sc. 1.

'Tis pity makes a Deity;
Ah, Silvia, deign to pity me,
And I will worship none but thee.
APHRA BEHN, Dialogues for Entertainment at Court.

Love gains the shrine when pity opens the door.
BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. iii.

Anon her heart hath pity of his woe,
And with that pity love came in also CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women:

In women pity begets love, in men love begets pity.
CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

Pity is sworn servant unto love;
And thus be sure, wherever it begin
To make the way, it lets the master in.
SAMUEL DANIEL, The Queen's Arcadia. Act iii, sc. 1.

'Twas but a kindred sound to move,
For pity melts the mind to love.
DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast. St. 5.

Can you pretend to love
And have no pity? Love and that are twins.
DESMOND, Don Sebastian. Act iii, sc. 1.

Pity is love when grown into excess.
ROBERT HOWARD, The Vexed Virgin.

Love's pale sister, Pity.
SIR WILLIAM JONES, Hymn to Durga.

He kin' o' l'itered on the mat,
Some doubtfull o' the sekle,
His heart kep' goin' pity-pat,
But hern went pity Zekle.
J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'.

For trust me, they who never melt
With pity, never melt with love.
THOMAS MOORE, To a Lady, With Some Manuscript Poems.

Pity is but one remove from love.
RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison. Bk. i, 34.

Soft pity never leaves the gentle breast
Where love has been received a welcome guest.
SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act ii, sc. 4.

Pity's akin to love; and every thought
Of that soft kind is welcome to my soul.
THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Oroonoko. Act ii, sc. 2.

Pity swells the tide of love.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 106.

V—Love and Wisdom

'Tis impossible to love and to be wise.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love. Quoted.

Away with doubts, all scruples hence remove;
No man at one time can be wise, and love.
ROBERT HERRICK, To Silvia to Wed.

'Tis hard to be in love and to be wise.
NATHANIEL LEE, Princess of Cleve. Act I, sc. 3.

Men loved wholly beyond wisdom
Have the staff without the banner.
LOUISE BOGAN, Men Loved Wholly.

The first sigh of love is the last of wisdom.
(Le premier soupir de l'amour Est le dernier de la sagesse.)

ANTOINE BRET, École Amoureuse. Sc. 7.

The wisest man the warl' e'er saw,
He dearly lov'd the lasses, O.
BURNS, Green Grow the Rashes, O.

How wise are they that are but fools in love!
JO. COOKE, How a Man May Choose a Good Wife. Act I, sc. 1. (c. 1610) First name uncertain.

O tyrant love, when held by you,
We may to prudence bid adieu.
(Amour! Amour! quand tu nous tiens
On peut bien dire, Adieu, prudence.)
LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 1.

Prudence and love are not made for each other:
as love increases, prudence diminishes. (La prudence et l'amour ne sont pas faits l'un pour l'autre à mesure que l'amour croît, la prudence diminue)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes No 546

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 82

Of lunatics rather than of lovers (Amentium, haud amantium)
TERENCE, Andria l. 218

4 To love and to be wise is scarcely given to a god (Amare et sapere vix deo conceditur)
PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae No 22

The proverb holds, that to be wise and love, is hardly granted to the gods above
DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite Bk II, l. 364

- ✓ To be wise and love,
Exceeds man's might, that dwells with gods above
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida Act III, sc. 2, l. 163

To be wise and eke to love
Is granted scarce to god above
SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender March
Willie's Emblem

5 Only a wise man knows how to love (Solut sapiens scit amare)
SENeca, Epistulae ad Luciliū Epis. LXXXI, 12

6 If thou remember'st not the slightest folly
That ever love did make thee run into,
Thou hast not lov'd

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It Act II, sc. 4, l. 34

We that are true lovers, run into strange capers
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It Act II, sc. 4, l. 55

7 Love is your master, for he masters you.

And he that is so yoked by a fool,
Methinks, should not be chronicled for wise
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona Act I, sc. 1, l. 39

8 In all I wish how happy should I be,
Thou grand Deluder were it not for thee?
So weak thou art that fools thy power despise,
And yet so strong thou triumph'st o'er the wise

SWIFT, To Love

Love is master of the wisest It is only fools who defy him

THACKERAY, Men's Wives Dennis Haggerty's Wife

9 Knowledge and love, altogether cotton not
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, 7 (1666)

VI—Love. Two Souls With But a Single Thought

10 My heart, I fain would ask thee
What then is Love? say on
"Two souls with one thought only,
Two hearts that beat as one"
(Mein Herz ich will dich fragen,
Was ist denn Liebe, sag?)

"Zwei Seelen und ein Gedanke, Zwei Herzen und ein Schlag")
VON MÜNCH BELLINGHAUSEN (FRIEDRICH HALM), Der Sohn der Wildnis Act II (W. H. Charlton, tr.) Charlton's translation was the one preferred by the author

Two souls with but a single thought,
Two hearts that beat as one
VON MÜNCH BELLINGHAUSEN, Ingomar the Barbarian Last lines (Maria Anne Lovell, tr.) This is the popular translation of the play, which was a favorite in the American theater for many years

Trooly it is with us as it was with Mr & Mrs
Ingomar in the Play, to wit—
2 soles with but a single thawt
2 harts which beet as 1
ARTEMUS WARD, Among the Spirits

11 As for the lover, his soul dwells in the body of another (Τὸ δ' ἄφ' ἑωυτοῦ τῆς ψυχῆς ἐν ἀλλοτρίῳ σωματι ἔσθ')

MARCUS CATO (PLUTARCH, Lives Marcus Cato Ch IX, sec 5)

✓ Love is a spiritual coupling of two souls,
So much more excellent, as it least relates Unto the body

BEN JONSON, The New Inn Act III, sc. 2

12 Two souls in one, two hearts into one heart
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes Week I, day 6, l. 1057 (Sylvester, tr.)

✓ What is love? Two souls and one flesh Friend-ship? Two bodies and one soul
JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest Love, Friendship, Friends (Hapgood, tr.)

Bianca: Canst tell me what love is?
Guido: It is consent. The union of two minds, two souls, two hearts
 In all they think, and hope, and feel.
 OSCAR WILDE, A Florentine Tragedy.

Naught can restrain consent of twain. (Non caret effectu, quod voluere duo.)
 QUID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 3, l. 16.

Love keeps his revels where there are but twain.
 SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 123.

One turf shall serve as pillow for us both;
 One heart, one bed, two bosoms and one troth
 SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
 Act ii, sc. 2, l. 41.

Love, that two hearts makes one, makes eke
 one will.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto 4, st. 19.
 We were two and had but one heart. (Deux cœurs et d'unions qu'un cœur.)
 FRANÇOIS VILLON, Rondeau.

The world has little to bestow
 Where two fond hearts in equal love are joined.
 ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, Delia.

Two human loves make one divine.
 E. B. BROWNING, Isobel's Child. St. 16.

VII—Love: With All Your Faults

Affection should not be too sharp-eyed, and love is not to be made by magnifying glasses.
 SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals, p. 70.

Analysis kills love, as well as other things.
 JOHN BROWN, Hours Subsecivæ.

Never love unless you can
 Bear with all the faults of man!
 THOMAS CAMPION, Advice to a Girl.

With all thy faults, I love thee still.
 COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 206.

But love can every fault forgive,
 Or with a tender look reprove;
 And now let naught in memory live
 But that we meet, and that we love.
 GEORGE CHAMBER, Tales of the Hall: The Elder Brother: Song.

Love sees no faults.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3297.

For Love can beauties spy
 In what seem faults to every common eye.
 JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 121.

When we love, it is the heart that judges.
 (Quand on aime, c'est le cœur qui juge.)
 JOURNET, Penaltes. No. 66.

If lovers should mark everything a fault,
 Affection would be like an ill-set book.

Whose faults might prove as big as half the volume.

 12
 The woman we love will always be in the right.
 (La femme qu'on aime aura toujours raison.)
 ALFRED DE MUSSSET, Idylle.

13
 Could I her faults remember,
 Forgetting every charm,
 Soon would impartial reason
 The tyrant love disarm.
 SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2.

14
 We love the things we love in spite
 Of what they are.
 LOUIS UNTERMEYER, Love.

VIII—Love and Life

15
 One hour of right-down love
 Is worth an age of dully living on.
 APHERA BEEN, If The Rover Act v, sc. 1.

Each moment of a happy lover's hour
 Is worth an age of dull and common life.
 APHERA BEEN, Younger Brother. Act iii, sc. 3.

16
 For life, with all it yields of joy and woe, . . .
 Is just a chance o' the prize of learning love.
 ROBERT BROWNING, A Death in the Desert, l.
 245.

17
 What is life when wanting love?
 Night without a morning!
 Love's the cloudless summer sun,
 Nature gay adorning.
 BURNS, Thine Am I.

18
 Love's the weightier business of mankind.
 COLLEY CIBBER, She Wou'd and She Wou'd
Not. Act i, last line.

19
 We are all born for love; it is the principle of existence and its only end.
 BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sibyl. Bk. v, ch. 4.

Th' important business of your life is love.
 GEORGE LYTTLETON, Advice to a Lady.

20
 Life, without love, is load; and time stands
 still:

What we refuse to him, to death we give;
 And then, then only, when we love, we live
 WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride Act
 ii. Concluding lines.

Love, then, hath every bliss in store;
 'Tis friendship, and 'tis something more.
 Each other every wish they give;
 Not to know love is not to live.

JOHN GAY, Phaon, Cupid and Time, l. 135.

She who has never loved has never lived.
 JOHN GAY, The Captives. Act ii, sc. 1.
 See also LIFE AND LIVING.

21
 Canst thou not wait for Love one flying hour
 O heart of little faith?

EDMUND GOSSÉ, Sonnet: Dejection and Delay.

Ye gods! annihilate but space and time,
And make two lovers happy.
POPE, The Art of Sinking in Poetry. Ch. 9.
Quoted as "Anon."

1 Among the holy bookes wise,
I finde writ in such wise,
Who loveth nought is here as dead.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iv.

And he that liveth to himself is dead,
And he that lives for love lives evermore;
Only in love can life's true path be trod;
Love is self-giving; therefore love is God.

MORTON LUCK, Thysia. Sonnet xxxvi.

2 To live without loving is not really to live.
(Vivre sans aimer n'est pas proprement vivre.)

MOLIERE, La Princesse d'Élide. Act II, sc. 1, l. 40.

Take love away from life and you take away its pleasures. (Ôtez l'amour de la vie, Vous en ôtez les plaisirs.)

4 MOLIERE, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Dialogue between Acts I and II.

Life! what art thou without love?

EDWARD MOORE, Fables. Fable xiv.

3 Were it not for love,
Poor life would be a ship not worth the launching.

EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON, Tristram.

4 Life's richest cup is Love's to fill—
Who drinks, if deep the draught shall be,
Knows all the rapture of the hill

Blent with the heart-break of the sea.

ROBERT CAMERON ROGERS, Love's Cup.

5 To love it is and love alone
That life or luxury is known.

J. B. TABB, The Test.

6 Love took up the harp of Life, and smote on all the chords with might;
Smote the chord of Self, that, trembling, pass'd in music out of sight.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 33.

IX—Love in Man and Woman

See also WOMAN and LOVE

7 Love is so different with us men.

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Year.

8 Alas; the love of women! it is known
To be a lovely and a fearful thing.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto II, st. 199.

9 Man's love is of man's life a thing apart,
The woman's whole existence; man may range
The court, camp, church, the vessel, and the mart,

Sword, gown, gain, glory, offer in exchange

Pride, fame, ambition, to fill up his heart,
And few there are whom these cannot estrangle;

Men have all these resources, we but one,
To love again, and be again undone.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto I, st. 194.

10 A woman's whole life is a history of the affections.
WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch Book: The Broken Heart.

To a man the disappointment of love may occasion some bitter pangs: it wounds some feelings of tenderness—it blasts some prospects of felicity;
but he is an active being—he may dissipate his thoughts in the whirl of varied occupation. . . .
But woman's is comparatively a fixed, a secluded, and meditative life. . . . Her lot is to be wooed and won; and if unhappy in her love, her heart is like some fortress that has been captured, and sacked, and abandoned, and left desolate.

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch Book: The Broken Heart.

11 Love, that of every woman's heart
Will have the whole, and not a part,
That is to her, in Nature's plan,
More than ambition is to man,
Her light, her life, her very breath,
With no alternative but death.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv, sec. 7.

12 However man rules in science and in art,
The sphere of woman's glories is the heart.
THOMAS MOORE, Epilogue to the Tragedy of Iva, l. 53.

Man dreams of fame, while woman wakes to love.
TENNYSON, Martin and Vivian, l. 458.

13 The love of man? Exotic flower,
Broken, crushed, within an hour.
The love of woman? Storm-swept sea
Surging into eternity.

ELLEN M. CARROLL, Man and Woman.

14 Poor love is lost in men's capacious minds,
In ours, it fills up all the room it finds.

JOHN CROWNE, Thyestes.

15 Oh! a man's love is strong
When fain he comes a-mating.
But a woman's love is long
And grows when it is waiting.

LAURENCE HOUBMAN, The Two Loves.

16 I know a woman's portion when she loves,
It's hers to give, my darling, not to take;
It isn't lockets, dear, nor pairs of gloves,
It isn't marriage bells nor wedding cake,
It's up and cook, although the belly ache;
And bear the child, and up and work again,
And count a sick man's grumble worth the pain.

JOHN MASKFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street.

17 Women know no perfect love;
Loving the strong, they can forsake the strong;

Man clings because the being whom he loves
Is weak and needs him.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. III.

1 Love lessens woman's delicacy and increases man's. (Die Liebe vermindert die weibliche Feinheit und verstärkt die männliche.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 34.

A loving maiden grows unconsciously more bold.
(Ein liebendes Mädchen wird unbewusst kühner.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 71.

2 Love is the history of a woman's life; it is an episode in man's. (L'amour est l'histoire de la vie des femmes; c'est un épisode dans celle des hommes.)

MADAME DE STAËL, De L'Influence des Passions.

3 Thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women.

Old Testament: II Samuel, i. 26.

4 A man can be happy with any woman as long as he does not love her.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 15.

6 Show thou love to win love.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Mirror of Good Manners, p. 74. (c. 1510)

7 But I love you, sir:

And when a woman says she loves a man,
The man must hear her, though he love her not.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ix, l. 513.

Behold me! I am worthy

Of thy loving, for I love thee!

E. B. BROWNING, Lady Geraldine's Courtship.
St. 79.

If thou must love me, let it be for nought
Except for love's sake only.

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese.
No. xiv.

8 And because my heart I proffered,
With true love trembling at the brim,
He suffers me to follow him.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Canto ix.

9 Love like mine must have return.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act i.

9 I cannot love where I'm beloved.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. II, canto i, l. 304.

I cannot love thee as I ought,

For love reflects the thing beloved.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lii, st. 1.

10 Love looks for love again.

JOHN CLARKE, Paramiologia, 27. (1639)

Love is the loadstone of love.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3288.

The only present love demands is love.

JOHN GAY, The Espousal, l. 56.

And sure love craveth love, like asketh like.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk.

xxviii, st. 80. (1591)

Love prays devoutly when it prays for love.

THOMAS HOOD, Hero and Leander, l. 120.

11 If there's delight in love, 'tis when I see That heart which others bleed for, bleed for me

CONGREVE, Way of the World. Act iii, sc. 12.

Johnson: "True. When he whom everybody else flatters, flatters me, I then am truly happy."
Mrs. Thrane: "The sentiment is in Congreve, I think." Johnson: "Yes, madam, in The Way of the World."

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life.)

12 Love, which insists that love shall mutual be.
(Amor che a nullo amato amar perdona.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 103.

13 The sense of the world is short,—

Long and various the report.—

To love and be beloved;

Men and gods have not outlearned it;

And, how oft so'er they've turned it,

'Tis not to be improved.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Eros.

14 Let no man think he is loved by any when he loves none.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 156.

Let him love no one, and be beloved by none.
(Nec amet quemquam, nec ametur ab ullo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 130.

15 The devil take me, if I think anything but love to be the object of love.

FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. v, ch. 9. (1751)

16 Only in love they happy prove

Who love what most deserves their love.

PHILIP FLETCHER, Sicelides. Act iii, sc. 6.

17 If I love you, what business is that of yours?
(Wenn ich dich lieb habe, was geht's dich an?)

GOETHE, Wilhelm Meister. Bk. iv, ch. 9.

18 There is no heaven like mutual love.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Peleus and Thetis.

19 Love is kindest, and hath most length,

The kisses are most sweet,
When it's enjoyed in heat of strength,
Where like affections meet
PATRICK HANNAY, Songs and Sonnets Sonnet 1v

1 That bliss no wealth can bribe, no pow'r bestow,

That bliss of angels, love by love repaid
DAVID MALLETT, Amyntas and Theodora
Canto 1, l 367

2 Divine is Love and scorneth worldly pelf,
And can be bought with nothing but with self
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Love the Only Price of Love

Like Dian's kiss, unasked, unsought,
Love gives itself, but is not bought
✓ LONGFELLOW, Endymion St 4

3 Lovers live by love as larks live by leeks
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs Pt 1, ch 10

4 Love begins with love
LA BRUYERE, Les Caracteres Ch 4

5 The pleasure of love is in loving and we are much happier in the passion we feel than in that which we inspire (Le plaisir de l'amour est d'aimer, et l'on est plus heureux par la passion que l'on a que par celle que l'on
donne)

✓ LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes No 259

To love for the sake of being loved is human,
but to love for the sake of loving is angelic
LAMARTINE, Graziella Pt iv, ch 5

Or rather let me love than be in love
SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Wife

✓ All love is sweet Given or returned
They who inspire it most are fortunate,
As I am now but those who feel it most
Are happier still

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound Act II, sc 5,
l 39

We love being in love, that's the truth on't
THACKERAY, Henry Esmond Bk II, ch 15

6 Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books,

But love from love, toward school with heavy looks

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet Act II, sc 2,
l 156

7 Yet leave me not, yet, if thou wilt, be free,
Love me no more, but love my love of thee
SWINBURNE, Erotion

✓ I that have love and no more
Give you but love of you, sweet:
He that hath more, let him give,
He that hath wings, let him soar,
Mine is the heart at your feet
Here, that must love you to live

SWINBURNE, The Oblation
And he that shuts Love out, in turn shall be Shut out from Love, and on her threshold lie

Howling in outer darkness
TENNYSON, The Palace of Art Introduction

8 And you must love him, ere to you
He will seem worthy of your love
WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph St 11

A woman despises a man for loving her, unless she happens to return his love
ELIZABETH STODDARD, Two Men Ch 32.

9 Love for love is evenest bought
UNKNOWN, Love for Love (c 1420)

Love, which cannot be paid but with love
EDWARD FENTON, Certain Secret Wonders of Nature (1569)

10 Loving comes by looking
JOHN CLARKE, Paraenologia, 28 (1639)

I saw and loved
EDWARD GIBBON, Autobiographic Memoirs, p
48

But looking liked, and liking loved
SCOTT, Marmion Canto v, Introduction, l 78

11 'Tisn't beauty, so to speak, nor good talk necessarily. It's just it. Some women'll stay in a man's memory if they once walked down a street

RUDYARD KIPLING, Mrs. Balkurst (1904) The creation of "It" has been erroneously credited to Elmore Glyn

12 To love but little is in love an infallible means of being beloved (N'aimer guère en amour est un moyen assure pour être aimé)

636

13 Habit causes love (Consuetudo concinnat amorem)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura Bk IV, l 1278
By habit love enters the mind, by habit is love unlearned (Intrat amor mentes usu, dediscitur usu)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l 503

14 There is one genuine love philtre—consideration By this the woman is able to sway her man

MENANDER, Fragments No 646

15 It is not virtue, wisdom, valour, wit,
Strength, comeliness of shape, or amplest
merit,

That woman's love can win, or long inherit;
But what it is, hard is to say,
Harder to hit.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1010.

Often the pretender begins to love truly and ends by becoming what he feigned to be.
(Sepe tamen vere coepit simulator amare,
Sepe, quod incipiens finxerat esse, fuit.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria, Bk. 4, l. 615.

I have laughed at the foolish man who feigned to love and fell like a fowler into his own snare.
(Deceptum risi, qui se simulabat amare, In laqueos aucupes decideratque suos.)

OVID, Remedium Amoris, l. 501.

Love must be fostered with soft words. (Dul-cibus est verbis mollis alendus amor.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria, Bk. 3, l. 152.

Insidious love glides into defenseless hearts. (Ad-fuit incautus insidiosus Amor.)

OVID, Remedium Amoris, l. 148.

He who says over-much, "I love not," is in love.
(Qui nimium multis "non amo" dicit, amat.)

OVID, Remedium Amoris, l. 648.

Love is commenced at the mind's bidding, but is not cast off by it. (Amor animi arbitrio sumitur, non ponitur.)

PUBLILIUS SEPTUS, Sententiae, No. 5.

Talking of love is making it.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 839.

There are many people who would never have been in love if they had never heard love spoken of. (Il y a des gens qui n'auraient jamais été amoureux, s'ils n'avaient jamais entendu parler de l'amour.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes, No. 136.

The sight of lovers feedeth those in love.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, Act III, sc. 4,
l. 60.

If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be hanged.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry IV, Act II, sc. 2, l. 19.

I'll be damned if the dog ha'n't given me some stuff to make me love him.

SMOLLETT, Perigrine Pickle, Ch. 15.

She loved me for the dangers I had pass'd,
And I loved her that she did pity them.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, Act I, sc. 3, l. 167.

A mastiff dog
May love a puppy cur for no more reason Than that the twain have been tied up together.

THEYNSON, Queen Mary, Act I, sc. 4, l. 109.

The less my hope the hotter my love. (Quanto minus spei est tanto magis amor.)

TERENCE, Remus, l. 1053. (Act V, sc. 4.)

Women are well aware that what is commonly called sublime and poetical love depends not upon moral qualities, but on frequent meetings, and on the style in which the hair is done up, and on the color and cut of the dress.

LEO TOLSTOY, The Kreutzer Sonata, Ch. 6.

XII—Love: Its Cure

Who loves, ravens—'tis youth's frenzy; but the cure
Is bitterer still.

BYRON, Childe Harold, Canto IV, st. 123.

Then fly betimes, for only they
Conquer love, that run away.

THOMAS CAREW, Conquest by Flight.

In love's wars, he who flyeth is conqueror.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 2819.

The only victory over love is flight.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.)

Hunger, perhaps, may cure your love,
Or time your passion greatly alter;

If both should unsuccessful prove,

I strongly recommend a halter.

(Ἐσθ' ἢ πείνη λυγρὴ· εἰ δὲ μή, χροῖον.

ἢ ἀπὸ τούτων τὴν φλόγα σβέσει,

ἢ ἀπὸ τοῦ χρόνου ἡ φλόγα σβέσει.)

CRATES, Cures for Love. (Greek Antiquology.)

Bk. IX, epig. 497.)

Why has some lover cast the noose about his neck, and hung, a sad burden, from a lofty beam? (Cur aliquis laqueo collum nodatus amator A trabe sublimi triste pependit onus?)

OVID, Remedium Amoris, l. 17.

But ah! should she false-hearted prove,

Suspended, I'll dangle in air;

A victim to delicate love,

In Dyot Street, Bloomsbury Square.

WILLIAM B. RHODES, Bombastes Furioso.

They love too much that die for love.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Mourir. (1611)

A lover forsaken a new love may get,

But a neck, when once broken, can never be set.

WILLIAM WALSH, The Despairing Lover.

(1692) Quoted by Scott, Feverth of the Peak.

Ch. 39.

Love's a malady without a cure.

DEYTER, Palamon and Arcite, Bk. II, l. 110.

O ye Gods, have ye ordained for every malady a medicine, for every sore a salve, for every pain a plaster, leaving only love remedyless?

JOHN LYL, Euphues.

Love, the sole disease thou canst not cure.

POPE, Pastorals: Summer, l. 12.

Alas, wretched me, that love may not be cured by herbs! (Me miserum, quod amor non est medicabilis herbis!)

OVID, Heroides, Epis. V, l. 149.

Ab me! love can not be cured by herbs. (El mihi! quod nullis amor est sanabilis herbis.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. I, l. 523.

1 Take away leisure and Cupid's bow is broken. (Otia si tollas, Periere Cupidinus arcus.)
OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 139.

You who seek an end to love, be busy, and you will be safe. (Qui finem queris amoris, res age, tutus eris.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 143.

The lover too shuns business.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 219.

✓ And love may be expelled by other love, As poisons are by poisons.

✓ DRYDEN, All for Love. Act iv, sc. 1.

✓ Diamonds cut diamonds; they who will prove To thrive in cunning, must cure love with love.

JOHN FORD, Lover's Melancholy. Act i, sc. 3.

✓ In all cases of heart-ache, the application of another man's disappointment draws out the pain and allays the irritation.

BUTLIR-LYTTON, The Lady of Lyons. Act i, sc. 2.

There is no remedy for love but to love more.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 25 July, 1839.

3 The disease has a thousand forms, I have a thousand remedies. (Mille mali species, mille salutis erunt.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 526.

Plenty destroys passion. (Copia tollat amorem.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 541.

✓ I loved her then, but now, another love overhangs my heart. (Ilam amabam olim, nunc jam alia cura impendit pectora.)

✓ PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 135. (Act i, sc. 1.)

✓ Even as one heat another heat expels, Or as one nail by strength drives out another, So the remembrance of my former love Is by a newer object quite forgotten.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 192.

✓ For one heat, all know, doth drive out another; One passion doth expel another still.

✓ CHAPMAN, Monsieur d'Olive. Act v, sc. 1.

5 But he who stems a stream with sand, And fetters flame with flaxen band, Has yet a harder task to prove— By firm resolve to conquer love!

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iii, st. 28.

✓ XIII—Love: Its Power

6 Love is not to be reason'd down, or lost In high ambition or a thirst of greatness;

'Tis second life, it grows into the soul, Warms every vein, and beats in every pulse.
ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 1.

✓ When love's well-tim'd, 'tis not a fault to love; The strong, the brave, the virtuous, and the wise, Sink in the soft captivity together.

ADDISON, Cato. Act iii, sc. 1.

When love once pleads admission to our hearts, In spite of all the virtue we can boast, The woman that deliberates is lost.

ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 1. Often misquoted, "She who hesitates is lost."

7 If two stand shoulder to shoulder against the gods, Happy together, the gods themselves are helpless

Against them, while they stand so.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, Elizabeth the Queen, ii.

8 Somewhere there waiteth in this world of ours For one lone soul another lonely soul,

Each choosing each through all the weary hours,

And meeting strangely at one sudden goal, Then blend they, like green leaves with golden flowers,

Into one beautiful perfect whole; And life's long night is ended, and the way

Lies open onward to eternal day.

EDWIN ARNOLD, Somewhere There Waiteth.

I know not when the day shall be, I know not when our eyes may meet;

What welcome you may give to me, Or will your words be sad or sweet,

It may not be 'till years have passed, 'Till eyes are dim and tresses gray;

The world is wide, but, love, at last, Our hands, our hearts, must meet some day.

HUGH CONWAY, Some Day.

Two shall be born, the whole wide world apart, . . .

✓ And bend each wandering step to this one end— That, one day, out of darkness, they shall meet

And read life's meaning in each other's eyes. And two shall walk some narrow way of life, . . .

And yet, with wistful eyes that never meet . . . They seek each other all their weary days

And die unsatisfied—and this is Fate!

SUSAN MARR SPALDING, Fate.

9 Love can find entrance, not only into an open heart, but also into a heart well fortified, if watch be not well kept.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Love.

10 For love is of a mickle might, That it all paines makis light.

JOHN BARBOUR, The Bruce. Bk. ii, l. 520.

11 The night has a thousand eyes, And the day but one;

Yet the light of the bright world dies With the dying sun.

The mind has a thousand eyes,
And the heart but one;
Yet the light of a whole life dies
When love is done.
FRANCIS WILLIAM BOURDELLON, Light.

3 Love Is something awful which one dare not touch
So early o' mornings.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. II, l. 40.

4 God be thanked, the meanest of his creatures Boasts two soul-sides, one to face the world with,

One to show a woman when he loves her.
ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. St. 17.

Oh, their Rafael of the dear Madonnas,
Oh, their Dante of the dread Inferno,
Wrote one song—and in my brain I sing it,
Drew one angel—borne, see, on my bosom!
ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. Conclusion.

Is she poor?—What costs it to be styled a donor?
Merely an ear to cleave, a sea to part.
ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. II.

4 Love, thou art not a king alone,
Both slave and king thou art!
Who seeks to sway, must stoop to own
The kingdom of a heart.

5 The man in arms 'gainst female charms,
Even he her willing slave is.
BURNS, Lovely Davies.

6 The law of love threads every heart
And knits it to its utmost kin,
Nor can our lives flow long apart
From souls our secret souls would win.
JOHN BURROUGHS, Waiting. Unpublished concluding stanza.

7 No cord nor cable can so forcibly draw, or hold so fast, as love can do with a twined thread.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel Canto vi,
st 11

By Love was consummated what Diplomacy begun
BRET HARTE, Concepcion de Arguello

Scorn no man's love, though of a mean degree;
Love is a present for a mighty king
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church Porch St 59

Love is swift of foot, Love's a man of war,
And can shoot, And can hit from far.
GEORGE HERBERT, Discipline

Thy fatal shafts unerring move,
I bow before thine altar, Love!
SMOLLETT, Roderick Random Ch 40

Love rules his kingdom without a sword
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum

Love rules without a sword,
Love binds without a cord
UNKNOWN A proverbial jingle

He that hath love in his breast hath spurs in his sides
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum

O, love love, love! Love is like a dizziness,
It winna let a poor body Gang about his business!

JAMES HOOE, Love Is Like a Dizziness

One can't choose when one is going to love
HENRIK IBSEN, The Master Builder Act u

Love is the magician, the enchanter, that changes worthless things to joy, and makes right-royal kings and queens of common clay
It is the perfume of that wondrous flower,
the heart, and without that sacred passion, that divine swoon, we are less than beasts
but with it, earth is heaven and we are gods.
R. G INGERSOLL, Works, p 363 (1930 ed)

Love extinguish'd, earth and heav'n must fail

SIR WILLIAM JONES, Hymn to Durga

You have ravish'd me away by a Power I cannot resist, and yet I could resist till I saw you, and even since I have seen you I have endeavored often "to reason against the reasons of my Love"

KEATS, Letter to Fanny Brawne, 13-Oct., 1819

By the accident of fortune a man may rule the world for a time, but by virtue of love he may rule the world forever

LAO-TSEI, The Simple Way No 13,

Waters are lost, and fires will die;
But love alone can late defy.

NATHANIEL LEE, Theodosius.

1 Ah, how skillful grows the hand
That obeyeth Love's command!
LOWELL, The Building of the Ship, l. 122.

2 What does not love compel us to do? (Quid non cogit amor?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, ep. 48.

3 O tyrant Love, to what do you not drive the hearts of men! (Improbe Amor, quid non mortalia pectora cogis!)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 412.

4 The might of one fair face sublimed my love,
That it hath weaned my soul from low desires.

MICHELANGELO, Sonnet: Vittoria Colonna. (Hartley Coleridge, tr.)

5 Whatsoever love commands, it is not safe to despise (Quidquid Amor jussit, non est contemnere tutum.)

OVIN, Heroides. Epist. iv, l. 11.

6 Love will make men dare to die for their beloved—love alone; and women as well as men.

PLATO, The Symposium. Sec. 179.

7 Look round our world; behold the chain of love
Combining all below and all above.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. iii, l. 7.

8 In peace, Love tunes the shepherd's reed;
In war, he mounts the warrior's steed;

In halls, in gay attire is seen;
In hamlets, dances on the green.

Love rules the court, the camp, the grove,
And men below, and saints above;

For love is heaven, and heaven is love.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto iii, st. 2.

9 "Love rules the camp, the court, the grove,"—
"for love

Is heaven, and heaven is love:"—so sings the bard.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 13.

10 Whoever at the outset has resisted and routed love, has been safe and conqueror; but whose by dalliance has fed the sweet torment, too late refused to bear the accepted yoke. (Quisquis in primo obstulit Populitque amorem, tutus ac victor fuit; Qui blandiendo dulce nutrit vitium, Sero recusat ferre quod subiit jugum.)

TERENCE, Heautontimorumenos, l. 132.

11 For valour, is not Love a Hercules,
Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 340.

O powerful love! that in some respects, makes a beast a man, in some other, a man a beast.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act v, sc. 5, l. 5.

10 With love's light wings did I o'erperch these walls,

For stony limits cannot hold love out,
And what love can do that dares love attempt.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 66.

Time, force, and death,
Do to this body what extremes you can;

But the strong base and building of my love
Is as the very centre of the earth,

Drawing all things to it.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 107.

11 I have done penance for contemning Love,
Whose high imperious thoughts have punish'd me

With bitter fasts, with penitential groans,
With nightly tears and daily heart-sore sighs.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 129.

Love's a mighty lord;
And hath so humbled me, as, I confess

This is no woe to his correction,
Nor to his service no such joy on earth.

Now no discourse, except it be of love;
Now can I break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep,

Upon the very naked name of love.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 136.

12 Through all the drama—whether damn'd or not—

Love gilds the scene, and women guide the plot.

SHERRIDAN, The Rivals. Epilogue, l. 5.

13 Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it.

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, viii, 7

14 Love, resistless in battle. ("Ἐρως ἀνίκητος μάχῃ.")

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 781.

15 For Love is lord of truth and loyalty,
Lifting himself out of the lowly dust

On golden plumes up to the purest sky,
Above the reach of earthly sinful lust.

SPENSER, An Hymn in Honour of Love, l. 176.

Such is the power of that sweet passion,
That it all sordid baseness doth expel,

And the refined mind doth newly fashion
Unto a fairer form.

SPENSER, An Hymn in Honour of Love, l. 180.

16 Why should we kill the best of passions, love?
It kills the hero, bids ambition rise

To nobler heights, inspires immortal deeds,

Even softens brutes, and adds a grace to virtue.

JAMES THOMSON, Sophonisba. Act v, sc. 2.

Yet Love consumes me; for what bounds are there to love? (Me tamen urit amor: quis enim modus adit amor?)

VERGIL, Eclagues. No. ii, l. 68.

Love conquers all; let us too yield to Love. (Omnia vincit Amor: et nos cedamus Amori.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. No. i, l. 69.

Love will conquer at the last.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, l. 280.

Who'er thou art, thy master see;
He was, or is, or is to be.

(Qui que tu soit, Voici ton maître;
Il l'est, le fut, Ou le doit être.)

VOLTAIRE, Inscription for a Statue of Cupid.

Mightier far
Than strength of nerve or sinew, or the sway
Of magic potent over sun and star,
Is Love, though oft to agony distrest,
And though his favourite seat be feeble woman's breast.

WORDSWORTH, Laodamia. St. 15.

It's love, it's love that makes the world go round.

UNKNOWN. (Chansons Nationales et Populaires de France, ii, 180.)

Love makes the time pass. (L'amour fait passer le temps.) Time makes love pass. (Le temps fait passer l'amour.)

UNKNOWN. Proverbial phrases.

Under floods that are deepest,
Which Neptune obey;
Over rocks that are steepest,
Love will find out the way.
UNKNOWN, Love Will Find Out the Way.
(PERRY, Reliques.)

Love will find its way
Through paths where wolves would fear to prey.
BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1047.

Thus love, you see, can find a way
To make both man and maids obey.
THOMAS DELONEY, Gentle Craft. Ch. 15. (c. 1597)

'Tis love that makes me bold and resolute,
Love that can find a way where path there's none,
Of all the gods the most invincible.
EURIPIDES, Hippolytus. Frag. 2.

Tho' the sun in heaven desert you,
"Love will find out the way."
ALFRED NOYES, Love Will Find Out the Way.

Ah, to that far distant strand
Bridge there was not to convey,
Not a bark was near at hand,
Yet true love soon found the way.
SCHILLER, Hero and Leander. (Bowring, tr.)

Zeus came as an eagle to god-like Ganymede, as a swan came he to the fair-haired mother of Helen.

UNKNOWN, Greek Anthology. Bk. v, No. 65.

Jupiter himself was turned into a satyr, a shepherd, a bull, a swan, a golden shower, and what not for love.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. 1, suba. 1.

Did not Jupiter transform himself into the shape of Amphiurio to embrace Alcmena; into the form of a swan to enjoy Leda; into a bull to beguile Io; into a shower of gold to win Danaë?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 93.

Leda, sailing on the stream
To deceive the hopes of man,
Love accounting but a dream,
Doted on a silver swan;
Danaë, in a brazen tower,
Where no love was, loved a shower.

JOHN FLETCHER, Valentinian.

To enlarge or illustrate this power and effect of love is to set a candle in the sun.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. 1, suba. 2.

XIV—Love: Its Lawlessness

See also Marriage and Love

Who can give law to lovers? Love is a greater law to itself. (Quis legem det amantibus? Major lex amor est sibi.)

BOTHUIS, De Consolatione Philosophia. Bk. ii, meter 12, l. 47.

Wist thou not well the old clerks' saw,
That who shall give a lover any law?

CHAUCER, The Knight's Tale, l. 306. (c. 1380)

Love will not be constrained by mastery;
When mastery cometh, the god of love anon
Beateth his wings, and farewell! he is gone!
Love is a thing as any spirit free.

CHAUCER, The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 36.

Nor may love be compelled by mastery;
For soon as mastery comes, sweet love anon
Taket his nimble wings, and soon away is gone.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto i, st. 25.

Love knows no mean or measure.
PRINCEAS FLETCHER, Piscatory Eclogues.

Love's law is out of rule.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. i, l. 18.

Love knows no rule. (Amor ordinem nescit.)
ST. JEROME, Letter to Chromatius.

He loves little who loves by rule. (Celuy aime peu qui aime à la mesure.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 28.

As love knoweth no laws, so it regardeth no conditions.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 34.

1 Love knows no order. (Amor ordinem nescit.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

2 Love is without law.

BARNABE RICH, Farewell, 191. (1581)

Love is lawless.

JOHN CLARKE, Paramitologia, 27. (1639)

No law is made for love.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite, i, 326. (1700)

3 For love will not be drawn, but must be led.

SPENSER, Colin Clout, l. 129.

4 Let love be free; free love is for the best.
And, after heaven, on our dull side of death,
What should be best, if not so pure a love
Clothed in so pure a loveliness?

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1370.

5 Oh, rank is good, and gold is fair,
And high and low mate ill;

But love has never known a law
Beyond its own sweet will!

WHITTIER, Amy Wentworth.

XV—Love: Love's Young Dream

6 I've paced much this weary, mortal round,
And sage experience bids me this declare:—
"If Heaven a draught of heavenly pleasure spare,

One cordial in this melancholy vale
Tis when a youthful, loving, modest pair,
In other's arms breathe out the tender tale,
Beneath the milk-white thorn that scents the evening gale."

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night. St. 9.

Oh Love! young Love! bound in thy rosy band,
Let sage or cynic prattle as he will,
These hours, and only these, redeem Life's years of ill.

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto ii, st. 81.

Oh! there's nothing in life like making love.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Courtship.

7 What a sweet reverence is that when a young man deems his mistress a little more than mortal and almost chides himself for longing to bring her close to his heart.

HAWTHORNE, The Marble Faun. Vol. ii, ch. 15.

8 Pillow'd upon my fair love's ripening breast,
To feel for ever its soft fall and swell;
Awake for ever in a sweet unrest;
Still, still to hear her tender-taken breath;
And so live ever—or else swoon to death.

KEATS, Last Sonnet.

Wishing forever in that state to lie,—
Forever to be dying so, yet never die.

CONGREVE, On Arabella Hunt, Singing.

9 And, happy melodist, unwearied,
For ever piping songs for ever new;

More happy love! more happy, happy love!
For ever warm and still to be enjoy'd,
For ever panting and for ever young.

KEATS, Ode on a Grecian Urn. St. 3.

10 There's nothing half so sweet in life
As love's young dream.

THOMAS MOORE, Love's Young Dream.

Is there on earth a space so dear
As that within the blessed sphere
Two loving arms entwine?

THOMAS MOORE, To Fanny.

11 One pulse of passion—youth's first fiery glow,—

Is worth the hoarded proverbs of the sage:
Vex not thy soul with dead philosophy;
Have we not lips to kiss with, hearts to love,
and eyes to see?

OSCAR WILDE, Panthea. St. 2.

12 Love in thy youth, fair maid; be wise,
Old Time will make thee colder,

And though each morning new arise
Yet we each day grow older.

UNKNOWN, Madrigal. (PORTER, Madrigals and Airs, 1632.)

Take it, girl! And fear no after,
Take your fill of all this laughter,
Laugh or not the tears will fall,
Take the laughter first of all.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Song.

XVI—Love: Its Sweetness

13 To love and be beloved, this is the good,
Which for most sovereign all the world will prove.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Aurora. Sonnet xlv.

14 The crowning glory of loving and being loved is that the pair make no real progress; however far they have advanced into the enchanted land during the day they must start again from the frontier next morning.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grisel, p. 189.

15 O happy race of men, if love, which rules heaven, rule your minds! (O felix hominum genus, Si vestros animos amor Quo cælum regitur regat.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophie Consolationis. Bk. ii, meter 8, l. 28.

16 "Oh! Love," they said, "is King of Kings,
And Triumph is his crown.

Earth fades in flame before his wings,
And Sun and Moon bow down."

RUPERT BROOKE, Song.

17 There is music even in the beauty, and the silent note which Cupid strikes, far sweeter than the sound of an instrument.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 10.

1 Shut them in,
With their triumphs and their glories and the rest!

Love is best!

ROBERT BROWNING, Love Among the Ruins

O lyric Love half angel and half bird,
And all a wonder and a wild desire!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book
Pt 1, l 1391

What's the earth
With all its art verse, music worth—
Compared with love found, gained, and kept?

ROBERT BROWNING, Dis Alter Visum

2 Devotion wafts the mind above,
But Heaven itself descends in love,
A feeling from the Godhead caught,
To wean from self each sordid thought,
A Rav of him who form'd the whole,
A Glory circling round the soul!

BYRON, The Ghastr, l 1135

3 For soft the hours repeat one story,
Sings the sea one strain divine
My clouds arise all flushed with glory
I love and the world is mine!

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, The World Is Mine

4 Power and gold and fame denied,
Love laughs glad in the paths aside
LOUISE DRISCOLL, The Highway

Love has in store for me one happy minute
DRYDEN, No, No, Poor Suffering Heart

5 The person love does to us fit,
Like manna has the taste of all of it
EMERSON, Essays, First Series Love Quoted

6 Earth's the right place for love
I don't know where it's likely to go better
ROBERT FROST, Birches

7 If as Mimnermus holds without love and jests there is no joy, live amid love and jests (Si Mimnermus uti censet, sine amore jocis-que Nil est jucundum, vivas in amore jocis que)

HORACE, Epistles Bk 2, epis 6, l 65

8 I sing of little loves that glow
Like tapers shining in the rain,
Of little loves that break themselves
Like moths against the window pane
ALICE KILMER, Prelude

10 Love is more than great riches
JOHN LYDGATE, The Story of Thebes Pt III
Though poor in gear, we're rich in love
BURNS, The Soldier's Return

11 Love's own hand the nectar pours,
Which never fails nor ever sours
DAVID MALLETT, Cupid and Hymen

12 The world is filled with folly and sin,
And Love must cling where it can, I say
For Beauty is easy enough to win,
But one isn't loved every day
OWEN MEREDITH, Changes

13 For what is knowledge duly weighed?
Knowledge is strong but love is sweet,
Yea all the progress he had made
Was but to learn that all is small
Save love for love is all in all
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, The Convent Threshold

Love is like a rose the joy of all the earth,
Love is like a lovely rose the world's delight
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Hope

14 Mortals while through the world you go,
Hope may succor and faith befriend
Yet happy your hearts if you can but know,
Love awaits at the journey's end!
CLINTON SCOLLARD, The Journey's End Envoy

15 But mistress, know yourself down on your knees,
And thank heaven fasting, for a good man's
love
SHAKESPEARE, *As You Like It Act III, sc 5,
l 57*

16 This is the very ecstasy of love
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet Act II, sc 1, l 102
Nature is fine in love, and where 't is fine,
It sends some precious instance of itself
After the thing it loves
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet Act IV, sc 5, l 161

Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense,
'gainst shame,
And sweetens in the suffering pangs it bears,
The aloes of all torments, shocks, and fears
SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l 271

17 O spirit of love! how quick and fresh art thou
That notwithstanding thy capacity
Receiveth as the sea, nought enters there,
Of what validity and pitch so'er,
But falls into abatement and low price,
Even in a minute!

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night Act I, sc 1, l 9

18 Love, as is told by the seers of old,
Comes as a butterfly tipped with gold,
Flutters and flies in sunlit skies,
Weaving round hearts that were one time
cold

SWINBURNE, Song

A lover looked She dropped her eyes
That glowed like pansies wet with dew,
And lo there came from out the skies
Butterflies all blue
JOHN DAVIDSON, Butterflies

- 1 O Love, what hours were thine and mine,
In lands of palm and southern pine;
In lands of palm, of orange-blossom,
Of olive, aloe, and maize and vine.
TENNYSON, The Daisy. St. 1.
Sweet is true love tho' given in vain, in vain.
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1000.
- 2 The wine of Love is music,
And the feast of Love is song:
And when Love sits down to the banquet,
Love sits long: . . .
Sits long and rises drunken,
But not with the feast and the wine;
He reeleth with his own heart,
That great, rich Vine.
JAMES THOMSON, The Vine.
- 3 The worlds in which we live are two—
The world "I am," and the world "I do."
LYMAN W. DENTON, Two Worlds. (Harper's Magazine, May, 1900, p. 946.)
The worlds in which we live at heart are one,
The world "I am," the fruit of "I have done";
And underneath these worlds of flower and fruit,
The world "I love," the only living root.
HENRY VAN DYKE, One World. Dr. Van Dyke's lines were a reply to Mr. Denton's, which he quoted.
Self is the only prison that can ever bind the soul;
Love is the only angel who can bid the gates unroll;
And when he comes to call thee, arise and follow fast;
His way may lie through darkness, but it leads to light at last.
HENRY VAN DYKE, The Prison and the Angel.
Who seeks for heaven alone to save his soul,
May keep the path, but will not reach the goal;
While he who walks in love may wander far,
But God will bring him where the Blessed are.
HENRY VAN DYKE, The Way.
- 4 Vain is the glory of the sky,
The beauty vain of field and grove,
Unless, while with admiring eye
We gaze, we also learn to love.
WORDSWORTH, Poems of the Fancy. No. 20.
He spake of love, such love as Spirits feel
In worlds whose course is equable and pure;
No fears to beat away—no strife to heal—
The past unsighed for, and the future sure.
WORDSWORTH, Laodamia. St. 16.
- 5 'Tis sense, unbridled will, and not true love,
That kills the soul: love betters what is best,
Even here below, but more in heaven above.
WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. I, No. 25. After Michelangelo.
All these I better in one general best.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxi.

XVII—Love: Its Bitterness

- 7 Could I love less, I should be happier now.
P. J. BAILLY, Festus: Garden and Bower.
- 8 Love and sorrow twins were born
On a shining showery morn.
THOMAS BLACKLOCK, The Graham.
- 9 Love is like fire. . . . Wounds of fire are hard to bear; harder still are those of love.
HJALMAR HJORTH BOYESSEN, Gunnar. Ch. 4.
- 10 Was it something said,
Something done,
Vexed him? Was it touch of hand,
Turn of head?
Strange! that very way
Love begun:
I as little understand
Love's decay.
ROBERT BROWNING, In a Year.
- 11 Ah woe is me, through all my days
Wisdom and wealth I both have got,
And fame and name and great men's praise;
But Love, ah! Love I have it not.
H. C. BURNER, The Way to Arcady.
- 12 Had we never lov'd sae kindly,
Had we never lov'd sae blindly,
Never met, or never parted,
We had ne'er been broken-hearted!
BURNS, Ac Fond Kiss.
- 13 O Love! thou art the very god of evil,
For, after all, we cannot call thee devil.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 205.
O love! what is it in this world of ours
Which makes it fatal to be loved? Ah, why
With cypress branches hast thou wreathed thy bowers,
And made thy best interpreter a sigh!
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 2.
Soon or late Love is his own avenger.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 73.
- 14 Just like Love is yonder rose,
Heavenly fragrance round it throws,
Yet tears its dewy leaves disclose,
And in the midst of briars it blows
Just like Love.
CAMERON, Rose and Thorn. (Strangford, tr.)
- 15 My love-lies-bleeding.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, O'Connor's Child. St. 5.
- 16 O pang all pangs above,
Is kindness counterfeiting absent Love.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Pang More Sharp than All.
Love's despair is but Hope's pining ghost!
S. T. COLERIDGE, The Visionary Hope.
- 17 So, lovers dream a rich and long delight,

But get a winter-seeming summer's night.

XVIII—Love: Pain or Pleasure

Mysterious love, uncertain treasure,
Hast thou more of pain or pleasure. . . .
Endless torments dwell about thee:

Yet who would live, and live without thee!

ANDERSON, Rosmond. Act iii, sc. 2.

Yes, loving is a painful thrill,
And not to love more painful still;
But oh, it is the worst of pain,

- To love and not be lov'd again
 ANACREON, Odes No 29 (Moore, tr)
- A mighty pain to love it is,
 And 'tis a pain that pain to miss,
 But of all pains, the greatest pain
 It is to love, but love in vain

 That he hath turn'd a heaven unto a hell!
 SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer Night's Dream
 Act 1, sc 1, l 206
- Forgetfulness of grief I yet may gain,
 In some wise may come ending to my pain.
 It may be yet the Gods will have me glad!
 Yet, love, I would that thee and pain I had!
 WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise The Death of Paris
- Love overflows with both honey and gall. It gives you a taste of sweetness, and then heaps bitterness before you to satiety (Amor et melle et felle est secundissimus, Gustum dat dulce, amarum ad satietatem usque oggent)

There lives within the very flame of love

A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 115.

14 When love begins to sicken and decay,

It useth an enforced ceremony.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 20.

He was a lover of the good old school,

Who still become more constant as they cool.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 34.

15 Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more,

Men were deceivers ever,
One foot in sea and one on shore,
To one thing constant never.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 3, l. 64.

Sigh no more, lady, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever:
One foot on sea and one on land,
To one thing constant never.

THOMAS PERCY, The Friar of Orders Gray.
(Reliques. Vol. i, bk. ii, No. 18.) Percy says that his poem is a collection of the "fragments of ancient ballads dispersed through Shakespeare's plays," which he connected together by some stanzas of his own, to "form them into a little tale."

1 Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle;
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty.
SHAKESPEARE [?], The Passionate Pilgrim.
St. 7.

2 O, how this spring of love resembleth
Th' uncertain glory of an April day,
Which now shows all the beauty of the sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away!
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act i, sc. 3, l. 84.

3 Plough not the seas, sow not the sands,
Leave off your idle pain;
Seek other mistress for your minds;
Love's service is in vain.
ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Love's Servile Lot.

4 The last link is broken
That bound me to thee,
And the words thou hast spoken
Have render'd me free.
FANNY STEERS, Song.

5 Out upon it! I have lov'd
Three whole days together;
And am like to love three more,
If it prove fair weather.
SIR JOHN SUCKLING, The Constant Lover.

* And Love, grown faint and fretful
With lips but half regretful
Sighs, and with eyes forgetful
Weeps that no loves endure.
SWINBURNE, The Garden of Proserpine.

6 I have lived long enough, having seen one thing, that love hath an end.
SWINBURNE, Hymn to Proserpine, l. 1.

7 To say that you can love one person all your life is just like saying that one candle will continue burning as long as you live.
LEO TOLSTOY, The Kreutzer Sonata. Ch. 2.

8 Love, like fortune, turns upon a wheel, and is very much given to rising and falling.
SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The False Friend. Act i,
sc. 1.

9 For surely it is something to have been
The best beloved for a little while,
To have walked hand in hand with Love, and seen
His scarlet wings flit once across thy smile.
OSCAR WILDE, Apologia.

10 Those who are faithful know only the trivial side of love: it is the faithless who know love's tragedies.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 1.

11 Give me, I ask it, nay I know no pride—
The love that's left when you
Have spent the greater part.
I have a beggar heart.

ANNE ELIZABETH WILSON, The Beggar Heart.

12 I loved a lass, a fair one,
As fair as e'er was seen;
She was indeed a rare one,
Another Sheba queen:
But, fool as then I was,
I thought she loved me too:
But now, alas! she's left me,
Falero, lero, loo!
GEORGE WITHER, I Loved a Lass.

Shall I, wasting in despair,
Die because a woman's fair?
GEORGE WITHER, The Lover's Resolution.

13 Oh, waly, waly, gin love be bonny,
A little while, when it is new;
But when it's auld it waxeth cauld,
And fades awa' like morning dew.
UNKNOWN, Gin Love be Bonny.

14 My love he loves another love:
Alas, sweetheart, why does he so?
UNKNOWN, The Mourning Maiden. (c. 1550)

XXII—Love: Its Caprice

15 Then crown my joys, or cure my pain:
Give me more love, or more disdain.
THOMAS CAREW, Mediocrity in Love Rejected
Give hopes of bliss or dig my grave:
More love or more disdain I crave.
CHARLES WEBBE, Against Indifference.

Or love me less, or love me more;
And play not with my liberty:
Either take all, or all restore;
Bind me at least, or set me free!
SIR JOHN GODOLPHIN, Song.

I'll be this abject thing no more;
Love, give me back my heart again.
GEORGE GRANVILLE, Adieu l'Amour.

16 Would I were free from this restraint,
Or else had hopes to win her:
Would she could make of me a saint,
Or I of her a sinner.
WILLIAM COMBEYNE, Pious Solinda.

1
Saith he, "Yet are you too unkind,
If in your heart you cannot find
To love us now and then."

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Eclogue.

2
Thou art to me a delicious torment.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

3
One common fate we both must prove;
You die with envy, I with love.

JOHAN GAY, Fables: The Poet and Rose, l. 29.

4
Time was when Love and I were well acquainted.

W. S. GILBERT, The Sorcerer. Act i.

5
And love is still an emptier sound,
The modern fair one's jest;
On earth unseen, or only found
To warm the turtle's nest.
GOLDSMITH, A Ballad. (Vicar of Wakefield.
Ch. 8.)

6
As if to show that love had made him smart
All over—and not merely round his heart.

THOMAS HOOD, Bianca's Dream.

His love was great though his wit was small.

THOMAS HOOD, Equestrian Courtship.

7
Roses red and roses white
Plucked I for my love's delight.
She would none of all my posies,—
Bade me gather her blue roses.
RUDYARD KIPPLING, Blue Roses.

8
None without hope e'er loved the brightest fair,
But love can hope where reason would despair.

GEORGE LYTTLETON, Epigram.

9
And how should I know your true love
From many another one?

Oh, by his cockle hat and staff,
And by his sandal shoon.

THOMAS PERCY, The Friar of Orders Gray.

10
Tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied her raven ringlets in;
But not alone in the silken snare
Did she catch her lovely floating hair,
For, tying her bonnet under her chin,
She tied a young man's heart within.

NORA PERCY, The Love-Knot.

11
Ah! what avails it me the flocks to keep,
Who lost my heart while I preserv'd my sheep!

POPE, Pastorals: Autumn, l. 79.

12
For, as our different ages move,
'Tis so ordained (would Fate but mend
it!),

That I shall be past making love
When she begins to comprehend it.
MATTHEW PRIOR, To a Child of Quality.

13
And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 147.

14
By heaven, I do love; and it hath taught me to rhyme, and to be melancholy.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 3, l. 14.

And frame love-ditties passing rare,
And sing them to a lady fair.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto i, st. 7.

All that a man has to say or do that can possibly concern mankind, is in some shape or other to tell the story of his love,—to sing, and, if he is fortunate and keeps alive, he will be forever in love.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 6 May, 1854.

He is far gone, far gone: and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love;
very near this.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 190.

He was more than over shoes in love.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 24.

Gone already!

Inch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a flock'd one!

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2,
l. 185.

16
I hold him but a fool that will endanger
His body for a girl that loves him not.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act v, sc. 4, l. 133.

And though she saw all heaven in flower above,
She would not love.

SWINBURNE, A Leave-taking.

17
How wayward is this foolish love,
That, like a testy babe, will scratch the nurse
And presently, all humble, kiss the rod!

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act i, sc. 2, l. 57.

18
I think there is not half a kiss to choose
Who loves another best.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4,
l. 175.

19
Love still a boy and oft a wanton is,
School'd only by his mother's tender eye.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Asiophil and Stella. Sonnet lxxviii.

But a bevy of Erotes apple-cheek'd
In a shallop of crystal ivory-beak'd.

TENNYSOON, The Isle.

Love is a boy by poets styl'd;

Then spare the rod and spoil the child.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 1, l. 843.

See also CHILDREN: THEIR TRAINING.

Why so pale and wan, fond lover?

Prithee, why so pale?

Will, when looking well can't move her,

Looking ill prevail?

Prithee, why so pale?

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Aglaure: Song.

You lovers are such clumsy summer-flies,
Forever buzzing at your lady's face.

TENNYSON, The Foresters. Act iv, sc. 1.

Werther had a love for Charlotte

Such as words could never utter;

Would you know how first he met her?

She was cutting bread and butter.

TRACKERAY, The Sorrows of Werther.

Charlotte, having seen his body
Borne before her on a shutter,

Like a well-conducted person,

Went on cutting bread and butter.

TRACKERAY, The Sorrows of Werther.

The only difference between a caprice and a life-long passion is that the caprice lasts a little longer.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 2.

When Madelon comes out to serve us drinks,
We always know she's coming by her song.

And every man he tells his little tale,

And Madelon, she listens all day long.

Our Madelon is never too severe—

A kiss or two is nothing much to her—

She laughs us up to love and life and God—

Madelon, Madelon, Madelon.

UNKNOWN, Madelon. Popular song during the World War.

XXIII.—Love: Its Perjuries

Vows! dost think the gods regard the vows of lovers? They are things made in necessity and ought not to be kept, nor punished when broken.

APHRA BEHN, The Dutch Lover. Act v, sc. 1.

Lovers' oaths enter not the ears of the gods.

("Ἐπειὶ θεοὶ οὐκ ἰσχύουσιν εὖ τὴν ἀπαρτίαν.")

CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. 27.

Let no woman believe a man's oath, let none believe that a man's speeches can be trustworthy. They, while their mind desires something and longs eagerly to gain it, nothing fear to swear; nothing spare to promise; but as soon as the lust of their greedy mind is satisfied, they fear not then their words, they heed not their perjuries.

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxxv, l. 143.

What a woman says to her lover should be written in wind and running water. (Muller cupidus quod dict amanti In vento et rapida scribere oportet aqua.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxx, l. 3.

Lovers' oaths, the sport of every lightest breeze. (Lasciva volant levibus perjurio ventis.)

CLAUDIAN, *Epithalamium De Nuptiis Honori
Augusti*, l. 83.

The old, yet still successful, cheat of love.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiv, l. 188. (Pope, tr.)

No longer could I doubt him true—
All other men may use deceit;

He always said my eyes were blue,

And often swore my lips were sweet.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Mother, I cannot Mind My Wheel.

For the queen of love,
As they hold constantly, does never punish,
But smile at lovers' perjuries.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act ii, sc. 3.

When a man talks of love, with caution trust
him;

But if he swears, he'll certainly deceive thee.

THOMAS OTWAY, The Orphan. Act ii, sc. 1.

Venus lends deaf ears to love's deceits.
(Commodat in lusus numina surda Venus.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 86.

Jupiter from on high laughs at the perjuries of lovers. (Juppiter ex alto perjurio ridet amantum.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 633.

For Jove himself sits in the azure skies

And laughs below at lovers' perjuries.

OVID, Ars Amatoria, l. 633 (Marlowe, tr.)

Jove laughs at lovers' perjuries, and bids the winds carry them away without fulfillment. (Perjurio ridet amantum Juppiter et ventos irrita ferre jubet.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. vi, l. 49.

Fool, not to know that love endures no tie,
And Jove but laughs at lovers' perjury.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. ii, l. 148.

At lovers' perjuries, They say, Jove laughs.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 92.

Hell's aloof in lovers' tears.

DOROTHY PARKER.

Love is faithless. (Perfidiosus est amor.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 72. (Act i, sc. 1.)

Credit me, friend, it hath been ever thus,
Since the ark rested on Mount Ararat:

False man hath sworn, and woman hath believed—

Repented and reproached, and then believed once more

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel Ch 20, Motto
Quoted as from The New World

She deceiving, I believing,
What can lovers wish for more?

SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, Song

1
Men's vows are women's traitors! A bait for ladies

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline Act iii, sc 4, l 56

2
You would for paradise break faith and troth,
And Jove, for your love, would infringe an oath

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost Act iv, sc
3, l 143

And swearing till my very roof was dry
With oaths of love

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice Act
iii, sc 2, l 206

3
When my love swears that she is made of
truth,

I do believe her though I know she lies SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets No cxxxviii Also The Passionate Pilgrim, l 1

4
All lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform, vowing more than the perfection of ten and discharging less than the tenth part of one

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida Act iii, sc
2, l 91

We men may say more swear more, but, indeed
Our shows are more than will, for still we prove
Much in our vows, but little in our love

119

5
No oath too binding for a lover
SOPHOCLES, Phædra Frag 848

6
For kings and lovers are alike in this,
That their chief art in reign dissembling is SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Love and Beloved

7
Fear not to swear, void are the perjuries of love, which, thanks to Jove the winds carry away over land and sea (Nec jurare time veneris perjurata venti Inrita per terras et freta summa ferunt, Gratia magna Jovi)
TIBULLUS, Elegies Bk 1, eleg 4, l 21

8
When one is in love one begins to deceive oneself And one ends by deceiving others
OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance
Act iii

XXIV—Love: Love at First Sight

9
None ever loved but at first sight they loved GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Blind Beggar of
Alexandria (1596)

Who ever lov'd that lov'd not at first sight?

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Hero and Leander
First Sestiad l 176 (1598)

Dead shepherd now I find thy saw of might,
'Who ever loved that loved not at first sight?'
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It Act iii, sc 5, l
82 (1599)

10
Love that all gentle hearts so quickly know
(Amor, ch'al cor gentil ratto s'apprende)
DANTE Inferno Canto v, l 100

11
Amid the gloom and travail of existence suddenly to behold a beautiful being and as instantaneously to feel an overwhelming conviction that with that fair form for ever our destiny must be entwined this is love!
BENJAMIN DISRAELI Henrietta Temple

If thou hast loved, re open the magic book,
Say do its annals date not from a look?
In which two hearts, unguessed perchance before,
Rush'd each to each, and were as two no more,
While all thy being—by some Power above
Its will constrain'd—sigh'd trembling, 'This is
'Love'

BULWER LYTTON, The New Timon Pt iii, l
57

12
That old miracle—Love at first sight—
Needs no explanations

OWEN MERRITT, Lucile Pt ii canto vi, sec 16

13
Your brother and my sister no sooner met but they looked, no sooner looked but they loved, no sooner loved but they sighed, no sooner sighed but they asked one another the reason, no sooner knew the reason but they sought the remedy and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage they are in the very wrath of love and they will together, clubs cannot part them

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It Act v, sc 2, l 36

14
Not at first sight nor with a dribbled shot,
Love gave the wound, which, while I breathe,
will bleed

The only true love is love at first sight, second sight dispels it

ISRAEL ZANOWILL

XXV—Love First Love

16
As in the bosom o' the stream,
The moonbeam dwells at dewy e'en,
So trembling, pure, was tender love
Within the breast o' bonnie Jean.
BURNS, Bonnie Jean

1 Nature's oracle—first love,—that all
Which Eve has left her daughters since her fall.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 189.

Love is so very timid when 'tis new.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 112.

2 The spot where love's first links were wound,
That ne'er are riven,
Is hallowed down to earth's profound,
And up to Heaven!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hallowed Ground.

3 The magic of first love is our ignorance that it can ever end.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Henrietta Temple, iv, 1.

4 Lovers should guard their strangeness.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

The accepted and betrothed lover has lost the wildest charm of his maiden in her acceptance of him.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

5 But one always returns to one's first loves.
(Mais on revient toujours A ses premières amours.)

ETIENNE, La Joconde. Act iii, sc. 1.

6 The bashful virgin's side-long looks of love.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 29.

7 Yet with low words she greeted me,
With smiles divinely tender;

Upon her cheek the red rose dawned,—
The white rose meant surrender.

JOHN HAY, The White Flag.

8 It is an ancient story Yet is it ever new.
(Es ist eine alte Geschichte, Doch bleibt sie immer neu.)

HEINE, Lyrisches Intermezzo.

9 Soft is the breath of a maiden's Yes:
Not the light gossamer stirs with less;
But never a cable that holds so fast
Through all the battles of wave and blast.

O. W. HOLMES, Dorothy Q. St. 7.

10 A warrior so bold, and a virgin so bright,
Conversed as they sat on the green.
They gazed on each other with tender delight.

Alonso the Brave was the name of the knight—

The maiden's the Fair Imogene.

M. G. LEWIS, *Alonso the Brave and the Fair
Imogene*. From his novel, Ambrosio.

11 O, there is nothing holier, in this life of ours, than the first consciousness of love,—the first fluttering of its silken wings.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. III, ch. 6.

12 That was the first sound in the song of love!
Scarce more than silence is, and yet a sound.
LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act I, sc.
3, l. 109.

How can I tell the signals and the signs
By which one heart another heart divines?
How can I tell the many thousand ways
By which it keeps the secret it betrays?

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. III,
Student's Tale: Emma and Egishard, l. 75.

13 I've wandered east, I've wandered west,
I've bourned a weary lot;
But in my wanderings far or near
Ye never were forgot.
The fount that first burst frae this heart
Still travels on its way
And channels deeper as it rins
The love o' life's young day.

WILLIAM MOTHERWELL, Jeannie Morrison.

14 It was many and many a year ago,
In a kingdom by the sea,
That a maiden there lived whom you may know
By the name of Annabel Lee;
And this maiden shelived with noother thought
Than to love and be loved by me.

She was a child and I was a child,
In this kingdom by the sea,
But we loved with a love that was more than
love,—

I and my Annabel Lee;
With a love that the winged seraphs of heaven
Coveted her and me.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, Annabel Lee.

And neither the angels in heaven above,
Nor the demons down under the sea,
Can ever discover my soul from the soul
Of the beautiful Annabel Lee.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, Annabel Lee.

15 I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love.

New Testament: Revelation, ii, 4.

16 All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 96.

For sometimes she would laugh, and sometimes cry,
Then sudden waxed wroth, and all she knew not
why.

JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence.
Canto I, st. 75.

17 First love is only a little foolishness and a lot of curiosity.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island, iv.

18 For indeed I knew
Of no more subtle master under heaven
Than is the maiden passion for a maid,
Not only to keep down the base in man,
But teach high thought, and amiable words

And courtliness, and the desire of fame,
And love of truth, and all that makes a man.
TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 475.

1 Men always want to be a woman's first love.
That is their clumsy vanity. We women have a more subtle instinct about things. What we like is to be a man's last romance.
OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act II.

XXVI—Love: Old and New

2 Dawn love is silver,
Wait for the west:
Old love is gold love—
Old love is best.
KATHARINE LEE BATES, For a Golden Wedding.

3 'Tis well to be merry and wise,
'Tis well to be honest and true;
'Tis well to be off with the old love,
Before you are on with the new.
C. R. MATURIN, Bertram: Molto. A play produced at Drury Lane theatre in 1816.
It is best to be off w' the old love,
Before you be on w' the new.

SCOTT, The Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 29.
(1819) Quoted as "the end of an old song."
It is good to be merry and wise,
It is good to be honest and true,
It is best to be off with the old love
Before you go on with the new.

Version of the old song published in Songs of England and Scotland, London, 1835. Vol. II,
p. 73.

And afore you're off w' the auld love
It's best to be on w' the new.
UNKNOWN, It's Gude to be Merry and Wise.
The Scotch version, showing characteristic Scotch caution.

There is an old song which gives us some very good advice about courting.—

"It's gude to be off with the auld luvie

Before ye be on w' the new."

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch.
27. (1857)

It is better to love two too many than one too few.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Epigrams.

4 My merry, merry, merry roundelay
Concludes with Cupid's curse:
They that do change old love for new,
Pray gods, they change for worse!
GEORGE PELL, Fair and Fair.

5 As one who cons at evening o'er an album
all alone,
And muses on the faces of the friends that be has known,
So I turn the leaves of Fancy till, in shadowy design,
I find the smiling features of an old sweetheart of mine.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, An Old Sweetheart of Mine.

6 Old love is little worth when new is more preferred.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto ix, st. 40.

7 I who all the Winter through,
Cherished other loves than you
And kept hands with hoary policy in marriage-bed and pew;
Now I know the false and true,
For the earnest sun looks through,
And my old love comes to meet me in the dawning and the dew.

R. L. STEVENSON, My Old Love. (1876)

8 The woods are hush'd, their music is no
more;

The leaf is dead, the yearning past away;
New leaf, new life—the days of frost are o'er;

New life, new love, to suit the newer day:
New loves are sweet as those that went before:

Free love—free field—we love but while we may.

TENNYSON, The Last Tournament, l. 276.

At last she sought out Memory, and they trod
The same old paths where Love had walk'd with Hope,

And Memory fed the soul of Love with tears.

TENNYSON, The Lover's Tale. Pt. I, l. 808.

9 Other loves may come to us and will,
And may hold us in their spell until
With a half regretful sigh,
We discover by and by,
There's a charm about the old love still.
F. W. VANDERSLOOT, There's a Charm About the Old Love Still. (1901)

XXVII—Love: Unreturning

10 Love, like Reputation, once fled, never returns more.

APHRA BEHN, History of the Nun.

The moon returns, and the spring; birds warble,
trees burst into leaf,
But Love once gone, goes for ever, and all that endures is the grief.

MATHILDE BLIND, Love Trilogy. No. 3.

And sigh to bethink me how vain is my sighing,
For love, once extinguished, is kindled no more.
REGINALD HEBER, Song to a Welsh Air.

11 Love, like Ulysses, is a wanderer,
For new fields always and new fates yearn-
ing. . . .

Put by, O waiting ones, put by your weaving,
Unlike Ulysses, love is unreturning.

ROSSELL MERCIER MOSTCOMERY, Comed.

12 For the man's love once gone never returns.

Nothing grows again more easily than love
(Nihil enim facilius quam amor recrudescat)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucillum Epist. lxxix, 3

XXVIII—Love in a Cottage

Love lasteth as long as the money endureth
WILLIAM CAXTON, The Game of Chesse, iii, 3
(1474) Cited as "a common proverb in England"

Love comes in at the window and goes out at the door

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 327 (1605)

When poverty comes in at the door, love creeps out at the window

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 5565

When the glowing of passion's over, and pinching winter comes will amorous sighs supply the want of fire, or kind looks and kisses keep off hunger?

SUSANNAH CENTILIVRE, Artifice (1724)

Nobody wants to kiss when they are hungry
DOROTHY DIX

Love is maintained by wealth, when all is spent
Adversity then breeds the discontent

ROBERT HERRICK, Heperides No. 144

Love in a hut, with water and a crust,
Is—Love, forgive us!—cinders, ashes, dust,
Love in a palace is perhaps at last
More grievous torment than a hermit's fast
KEATS, Lamia Pt. II, l. 1

Love lurks as soon about a sheepcote as a palace

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde, l. 95 (1590)

Love lives in cottages as well as in courts
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs

In the very smallest cot
There is room enough for a loving pair
(Raum ist in der kleinsten Hütte Für ein glücklich lebend Paar)

SCHILLER, Der Jüngling am Bache St. 4

'Tis better far to love and be poor, than be rich with an empty heart

SIR LEWIS MORRIS, Songs of Two Worlds
Love in Death

Ah, better to love in the lowliest cot
Than pine in a palace alone

G. J. WHITE-MELVILLE, Chastelar

Love in a cottage, with a broken window to let in the rain, is not my idea of comfort

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp On the Writing of Essays

Without Ceres (bread) and Liber (wine) Venus will starve (Sine Cerere et Libero friget Venus)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 732.

Then the little maid she said, "Your fire may warm the bed,

But what shall we do for to eat?

Will the flames you're only rich in make a fire in the kitchen,

And the little God of Love turn the "pit?"

UNKNOWN, Old Nursery Rhyme, from an 18th century broadside

They may talk of love in a cottage,
And bowers of trellised vine—
Of nature bewitchingly simple,
And milkmaids half divine, . .

But give me a sly flirtation,
By the light of a chandelier—
With music to play in the pauses,
And nobody very near

N. P. WILLIS, Love in a Cottage

Your love in a cottage is hungry,
Your vine is a nest for flies—
Your milkmaid shocks the Graces,
And simplicity talks of pies!
You lie down to your shady slumber
And wake with a bug in your ear,
And your damsel that walks in the morning
Is shod like a mountaineer

N. P. WILLIS, Love in a Cottage

True love is at home on a carpet,
And mightily likes his ease—
And true love has an eye for a dinner,
And starves beneath shady trees
His wing is the fan of a lady,
His foot is an invisible thing
And his arrow is tipped with a jewel,
And shot from a silver string
N. P. WILLIS, Love in a Cottage

XXIX—Love Spoken and Silent

Love ceases to be a pleasure when it ceases to be a secret

MRS. APHERA BEHN, The Lover's Watch

Say thou dost love me, love me, love me—toll
The silver iterance!—only minding, Dear,
To love me also in silence, with thy soul

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese
No. xxi

In many ways doth the full heart reveal
The presence of the love it would conceal
S. T. COLERIDGE, Motto

Love most concealed does most itself discover
WALTER DAVIDSON, Sonnets No. xiv

A murderous guilt shows not itself more soon
Than love that would seem hid love's night is noon

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night Act III, sc. 1, l. 159

Words are the weak support of cold indifference, love has no language to be heard
CONGREVE, The Double Dealer Act IV, sc. 17

For God sake hold your tongue, and let me
love

JOHN DONNE, The Canonization

- 1 Sweet are the words of Love, sweeter his thoughts
Sweetest of all what Love nor says nor thinks
RICHARD GARNETT, De Flagello Myrteo, clxv
When Silence speaks for Love she has much to say
RICHARD GARNETT, De Flagello Myrteo, lxxii
- 2 All the heart was full of feeling love had ripened into speech,
Like the sap that turns to nectar, in the velvet of the peach
WILLIAM WALLACE HARNEY, Adonais

FRANCES RIDLEY HAVENAL, Loving Allegiance
- 4 They do not love that do not show their love
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs Pt II, ch 9
- 5 Love is sparingly soluble in the words of men therefore they speak much of it, but one syllable of woman's speech can dissolve more of it than a man's heart can hold
O W HOLMES The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table Ch 11
- No love so true as love that dies untold
O W HOLMES, The Mysterious Illness
- 6 Listlessness and silence denote the lover (Amantem languor et silentium arguit)
HORACE, Epodes No xii, l 9
- 7 But oft the words come forth awry of him that loveth well
HENRY HOWARD, Pangs and Sleights of Love
- 8 'Tis no sin love's fruits to steal,
But the sweet thefts to reveal,
To be taken to be seen
These have crimes accounted been
BEN JONSON Volpone Act III, sc 6 See also under KISS
- 9 Love contending with friendship and self with each generous impulse
To and fro in his breast his thoughts were heaving and dashing
LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish Pt III, l 7
- Archly the maiden smiled and, with eyes over-running with laughter,
Said, in a tremulous voice, "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"
LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish Pt III, concluding lines
- In the way of love and glory
Each tongue best tells his own story
SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Of the Choice of a Wife
- Therefore all hearts in love use their own tongues,
Let every eye negotiate for itself

- And trust no agent
SHAKESPEARE Much Ado About Nothing Act II, sc 1, l 184
- A day in April never came so sweet,
To show how costly summer was at hand,
As this fore spurrer comes before his lord

- O, love's best habit is a soothing tongue
SHAKESPEARE, The Passionate Pilgrim, l 11
- How silver sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
Like softest music to attending ears!
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet Act II, sc 2, l 166
- 17 She never told her love,
But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud,
Feed on her damask cheek
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night Act II, sc 4, l 113
- 18 What, gone without a word?
Ay, so true love should do it cannot speak,
For truth hath better deeds than words to grace it
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona Act II, sc 2, l 16
- Didst thou but know the only touch of love,
Thou wouldest as soon go kindle fire with snow,

As weak to quench the fire of love with words.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act II, sc. 7, l. 18.

They love indeed who quake to say they love.
Sir PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet liv.

The wretched man gan them avise too late,
That love is not where most it is profest.

Love is a talkative passion.
THOMAS WILSON, Sacra Privata, p. 194.

XXX—Love: Protestations

Mary kept the belt o' love, and O but she was gay!
She danced a jig, she sung a song that took my heart away.
WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Lovely Mary Donnelly.

One sweet, sad secret holds my heart in thrall;
A mighty love within my breast has grown,
Unseen, unspoken, and of no one known;
And of my sweet, who gave it, least of all.
(Ma vie a son secret, mon âme a son mystère.)

Un amour éternel en un moment concu.
La mal est sans remède, aussi j'ai dû le taire,
Et elle qui l'a fait n'en a jamais rien su.)
FELIX ARVERS, Sonnet. (Knight, tr.) In Mes Heures Perdues, Arvers states that it was taken from the Italian.

Heaven would not be Heaven were thy soul not with mine, nor would Hell be Hell were our souls together.
(Sive ad felices vadam post funera campos,
Seu ferar ardentem rapidi Phlegethontis ad undam,
Nec sine te felix ero, nec tecum miser unquam.)

BAPTISTA MANTUANUS, Elegues. No. iii, l. 108.
O mother, mother, what is bliss?
O mother, what is bale?
Without my William what were heaven,
Or with him what were hell?

GOTTSCHE LOWENSTUN BOWMAN, Lenore. (Walter Scott, tr., William and Helen. This was Scott's first publication.)

Would I were with him, where he is, either in heaven or in hell!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act II, sc. 2, l. 1.
And what am I but love of you angels' flesh,

Quickened by every longing love may bring.
A pilgrim fire, homeless and wandering.

KATHERINE BOWDITCH, Reincarnation.

"Honeyput" he called her,
Hurling words like javelins—
Stern John Knox with the flame in his eyes.
Steeled against shocks
Was great John Knox!
Target for surprise
From those side-glancing eyes?
Nay, I trow not—"Honeyput."
LOUISE MOREY BOWMAN, John Knox and Mary Queen.

In your arms was still delight,
Quiet as a street at night;
And thoughts of you, I do remember,
Were green leaves in a darkened chamber,
Were dark clouds in a moonless sky.
RUPERT BROOKE, Retrospect.

Beloved, let us love so well,
Our work shall still be better for our love,
And still our love be sweeter for our work,
And both commended, for the sake of each,
By all true workers and true lovers born.
E. B. BROWNING, Ankora Leigh. Bk. ix, l. 924.

How do I love thee? Let me count the ways.
I love thee to the depth and breadth and height
My soul can reach, when feeling out of sight
For the ends of Being and ideal Grace.
I love thee to the level of everyday's
Most quiet need, by sun and candle-light.
I love thee freely, as men strive for Right;
I love thee purely, as they turn from Praise.
E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese. No. xliii.

For the lake, its swan;
For the dell, its dove;
And for thee—(oh, haste!)
Me, to bend above,
Me, to hold embraced.
ROBERT BROWNING, James Lee's Wife. Pt. i.

Flower o' the broom,
Take away love, and our earth is a tomb!

Flower o' the cleve,
All the Latin I construe is "amo," I love!
ROBERT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi.
Be a god and hold me With a charm!
Be a man and fold me With thine arm!
ROBERT BROWNING, A Woman's Last Word.

I canna tell, I mauna tell,
I darena for your anger;
But secret love will break my heart,
If I conceal it langer.
BURNS, Craigie-burn Wood.

The golden hours on angel wings
Flew o'er me and my dearie,
For dear to me as light and life

- Was my sweet Highland Mary.
 Burns, Highland Mary.
- To see her is to love her,
 And love but her for ever;
 For nature made her what she is,
 And ne'er made sic another!
 Burns, O, Saw Ye Bonnie Lesley. (1792)
- Oh! she was good as she was fair,
 None—none on earth above her!
 As pure in thought as angels are,
 To know her was to love her.
 — SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. i, l. 69. (1814)
- Tho' father an' mither an' a' should gae mad,
 O whistle, an' I'll come to ye, my iad.
 Burns, O Whistle, an' I'll Come to Ye.
- Whistle, and she'll come to you.
 — JOHN FLETCHER, Wit Without Money. Act iv, sc. 4.
- O, my luve is like a red, red rose
 That's newly sprung in June.
 O, my luve is like the melody
 That's sweetly play'd in tune.
 Burns, A Red, Red Rose.
- The cold in clime are cold in blood,
 Their love can scarce deserve the name;
 But mine was like the lava flood
 That boils in Ætna's breast of flame.
 Byron, The Giaour, l. 1099.
- She was his life,
 The ocean to the river of his thoughts,
 Which terminated all.
 — BYRON, The Dream. Sec. 2.
- She floats upon the river of his thoughts!
 LONGFELLOW, Spanish Student. Act ii, sc. 3.
- Of all the girls that are so smart
 There's none like pretty Sally;
 She is the darling of my heart,
 And she lives in our alley.
 HENRY CAREY, Sally in Our Alley.
- Let Time and Chance combine, combine!
 Let Time and Chance combine!
 The fairest love from heaven above,
 That love of yours was mine, My Dear!
 That love of yours was mine.
 — THOMAS CARLYLE, Adieu.
- Blest as the immortal gods is he,
 The youth who fondly sits by thee,
 And hears and sees thee all the while Softly speak and sweetly smile.
 (Ille mi par esse deo videtur,
 Ille, si fas est, superare divos,
 Qui sedens adversum identidem te Spectat et audit Dulce ridentem.)
 CATULLUS, Odes. Ode II, l. 1. An almost literal version of a stanza by Sappho.
- He kissed the ground her feet did kiss.
 JOHN DAVENANT, A New Ballad of Tendamlaure.

- Daisy, Daisy, give me your answer, do!
 I'm half crazy all for the love of you!
 It won't be a stylish marriage,
 I can't afford a carriage,
 But you'll look sweet upon the seat
 Of a bicycle built for two
 HARRY DACRE, Daisy Bell. (1892)
- Never will you hold me
 With puddings and cake
 Or even the threat
 Of a heart to break. . . .
- A song within a song
 And eyes upon the door—
 And you will always hold me
 One day more
 CHARLES DIVINE, Never Will You Hold Me.
- And for bonnie Annie Laurie
 I'd lay me down and dee.
 WILLIAM DOUGLAS, Annie Laurie. Anne or
 Anna Laurie was the youngest daughter of Sir Robert Laurie (or Lawrie), of Maxwell-ton, b. 1682, d. 1761.
- Not from the whole wide world I chose
 thee,
 Sweetheart, light of the land and the sea!
 The wide, wide world could not enclose thee,
 For thou art the whole wide world to me.
 R. W. GILDER, Song.
- Thus let me hold thee to my heart,
 And every care resign
 And we shall never, never part,
 My life—my all that's mine!
 GOLDSMITH, The Hermit. St. 39. (The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 8.)
- There is a lady sweet and kind,
 Was never face so pleased my mind;
 I did but see her passing by,
 And yet I love her till I die.
 BARNABE GOOGE, There is a Lady. An English version of a Latin stanza by Thomas Naogeorgus. (Poetik Kingdom or Reigns of Antichrist, 1570 Stanza written on back of leaf 53.) Wrongfully ascribed to Robert Herrick in Scottish Student's Song-Book.
 (See Notes and Queries, ix, 427.)
- Thou art my love, my life, my heart,
 The very eyes of me:
 And hast command of every part
 To live and die for thee.
 ROBERT HERRICK, To Althea Who May Command Him Anything.
- When the swallows homeward fly,
 When the roses scattered lie,
 When from neither hill or dale,
 Chants the silvery nightingale:
 In these words my bleeding heart
 Would to thee its grief impart;
 When I thus thy image lose,

Can I, ah! can I, e'er know repose?

KARL HEDENLÖSSON, When the Swallows Homeward Fly.

Heart of my heart, O come with me
To walk the ways of Arcadie.

NORAH M. HOLLAND, Grasshopper's Song.

Heart of my heart, the world is young;
Love lies hidden in every rose.

ALFRED NOYES, Unity.

I love thee—I love thee!

'Tis all that I can say;

It is my vision in the night,
My dreaming in the day.

THOMAS HOOD, I Love Thee.

I love thee, I love but thee,
With a love that shall not die
Till the sun grows cold,
And the stars are old,
And the leaves of the Judgment Book unfold!

BAYARD TAYLOR, Bedouin Song.

With thee I fain would live, with thee I'd gladly die! (Tecum vivere amem, tecum obeam libens!)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 9, l. 24.

If you become a Nun, dear,
The bishop Love will be;

The Cupids every one, dear!

Will chant—"We trust in thee!"

LEIGH HUNT, The Nun.

We have lived and loved together
Through many changing years;
We have shared each other's gladness,
And wept each other's tears.

CHARLES JEFFERYS, We Have Lived and Loved Together.

We twa hae run about the braes,
And pu'd the gowans fine.

ROBERT BURNS, Auld Lang Syne.

To stray together down Life's slope,
While Age came on like gentle rain.

R. U. JOHNSON, The Winter Hour. Pt. viii.

By the waters of Life we sat together,
Hand in hand, in the golden days
Of the beautiful early summer weather,
When skies were purple and breath was praise.

THOMAS NOEL, An Old Man's Idyll.

See also LIFE: I HAVE LIVED.

By the old Moulmein Pagoda, lookin' eastward to the sea,

There's a Burma girl a-settin', and I know
she thinks o' me;

For the wind is in the palm-trees, and the temple-bells they say:

"Come you back, you British soldier; come you back to Mandalay!"

RUDYARD KIPLING, Mandalay.

Though I walk with fifty thousand outer Chelsea to the Strand,

An' they talks a lot o' lovin', but wot do they understand?

RUDYARD KIPLING, Mandalay.

I love a lassie, a bonnie, bonnie lassie,
She's as pure as the lily in the dell.
She's as sweet as the heather,
The bonnie, bloomin' heather,
Mary, ma Scotch Blue-bell.

HARRY LAUDER AND GERALD GRAPTON, *I Love
a Lassie*.

The charms, alas! that won me,
I never can forget:

Although thou hast undone me,
I own I love thee yet.

WILLIAM LEGGETT, Song.

I love thee, as the good love heaven.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act 1, sc.
3, l. 146.

If you lak-a me lak I lak-a you.

ROBAMOND JOHNSON, *Under the Bamboo
Tree*. (1902)

I'd leave my happy home for you.

WILL A. HEELAN Title and refrain of popular song, with music by Harry von Tilzer. (1899)

Not as all other women are

Is she that to my soul is dear;

Her glorious fancies come from far,

Beneath the silver evening-star,

And yet her heart is ever near.

J. R. LOWELL, My Love.

This lass so neat, with smile so sweet,
Has won my right good will,

I'd crowns resign to call her mine,
Sweet lass of Richmond Hill.

LEONARD McNALLY, *The Lass of Richmond
Hill*. Published anonymously in London Public Advertiser, 3 Aug., 1789. Sometimes attributed to William Upton.

Come live with me and be my Love,
And we will all the pleasures prove

That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
Or woods, or steepy mountain yields.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, The Passionate Shepherd to His Love. Included by Walton in The Compleat Angler, ch. 2, as "that smooth song which was made by Kit Ma. lowe, now at least fifty years ago." Sometimes wrongly attributed to Shakespeare, because fragments of the second and third stanzas are quoted in The Merry Wives of Windsor (Act iii, sc. 1, l.
16), and the entire poem included in The Passionate Pilgrim (Pt. xx). The versions vary slightly.

If all the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,

These pretty pleasures might me move

To live with thee and be thy love.

SIR WALTER RALPH, The Nymph's Reply to the Passionate Shepherd. Walton included this poem in The Compleat Angler, ch. 2.

calling it The Milkmaid's Mother's Answer, saying that "It was made by Sir Walter Raleigh in his younger days." The first stanza was also included in The Passionate Pilgrim, immediately following Marlowe's poem.

* Come live with me, and be my love,
And we will some new pleasures prove
Of golden sands, and crystal brooks,
With silken lines, and silver hooks.

JOHN DONNE, The Bait. Included by Walton in The Compleat Angler, ch. 9, as "made by Dr. Donne, and made to shew the world that he could make soft and smooth verses, when he thought them fit and worth his labour."

1
My love is of a birth as rare
As 'tis for object strange and high;
It was begotten by despair
Upon impossibility.

ANDREW MARVELL, My Love.

2
She whom I love is hard to catch and conquer,
Hard, but O the glory of the winning were she won!

GEORGE MEREDITH, Love in the Valley. St. 2.
Give me purity to be worthy the good in her, and grant her patience to reach the good in me.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel, Ch. 34.

3
I loved you ere I knew you; know you now,
And having known you, love you better still.
OWEN MEREDITH, Venere.

4
With the first dream that comes with the first sleep

I run, I run, I am gathered to thy heart.

ALICE MEYNELL, Renouncement.

5
Sae true his heart, sae smooth his speech,
His breath like caller air,

His very foot has music in't,

As he comes up the stair.

WILLIAM JULIUS MICKLE, The Sailor's Wife.

Also attributed to Jean Adam.

6
So dear I love him, that with him all deaths
I could endure, without him live no life.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 832.

7
Come, rest in this bosom, my own stricken deer,

Though the herd have fled from thee, thy home is still here.

THOMAS MOORE, Come, Rest in This Bosom.
I know not, I ask not, if guilt's in that heart,

I but know that I love thee, whatever thou art.

THOMAS MOORE, Come, Rest in This Bosom.

8
Wert thou more fickle than the restless sea,
Still should I love thee, knowing thee for such.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. ix, l. 22.

A Book of Verses underneath the Bough,
A Jug of Wine, a Loaf of Bread—and Thou
Beside me singing in the Wilderness—
Oh, Wilderness were Paradise enow!

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 12. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

Or were I in the wildest waste,
Sae black and bare, sae black and bare,
The desert were a Paradise,
If thou wert there, if thou wert there.

BURNS, Oh! Wert Thou in the Cold Blast.

Oh that the desert were my dwelling-place,
With one fair spirit for my minister,
That I might all forget the human race,
And, hating no one, love but only her!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 177.

O Love! in such a wilderness as this,
Where transport and security entwine,
Here is the empire of thy perfect bliss,
And here thou art a god indeed divine.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. iii, st. 1.

"A jug and a book and a dame,
And a nice shady nook for the same,"

Said Omar Khayyám,

"And I don't give a darn

What you say, it's a great little game!"

E. M. ROBINSON, Limericked Classics.

10
Quick as a humming bird is my love,

Dipping into the hearts of flowers—

She darts so eagerly, swiftly, sweetly

Dipping into the flowers of my heart.

JAMES OPPENHEIM, Quick as a Humming Bird.

11
Dear as the vital warmth that feeds my life,

Dear as these eyes, that weep in fondness o'er thee.

THOMAS OTWAY, Venue Preserved. Act v, sc. 1 12

I love thee then

Not only for thy body packed with sweet

Of all this world, that cup of brimming

June, . . .

Not for this only do I love thee, but

Because Infinity upon thee broods;

And thou art full of whispers and of shadows.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Marpessa.

13
Thou wast all that to me, love,

For which my soul did pine:

A green isle in the sea, love,

A fountain and a shrine.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, To One in Paradise.

14
Love me if I live!

Love me if I die!

What to me is life or death,

So that thou be nigh?

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Song.

15
We are prepared, my love and I,

For winter on a hill:

I stored a theme of song, and she
A poet of daffodil.

EDWARD QUARLES, Stronghold.

Love me and the world is mine.

DAVID RENO, jr., Title of popular song, 1906

The hours I spent with thee, dear heart,
Are as a string of pearls to me;
I count them over, every one apart,
My rosary, my rosary.

ROBERT CAMERON ROGERS, My Rosary.

Her voice, whate'er she said, enchanted;
Like music to the heart it went.
And her dark eyes—how eloquent!
Ask what they would, 'twas granted.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. i, l. 80.

Still so gently o'er me stealing,
Mem'ry will bring back the feeling,
Spite of all my grief revealing
That I love thee, love thee still.
(Ah! perchè non posso odiarti
Infedel, com'io vorrei!
Cancellata dal mio cor.)

FELICE ROMANI, La Sonnambula. Act II

For one man is my world of all the men
This wide world holds; O love, my world is you.

CHRISTINA ROBERTI, Come Back to Me.

And in his heart my heart is locked,
And in his life my life

CHRISTINA ROBERTI, Noble Sisters.

Love, all the hours are long

That once so fleetly flew;

I am bereft of song

Being bereft of you.

But when you come again

How nimbly Time will run

To such a jocund strain,

For you and song are one.

CLINTON SCOLLARD, Love and Song Are One

O cos, cos, cos, my pretty little cos, that thou didst know how many fathom deep I am in love! But it cannot be sounded; my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 209.

The fair, the cheek and unexpressive she

RICHARD CAMERON, Wife to His (Supposed) Widow.

Doubt thou the stars are fire;

Doubt that the sun with fire

Doubt truth to be a liar;

But never doubt I love.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act II, sc. 2, l. 116.

Forty thousand brothers
Could not, with all their quantity of love,
Make up my sum.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act V, sc. 1, l. 292.

From my heart-string I love the lovely bully.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act IV, sc. 1, l. 47.

Adieu, valour! rust, rapier! be still, drum!
for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth Assist me, some extemporal god of rhyme, for I am sure I shall turn sonnet Devise, wit! write, pen; for I am for whole volumes in folio!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act I, sc. 2, l. 187.

Perdition catch my soul,
But I do love thee! and when I love thee not,
Chaos is come again.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act III, sc. 3, l. 90

If heaven would make me such another world
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act V, sc. 2, l. 144

Speak but one rhyme, and I am satisfied;
Cry but "Ay me!" pronounce but "love"
and "dove."

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 1, l. 9

In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 2, l. 93.

This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,

May prove a beautiful flower when next we meet.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 2, l. 121.

You'll love me yet!—and I can tarry

Your love's protracted growing.

June reared that bunch of flowers you carry,

From seeds of April's sowing

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. III.

My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep, the more I give to thee
The more I have, for both are infinite

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc. 2, l. 133.

Give me my Romeo; and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night
And pay no worship to the garish sun.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act III, sc. 2, l. 21.

Rompo, if dead, should be cut up into little stars to make the heavens fine.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Love.

1 Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets, No. xviii.

Thy love is better than high birth to me,
Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost,
Of more delight than hawks or horses be.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets, No. xci.

2 If ever thou shalt love,
In the sweet pangs of it remember me;
For such as I am all true lovers are,
Unstaid and skittish in all motions else,
Save in the constant image of the creature
That is beloved.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, Act II, sc. 4, l. 15.

3 O, but I love his lady too too much!

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

4 Act II, sc. 4, l. 205.
And notwithstanding all her sudden quips,
The least whereof would quell a lover's hope,
Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurs my love,
The more it grows and fawneth on her still.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

5 Act IV, sc. 2, l. 12.
Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel
What 'tis to love?

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 201.

6 When you loved me I gave you the whole sun and stars to play with. I gave you eternity in a single moment . . . a moment only; but was it not enough? Were you not paid then for all the rest of your struggle on earth? . . . We spent eternity together; and you ask me for a little lifetime more. . . .
I gave you your own soul: you ask me for my body as a parting. Was it not enough? Was it not enough?

BERNARD SHAW, Getting Married.

7 The fountains mingle with the river,
And the rivers with the ocean;
The winds of heaven mix for ever

With a sweet emotion;
Nothing in the world is single;
All things, by a law divine,
In one another's being mingle—
Why not I with thine?

SHELLEY, Love's Philosophy.

8 I loved him for himself alone.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna, Act I, sc. 2.

9 But thou, through good and evil, praise and blame,

Wilt not thou love me for myself alone?

MACAULAY, Lines Written 30 July, 1847.

10 I love you because you're a sweet little fool.

J. M. WOOD, The Sweet Little Fool.

11 As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.

Old Testament; Song of Solomon, II, 2.

12 Our way lies where God knows
And Love knows where;

We are in Love's hand to-day.

SWINBURNE, Love at Sea.

13 Land me, she says, where love
Shows but one shaft, one dove,

One heart, one hand—

A shore like that, my dear,

Lies where no man will steer,

No maiden land.

SWINBURNE, Love at Sea. Imitated from Théophile Gautier.

14 If love were what the rose is,
And I were like the leaf,

Our lives would grow together

In sad or singing weather.

SWINBURNE, A Match.

15 Were you the earth, dear love, and I the skies,
My love would shine on you like to the sun

And look upon you with ten thousand eyes

Till heaven waxed blind and till the world were done.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, Love's Omnipotence.

16 There has fallen a splendid tear
From the passion-flower at the gate.

She is coming, my dove, my dear;

She is coming, my life, my fate;

The red rose cries, "She is near, she is near;"

And the white rose weeps, "She is late;"

The larkspur listens, "I hear, I hear;"

And the lily whispers, "I wait."

TENNYSOON, Maud, Pt. I, sec. 22, st. 10.

17 She is coming, my own, my sweet;

Were it ever so airy a tread,

My heart would hear her and beat,

Were it earth in an earthy bed;

My dust would hear her and beat,

Had I lain for a century dead;

Would start and tremble under her feet,

And blossom in purple and red.

TENNYSOON, Maud, Pt. I, sec. 22, st. 11.

18 I confess that I love this woman; if that is a sin, I confess that also. (Ego me amare hanc fateor; si id peccare est, fateor id quoque.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 896.

19 How could I, blest with thee, long nights employ,

And how with thee the longest day enjoy!

(Quam vellem tecum longas requiescere Et tecum longos pervigilare dies!)

noctes

TRIBULLUS, Elegies, bk. iii, eleg. 6, l. 53.

20 The seamen on the wave, love,

When storm and tempest rave, love,

Look to one star to save, love,

Thou art that star to me!

JOHN TYLER, To Julia Gardiner Tyler. Written

1 Jan., 1835, at the age of 65.

1 Will you love me in December as you do in May,
Will you love me in the good old fashioned way?

When my hair has all turned gray,
Will you kiss me then and say,
That you love me in December as you do in May?

JAMES J. WALKER, Will You Love Me in December as You Do in May? Set to music by Ernest R. Ball in 1905.

2 A narrow compass, and yet there
Dwelt all that's good, and all that's fair:
Give me but what this riband bound,
Take all the rest the sun goes round.

EDMUND WALLER, On a Girdle.

3 No lance have I, in joust or fight,
To splinter in my lady's sight;
But, at her feet, how blest were I
For any need of hers to die!

WHITTIER, The Henchman.

The love that no return doth crave
To knightly levies lifts the slave.
WHITTIER, The Henchman.

4 Serene will be our days and bright,
And happy will our nature be,
When love is an unerring light,
And joy its own security.

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty. St. 3.

She who dwells with me, whom I have loved
With such communion, that no place on earth
Can ever be a solitude to me.

WORDSWORTH, There Is an Eminence.

5 O dearer far than light and life are dear.
WORDSWORTH, To —. (To Mrs. W.)

Ah, dearer than my soul . . .
Dearer than light, or life, or fame.

JOHN OLDHAM, Lament for Saul and Jonathan.

Art thou not dearer to my eyes than light?
Dost thou not circulate through all my veins?
Mingle with life, and form my very soul?

EDWARD YOUNG, Basilius. Act v, sc. 1.

6 Tho' near the gates of Paradise,
Gladly I'd turn away,

Just to hear you say, "I love you!"
Sometime, somewhere, some day.

REDA JOHNSON YOUNG, Sometime. (1919)

7 I seek for one as fair and gay,
But find none to rekindle me,
How blest the hours pass'd away
With the girl I left behind me.

UNKNOWN, The Girl I Left Behind Me. (1759)
(Charm of Melody, Dublin, 1810.)

8 Greensleeves was all my joy,
Greensleeves was my delight,
Greensleeves was my heart of gold,

And who but Lady Greensleeves?

UNKNOWN, A New Courtyl Sonnet of the Lady Greensleeves. (A Handful of Pleasant Ditties, 1584.) The tune of Greensleeves is referred to by Shakespeare, Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, i, and v, 5.

9 And when with envy time transported,
Shall think to rob us of our joys,
You'll in your girls again be courted,
And I'll go wooing in my boys.

UNKNOWN, Winfreda. First printed in a volume of Miscellaneous Poems by Several Hands, 1726, where it was said to be a translation "from the ancient British language." Included in Percy's Reliques. Sometimes attributed to John Gilbert Cooper, who, however, was only three years old in 1726.

XXXI—Love and Fear

10 Love is a thing aye full of busy dread.
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 1645.
(c. 1374)

This proverb that I the lere . . .
Love goeth never without fear.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Castle of Labour. Sig. D 2. (1506)

11 There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear.

New Testament: I John, iv, 18.

Love cannot be mixed with fear. (Non potest amor cum timore misceri.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xlvii, 19.

12 For there is only sorrow in my heart;
There is no room for fear.

But how I wish I were afraid again,
My dear, my dear!

ALINE KILMER, I Shall Not Be Afraid.

13 Love is a thing full of anxious fears. (Res est solliciti plena timoris amor.)

OVIN, Heroides. Epis. i, l. 12.

14 I do not wish to be feared; I prefer to be loved. (Nolo ego metui: amari mavolo.)

PLAUTUS, Ausaria, l. 835.

15 To fear love is to fear life, and those who fear life are already three parts dead.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Marriage and Morals, p. 287.

Of all forms of caution, caution in love is perhaps most fatal to true happiness.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Conquest of Happiness, p. 186.

16 Where love is great, the littlest doubts are few;

When little fears grow great, great love grows there.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 181.

XXXII—Love and Hate

1 For those who love, the world is wide,
But not for those who hate.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Rencontre.

2 For 'tis impossible hate to return with love.
(Che amar chi t'odia, ell'è impossibil cosa.)

ALFIERI, Polissena. Act ii, sc. 4.

3 I love you:

I'll cut your throat for your own sake.

BRAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act iv, sc. 1.

4 When I love most, Love is disguised
In Hate; and when Hate is surprised
In Love, then I hate most.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. ii, l. 227.

Once, when I loved, I would enlase
Breast, eyelids, hands, feet, form and face
Of her I loved in one embrace—

As if by mere love I could love immensely!

Once, when I hated, I would plunge

My sword and wipe with the first lunge

My foe's whole life out like a sponge—

As if by mere hate I could hate intensely!

But now I am wiser, know better the fashion

How passion seeks aid from its opposite passion.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. ii, l. 207.

Our hatreds are beautiful when they mark the loftiness of our loves.

ABEL BONNARD, The Art of Friendship. Pt. ii, Reflections.

5 The self-same thing they will abhor
One way, and long another for.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 219.

6 Now hatred is by far the longest pleasure;
Men love in haste, but they detest at leisure.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 6.

7 I hate and I love. Perhaps you ask why I do so. I do not know, but I feel it, and I am in torment. (Odi et amo. Quare id faciam, fortasse requiris. Nescio, sed fieri sentio et excrucior.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxxxv.

One loves without reason, and without reason one hates. (On aime sans raison, et sans raison l'on hait.)

REQUARD, Les Folles Amoureuses.

8 Love as though some day you would have to hate; hate as though some day you would have to love.

CHILON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon.)

9 Few (especially young) people know how to love, or how to hate; their love is an unbounded weakness, fatal to the person they love; their hate is a hot, rash, and imprudent violence, always fatal to themselves.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 29 Sept., 1752.

10 Dissembled hate or varnished love.

DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis. St. 4.

11 The doctrine of hatred must be preached,
as the counteraction of the doctrine of love,
when that pulses and whines.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

12 I hate all that don't love me, and slight all that do.

FARQUHAR, The Constant Couple. Act i, sc. 1.

13 If you hate a man, eat his bread; if you love him, do the same.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2756.

14 Violent antipathies are always suspicious, and betray a secret affinity.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. Vol. i, p. 377.

15 He loos me for liddle that hates me for nought.

H. G. BORN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 379.

16 We've practiced loving long enough,
Let's come at last to hate.

(Wir haben lang genug geliebt, Und wollen endlich hassen.)

GEORG HERWEGH, Lied vom Hass.

17 Who love too much, hate in the like extreme.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 79. (Pope, tr.)

18 If one judges love by its effects, it resembles hate more than affection. (Si on juge de l'amour par la plupart de ses effets, il res-semble plus à la haine qu'à l'amitié.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 72.

The more one loves a mistress, the more one is ready to hate her. (Plus on aime une maîtresse, et plus on est prêt de la haïr.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 111.

19 There's nothing in this world so sweet as love,
And next to love the sweetest thing is hate.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act ii, sc. 5.

20 Nothing is more hateful than love.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 325.

The noblest hateful love that e'er I heard of.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iv, 1, 33.

21 Where I love, I profess it; where I hate,
In every circumstance I dare proclaim it.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act i, sc. 1.

22 To love you was pleasant enough,

And, oh! 'tis delicious to hate you!

THOMAS MOORE, To —.

Any kiddie in school can love like a fool,

But hating, my boy, is an art.

OSDEN NASH, Plea for Less Malice Toward None.

23 Thy sweet obligingness could supple hate,

And out of it, its contrary create

JOHN OLSHAM, To Charles Mortimer. St. 17.

I will hate, if I can: if not, I will unwillingly love. (Odero, si potero: si non, invitus amabo.)

OWID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 35.

What will you do in your hatred, when you are so cruel in your love? (Quid facies odio sic ubi amore nocet?)

OWID, Herodes. Epil. xxi, l. 56.

Years of love have been forgot
In the hatred of a minute.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, To —.

A woman either loves or hates; there is no third course (Aut amat aut odit mulier; nihil est tertium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 6.

Hatreds are the cinders of affection.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Letter to Sir Robert Cecil, 10 May, 1593.

Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell!
Yield up, O love, thy crown and hearted throne

To tyrannous hate! Swell, bosom, with thy fraught,

For 'tis of aspics' tongues.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 447.

Sweet love, I see, changing his property,
Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 135.

Here's much to do with hate, but more with love.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 1, 181.

My only love sprung from my only hate!
Too early seen unknown, and known too late!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 5, 140.

It is a greater grief

To bear love's wrong than hate's known injury.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets No. xi.

What medicine then can such disease remove
Where love draws hate, and hate engendereth love?

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia Bk. iii.

Let me arise and open the gate,
To breathe the wild warm air of the heath,
And to let in Love, and to let out Hate,
And anger at living, and scorn of Fate,
To let in Life, and to let out Death.

MARY M. SINGLETON, A Reverie.

Who cannot hate, can love not.

SWINBURNE, In the Bay. St. 31.

Down'd with the hate of hate, the scorn of scorn,

The love of love.

THOMSON, The Poet.

In a wink the false love turns to hate.

TENNYSON, Morlin and Vroden, l. 850.

Here love returns with love to the lover,
And beauty unto the heart thereof,
And hatred unto the heart of the hater.

JOHN HALL WHEKLOCK, The Triumph of Love.

She may strike the pouncing eagle, but she dares not harm the dove;
And every gate she bars to Hate shall open wide to Love!

J. G. WHITTIER, Broton of Osawatimic.

Love lights more fire than hate extinguishes,
And men grow better as the world grows old.
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Optimism.

I've played the traitor Over and over;
I'm a good hater But a bad lover.

ELINOR WYLLIE, Peregrine

XXXIII—Love and Loss

Say what you will, 'tis better to be left than never to have been loved

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act ii, sc. 1

Better be cheated to the last
Than lose the blessed hope of truth.

FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE, Faith.

Better to love amiss than nothing to have loved

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales: The Struggles of Conscience, l. 46.

Far worse it is
To lose than never to have tasted bliss.
(Che mai

Non v'avere ò provato, ò possedute)
GUARINI, Pastor Fido

Methinks it is better that I should have pined away seven of my goldenest years, when I was thrall to the fair hair, and fairer eyes, of Alice W——n, than that so passionate a love adventure should be lost

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: New Year's Eve

He who for love hath undergone
The worst that can befall,

Is happier thousandfold than one
Who never loved at all

RICHARD MONCKTON MILLER, To Myrsha: On Returning.

I hold it true, whate'er befall;
I feel it, when I sorrow most;

'Tis better to have loved and lost
Than never to have loved at all.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xxvii, st. 4.

'Tis better to have loved and lost than never to have lost at all.

SAMUEL JOHNSON THE YOUNGER, The Way of

All Flesh. Ch. 77. Usually misprinted "loved at all."

1 It is best to love wisely, no doubt; but to love foolishly is better than not to be able to love at all.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 6.

To love and win is the best thing; to love and lose the next best.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 6.

2 I fear to love thee, Sweet, because Love's the ambassador of loss.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, To Olivia.

XXXIV—Love and Death

3 Scarcely a tear to shed;

Hardly a word to say;

The end of a summer day;

Sweet Love dead.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, An Evening.

4 Oh, listen! Love lasts! Love will never die. I am only your Angel, who was your Bride; And I know, that though dead, I have never died

✓ EDWIN ARNOLD, She and He.

Though I am dead my soul shall love thee still.

JAMES HAMMOND, Elegies. No. xiii.

5 And a voice said in mastery, while I strove,—
"Guess now who holds thee?"—"Death," I said. But, there,
The silver answer rang,—
"Not Death, but Love."

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese. No. 1.

6 Can we love but on condition that the thing we love must die?

ROBERT BROWNING, La Saisiaz.

7 Cold in the dust this perished heart may lie,
But that which warmed it once shall never die!

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 429.

8 So blind is life, so long at last is sleep,
And none but Love to bid us laugh or weep.

✓ WILLA CATHER, Evening Song.

9 A death for love's no death, but martyrdom.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Revenge for Honour. Act iv, sc. 2.

10 My love is dead, Gone to his death-bed,
All under the willow-tree!

CHATEAUBEAU, Atala: The Minstrel's Song.

11 Love, like death, a universal leveller of mankind.

CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act ii, sc. 3.

Love either finds equality or makes it;
Like death, he knows no difference in degree.

But planes and levels all.

DRYDEN, Marriage à la Mode. Act iii, sc. 1.

12 Given thee back
To earth, to light and life, to love and me.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act ii, sc. 2.

13 Life bears Love's cross, death brings Love's crown.

DINAH MARIA MULLOCK CRAIK, Letitia.

14 As I lay my heart on your dead heart, Douglas,

Douglas, Douglas, tender and true!

DINAH MARIA MULLOCK CRAIK, Too Late.

O Douglas, O Douglas, Tender and trewe.

SIR RICHARD HOLLAND, Buke of the Howlat. St. 31. (c. 1450) (PINKERTON, Collection of Scottish Poems. Vol. iii, p. 146)

15 Love is anterior to life,
Posterior to death.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. iii, No. 37.

16 He who dares love, and for that love must die,

And, knowing this, dares yet love on, am I.

DRYDEN, II Conquest of Granada. Act iv, sc. 3.

He that dares drink, and for that drink dares die,

And, knowing this, dares yet drink on, am I.

GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, Rehearsal. Act iv, sc. 1. Drawansir, the burlesque tyrant in Buckingham's play, was a burlesque of Dryden's Almanzor in the Conquest of Granada.

17 I know not if it rains, my love,

In the land where you do lie;

And oh, so sound you sleep, my love,

You know no more than I.

A. E. HOUSMAN, The Half-Moon Westers Low.

18 I had rather live and love where death is king,
Than have eternal life where love is not.

* R. G. INGERSOLL, Oration at a Child's Grave.

19 But great loves, to the last, have pulses red;
All great loves that have ever died dropped dead.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Dropped Dead.

20 The grey-haired saint may fail at last,
The surest guide a wanderer prove;

Death only binds us fast

To the bright shore of love.

JOHN KEELE, The Christian Year: 8th Sunday after Trinity.

21 If Love were jester at the court of Death,
And Death the king of all, still would I pray,

"For me the motley and the bauble, yea,
Though all be vanity, as the Preacher saith,

The mirth of love be mine for one brief breath!"

FREDERICK LAWRENCE KNOWLES, If Love Were Jester at the Court of Death.

No rest but the grave for the Pilgrim of Love

AMELIA OPIE, The Pilgrim of Love, l. 6.

They that love beyond the world cannot be separated by it. Death cannot kill what never dies.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

O Death, all-cloquent! you only prove
What dust we dote on, when 'tis man we love.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 335.

Love is Life, and Death at last
Crowns it eternal and divine.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Life in Death.

Methought I saw the grave where Laura lay.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Verses to Edmund Spenser.

If there be any one can take my place
And make you happy whom I grieve to grieve,

Think not that I can grudge it, but believe
I do command you to that nobler grace,
That reader wit than mine, that sweeter face.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Monna Innominata, Sonnet xii.

Tell me if the lovers are losers . . . tell me if any get more than the lovers . . . in the dust . . . in the cool tombs.

CARL SANDBURG, Cool Tombs.

Men have died from time to time and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 107.

What mad lover ever dy'd,
To gain a soft and gentle bride?
Or for a lady tender-hearted,
In purling streams or hemp departed?

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto i, l. 23.

I thought when love for you died, I should die.
It's dead. Alas, most strangely, I live on

RUPERT BROOKE, The Life Beyond.

For, heaven be thank'd, we live in such an age,
When no man dies for love, but on the stage.

DRYDEN, Epilogue: Mithridates.

Eyes, look your last!
Arms, take your last embrace! and lips, O
you
The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss.

A dateless bargain to engrossing death
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 3, l. 113.

Come away, come away, death,
And in sad cypress let me be laid;
Fly away, fly away, breath:
I am slain by a fair cruel maid.
My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,
O, prepare it!
My part of death, no one so true
Did share it.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 52.

Love is strong as death.

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, viii, 6.

Love is greater than illusion, and as strong as death.

ALBERTO CASSELLA, Death Takes a Holiday. Act iii.

Love, strong as death, the poet led.

POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day. St. 4.

She is more strong than death,
Being strong as love.

SWINBURNE, Madonna Mia.

Love can vanquish Death

TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women, l. 269.

I loved you, and my love had no return,
And therefore my true love has been my death.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1268.

O that 'twere possible
After long grief and pain
To find the arms of my true love
Round me once again! . . .
Ah, Christ, that it were possible
For one short hour to see
The souls we loved, that they might tell us
What and where they be!

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. ii, sec. 4, l. 1.

I believe if I should die,
And you should kiss my eyelids where I lie
Cold, dead, and dumb to all the world contains,

The folded orbs would open at thy breath,
And from its exile in the Isles of Death
Life would come gladly back along my veins.

MARY ASHLEY TOWNSEND, Love's Belief.

My love lies in the gates of foam,
The last dear wreck of shore;
The naked sea-marsh binds her home,
The sand her chamber-door.

JOHN BYRN LEICESTER WARREN (LORD DE TABLEY), The Churchyard on the Sands.

Love still is Nature's truth, and Death her lie.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, The Coming of Love: The Spirit of the Sunrise.

1 Where indeed the greatest and most honorable love exists, it is much better to be joined by death than separated by life. (Ubi idem et maximus et honestissimus amor est, aliquanto præstat morte jungi, quam vita distrahi.)

VALERIUS MAXIMUS, De Factis Dictisque. Bk. iv, ch. 6, sec. 3.

2 Life is ever lord of Death
And Love can never lose its own.

J. G. WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 211.

And yet, dear heart, remembering thee,
Am I not richer than of old?
Safe in thy immortality,
What change can reach the wealth I hold?
What chance can mar the pearl and gold
Thy love hath left in trust with me?

J. G. WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 422.

XXXV—Love: Its Fruition

4 Let us live, my Lesbia, and love, and value at a penny all the talk of crabbed old men.
(Vivamus, mea Lesbia, atque amemus, Rumoresque senum severiorum Omnes unius æstimemus assis.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode v, l. 1.

Live we, Lesbia, and love!
What though the greybeards disapprove!
Let them wag their toothless jaws!
Who cares a copper for their saws?
RICHARD HOVEY, To Lesbia.

When love is satisfied, all its charm is gone.
(À l'amour satisfait, tout son charme est ôté.)

CORNWELL, Don Juan. Act i, sc. 2.

As soon as women belong to us, we no longer belong to them. (Soudain qu'elles sont à nous, nous ne sommes plus à elles.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

Women enjoy'd (what'er before they've been)
Are like romances read, or sights once seen.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Against Fraudition.

Plays and romances read and seen, do fall
In our opinions; yet not seen at all,
Whom would they please? To an heroic tale
Would you not listen, lest it should grow stale?

EDMUND WALLER, In Answer of Sir John Suckling's Verses.

6 Perfect love implies Love in all capacities.
ABRAHAM COWLEY, Platonic Love.

7 Love's mysteries in souls do grow,

But yet the body is his book.

JOHN DOWNE, The Bostasy.

8 But she ne'er loved who durst not venture all.

DRYDEN, Aureng-Zebe. Act v, sc. 1.

9 Give all to love;
Obey thy heart;
Friends, kindred, days,
Estate, good-fame,
Plans, credit, and the Muse,—
Nothing refuse.

R. W. EMERSON, Give All to Love.

Love, while you are able to love. (O lieb, so lang du lieben kannst.)

FREILIGRATH, Der Liebe Dauer.

10 O'er her warm cheek and rising bosom move
The bloom of young Desire, and purple light of Love.

THOMAS GRAY, The Progress of Poetry. Pt. i, sec. 3. (Ἀντίποι δ' ἐπὶ προσφύεσσι Παρὰ γὰρ φῶς ἔρωτος.—PERYNICHIUS, Apud Athenaeum.)

How beautiful she look'd! her conscious heart
Glow'd in her cheek, and yet she felt no wrong:
Oh love! how perfect is thy mystic art,
Strengthening the weak and trampling on the strong.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 106.

The light of love, the purity of grace,
The mind, the Music breathing from her face,
The heart whose softness harmonized the whole:
And, oh! that eye was in itself a Soul!

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, l. 178.

11 There is no sorrow like a love denied
Nor any joy like love that has its will.

RICHARD HOVEY, The Marriage of Guenevere.
Act i, sc. 3.

12 When thou hast heard his name upon
The bugles of the cherubim,
Begin thou softly to unzone
Thy girlish bosom unto him,

And softly to undo the snood
That is the sign of maidenhood.

JAMES JOYCE, Bid Adieu to Girlish Days.

Did the harebell loose her girdle
To the lover bee,
Would the bee the harebell hallow
Much as formerly?

Did the paradise, persuaded,
Yield her moat of pearl,
Would the Eden be an Eden,
Or the earl an earl?

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. iii, No. 78.

13 The reproduction of mankind is a great marvel and mystery. Had God consulted me in the matter, I should have advised him to continue the generation of the species by fashioning them of clay.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 752.

Perchance she thought my love was passionless,

Wanted what I withheld, yet longed to give.
PHILIP BOURKE MARSTON, Estranged.

Yielded with coy submission, modest pride,
And sweet, reluctant, amorous delay.

Whoso would not lose all his spirit, let him
love! (Qui nolet fieri desidiosus, amet!)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, ep. 9, l. 46.

Let Wealth, let Honour, wait the wedded dame,
August her deed, and sacred be her fame;
Before true passion all those views remove;
Fame, Wealth, and Honour! what are you to Love?

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 77.

O happy state! when souls each other draw,
When Love is liberty, and Nature law.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 91.

One thought of thee puts all the pomp to flight,
Priests, tapers, temples, swim before my sight.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 273.

He plough'd her, and she crop'd.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 2, 233.

The world must be peopled.

ii, sc. 3, l. 251.

Love stops at nothing but possession.
THOMAS SOUTHERN, Oronoko. Act ii, sc. 2.

XXXVI—Love: Not Wisely But Too Well

See also Chastity; Woman: Her Virtue

Love shut our eyes, and all seemed right.
True, the world's eyes are open now:
—Less need for me to disallow
Some few that keep Love's zone unbuckled,
Peevish as ever to be suckled,
Lulled by the same old baby-rattle,
With intermixture of the rattle.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve Sec. xi.
So down the flowery path of love we went.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Sigurd of Sazony.

Now what could artless Jeanie do?

She had nae will to say him na:

At length she blushed a sweet consent,
And love was aye between them twa.

Her all on earth, and more than all in Heaven.
BYRON, The Corsair. Canto iii, st. 17.

And they were happy, for to their young eyes
Each was an angel, and earth paradise.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 204.

Great is their love who love in sin and fear.
BYRON, Heaven and Earth. Pt. i, l. 67.

Inexperienced tears, Fallor that lovers ever prize,
Boldness trembling at his first throbs, happy

Fears

CLAUDIAN, De Nuptiis Honorii Augusti, l. 80.

Now, no doubt, my friend and I
Will proceed to lie and lie

To ourselves, till we begin

To act the truth and call it sin.

But I wish that life were made

So that lovers, unafraid

Of heaven, hell, and gossip, could

Go their way and call it good.

GRACE STONE COATES, As It Is.

She that gives all to the false one pursuing her
Makes but a penitent and loses a lover.

GOLDSMITH, Song. Intended for *She Stoops to

A little, sorrowful, deserted thing,
Begot of love, and yet no love begetting
Hood, Plea of the Midsummer Fairies, l. 712.

A fair and sinless child of sin

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 70.

I loved him too as woman loves—
Reckless of sorrow, sin, or scorn
LETITIA ELIZABETH LANDON, The Indian Bride.

But once when love's betrayed,

Its sweet life blooms no more!

THOMAS MOORE, Anacreon: Friend of My Soul.

I have loved not wisely. (Non sapienter amavi.)

OVID, Heroides. Ep. ii, l. 27.

Then must you speak

Of one that loved not wisely but too well.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 343.

And I, what is my crime I cannot tell,

Unless it be a crime I have lov'd too well.

RICHARD CRANFORD, Alcibiades. Eleg. iii, l. 19.

Sorey her lot who loves too well,
Heavy the heart that hopes but vainly.
W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act 1.
Is it, in Heav'n, a crime to love too well?
POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, l. 6.

To deceive a trusting maid is glory but cheaply won. (Fallere credentem non est opere rosa puellam.)

OVIN, Heroides. Epist. ii, l. 63.

For love deceives the best of womankind.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 463 (Pope, tr.)

For when success a lover's toil attends,
Few ask if fraud or force attain'd his ends.
POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto ii, l. 33

But the thing that fills me with wonder, the thing
that's most strange to me,
Is, why do the moths and the butterflies always fall for the son of a bee?

GEORGE L. NORTH, A Tale of Two Bugs.

Love, to her ear, was but a name
Combined with vanity and shame.
SCOTT, Marmion. Canto ii, st. 3.

The moonlight filled them both with sundry glamors,
Filtered silver in between white birches,
Blood whispered, like the stream, with urgent clamors,
And bells were struck that never rang in churches
A B. STEVENSON, Et Sa Pauvre Chair.

The World whips frank, gay love with rods,
But frankly, gayly shall we get the gods.
ANNA WICKHAM, Meditation at Kew.

XXXVII—Love and Lust

See also Wantonness, Whore

Money gets women, cards and dice
Get money, and ill-luck gets just
That copper couch and one clear nice
Cool squirt of water o'er your bust,
The right thing to extinguish lust!

ROBERT BROWNING, Apparent Faith.

A dear-lov'd lad, convenience snug,
A treach'rous inclination—
But, let me whisper i' your lug,
Ye're aiblins nae temptation.
BURNS, Address to the Unco Guid. St. 6.

The caird prevail'd—th' unblushing fair
In his embraces sunk,
Partly w' love o'ercome sae sair,
An' partly she was drunk.
BURNS, The Jolly Beggar: Recitative.

Love indeed (I may not deny) first united provinces, built cities, and by a perpetual generation makes and preserves mankind;

but if it rage it is no more love, but burning lust, a disease, frenzy, madness, hell. . . .
It subverts kingdoms, overthrows cities, towns, families; mares, corrupts, and makes a massacre of men; thunder and lightning, wars, fires, plagues, have not done that mischief to mankind, as this burning lust, this brutish passion.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
iii, sec. 2, mem 1, subs. 2

For glances beget ogles, ogles sighs,
Sighs wishes, wishes words, and words a letter, . . .
And then, God knows what mischief may arise,
When love links two young people in one
letter,
Vile assignments, and adulterous beds,
Elopements, broken vows and hearts and heads.

BYRON, Beppo St. 16.

For gentlemen must sometimes risk their skin
For that sad tempter, a forbidden woman:
Sultans too much abhor this sort of sin,
And don't agree at all with the wise Roman,
Heroic, stoic Cato, the sententious,
Who lent his lady to his friend Hortensius.

BYRON, Don Juan Canto vi, st. 7

The stoic husband was the glorious thing.
The man had courage, was a sage, 'tis true,
And lov'd his country.

POPE, Jane Shore: Epilogue, l. 38.

For men have ever a likelier appetite
On lower thing to perform their delight
Than on their wives, be they never so fair,
Nor never so true, nor so debonaire.
Flesh is so newfangel, with mischance,
That we can in no thing have plesance
That tendeth unto virtue any while.

CHAUCER, The Manciples Tale, l. 85.

He was, I trow, a twenty winter old,
And I was forty, if I shall say sooth;
But yet I had alway a coltes tooth.
Gat-toothed I was, and that became me well.

CHAUCER, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 600.

Your colt's-tooth is not cast yet.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 3, l. 48.

Her merry dancing-days are done;
She has a colt's tooth still, I warrant.
WILLIAM KING, Orpheus and Eurydice.

"Why do
You thus devise Evil against her?" "For that
She is beautiful, delicate Therefore."

ABELLADE CROCKET, Salamina and the Elders.

"It is as safe to play with fire, as it is to dally with gallantry. Love is a passion that hath friends in the garrison.

LOVE HALIFAX, Works, p. 31.

If anyone complains of not succeeding in affairs of gallantry, we will venture to say, it is because he is not gallant. He has mistaken his talent.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Round Table, Vol. i, p. 116.

To set your neighbor's bed a-shaking is now an ancient and long-established custom. It was the silver age that saw the first adulterers.

JUVENAL, Satires, Sat. vi, l. 21.

I've taken my fun where I've found it;
I've rogued an' I've ranged in my time;

I've 'ad my pickin' o' sweethearts,
An' four o' the lot was prime.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Ladies.

There's times when you'll think that you mightn't,
There's times when you'll know that you might;
But the things you will learn from the Yellow
an' Brown,

They'll 'elp you a lot with the White!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Ladies.

The new lust gives the lecher the new thrill.

JOHN MARSHFIELD, Widows in the Bye Street.

The actors are, it seems, the usual three:
Husband, and wife, and lover.

GEORGE MURKIN, Modern Love, St. 25.

Now, when I see an extra light,
Flaming, flickering on the night
From my neighbor's casement opposite,
I know as well as I know to pray,
I know as well as a tongue can say,
That the innocent Sultan Shah-Zaman
Has gone to the city Ispahan.

T. B. ALDRICH, When the Sultan Goes to Ispahan.

When Lust

By unchaste looks, loose gestures, and foul talk,

But most by lewd and lavish act of sin,
Lets in defilement to the inward parts,
The soul grows clotted by contagion,
Imbodies and imbrutes.

JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 463.

Blonishes are hid by night and every fault forgiven; darkness makes any woman fair.
(Nocte latent mende, vitioque ignescit omni, Horaque formosam quamlibet illa facit.)

DICTIONARY OF NEWCASTLE, Sociable Companions,
A. 4; CHARLES SHAWWAT, Irish Hospitality,
l. 1.

Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue and groan:
Some men must love my lady and some Joan.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 206.

Were it not for imagination, Sir, a man would be as happy in the arms of a chambermaid as of a Duchess.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, iii, 341.)

Mr. Pickle himself . . . was a mere dragon among the chambermaids.

SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle, Ch. 82.

Neither let the love of a servant-maid be regarded as a disgrace. (Ne sit ancille amor pu-dori.)

THACKERAY, Fits-Boodle's Confessions. Quoted as from "a notorious poet": i.e., Ovid, Ars
Amatoria, ii, 251.

As stolen love is pleasant to a man, so is it also to a woman; the man dissembles badly:
she conceals desire more cleverly. (Utque viro furtiva venus, sic grata puellæ: Vir male dissimulat: tectius illa cupit.)

OWEN, Ars Amatoria, Bk. i, l. 274.

Let every lover be pale; that is the color which suits him. (Palliat omnis amans: his est color aptus amanti.)

OWEN, Ars Amatoria, Bk. i, l. 729.

Skill makes love unending. (Arte perennat amor.)

OWEN, Ars Amatoria, Bk. iii, l. 42.

The pleasure of the act of love is gross and brief, and brings loathing after it. (Fœda est in coitu et brevis voluptas et tædæ Veneris statim peractæ.)

PETRONIUS, Fragmenta, No. 101.

There is no greater nor keener pleasure than that of bodily love—and none which is more irrational.

Love finds an altar for forbidden fires.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 182.

Lust, thro' some certain strainers well refin'd,
Is gentle love, and charms all womankind.

POPE, Essay on Man, Epist. ii, l. 189.

There goes a saying, and 'twas shrewdly said,
Old fish at table, but young flesh in bed.
My soul abhors the tasteless dry embrace
Of a stale virgin with a winter face.

POPE, January and May, l. 101.

Give me a willing nymph! 'tis all I care,
Extremely clean, and tolerably fair,

Her shape her own, whatever shape she have,
And just that white and red which nature gave.

10 Bad luck often brings good luck.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 834.

11 What evil luck soever
For me remains in store,
'Tis sure much finer fellows
Have fared much worse before.
A. E. HOUSMAN, Last Poems, p. 14.
Little is the luck I've had,
And oh, 'tis comfort small
To think that many another lad
Has had no luck at all.
A. E. HOUSMAN, Last Poems, p. 54.

12 Some people are so fond of ill-luck that they run half-way to meet it.
DOUGLAS JERROLD, *Jerrold's Wit: Meeting
Trouble Half-Way*. See also under TROUBLE.

13 Bad Luck, she is never a lady
But the commonest wench on the street,
Shuffling, shabby and shady,
Shameless to pass or meet.
Walk with her once—it's a weakness!
Talk to her twice—it's a crime!
Thrust her away when she gives you "good day"
And the besom won't board you next time.
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Wishing-Caps

III—Luck: Mascots

14 These messengers from Paradise are Mascots, my friends; happy the man to whom Heaven gives a Mascot.
(Ces envoyés du paradis,
Sont des Mascottes, mes amis,
Heureux celui que le ciel dote
D'un Mascotte.)

DURU AND CHIVOT, La Mascotte. Act i. Music
by Edmond Audran.

15 See a pin and pick it up,
All the day you'll have good luck;
See a pin and let it lay,
Bad luck you'll have all the day!
HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes, p. 120.

16 Dish yer rabbit foot'll gim you good luck
De man w'at tote it mighty ap'er ter come out right en' up wen deyn any racket gwine on in de neighborhood, let 'er be whar she will en w'en she may; no' espeshually de man w'at got it know 'zactly w'at he got ter
do.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Brother Rabbit and His Famous Foot.

17 Now for good luck, cast an old shoe after me.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)
And wheresoe'er thou movest, good luck
Shall follow her old shoe after.

TRIMMER, With Waterproof's Lyrical Monologue, St. 27.

1 A farmer travelling with his load
Picked up a horseshoe on the road,
And nailed it fast to his barn door,
That luck might down upon him pour.

JAMES T. FIELDS, The Lucky Horseshoe.

Happy art thou, as if every day thou hadst picked up a horseshoe.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, st. 2.

2 One leaf is for hope, and one is for faith,
And one is for love, you know,
And God put another in for luck.

ELLA HIGGINSON, Four-Leaf Clover.

3 The god delights in odd numbers. (Numero deus impare gaudet.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. No. viii, l. 75.

Why is it that we entertain the belief that for every purpose odd numbers are the most effectual?

PLINY, Historia Naturalis Bk. xiv, sec. 23.

This is the third time; I hope good luck lies in odd numbers. . . . There is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Act v, sc. 1, l. 2.

"Now, Rory, leave off, sir; you'll hug me no
more;
That's eight times to-day that you've kissed me
before."

"Then here goes another," says he, "to make sure,

For there's luck in odd numbers," says Rory O'More.

SAMUEL LOVER, Rory O'More or Good Omens.

Number three is always fortunate.

SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Quoted as a proverb.

4 My right eye itches, some good luck is near.

LUTHER, MARTIN

5 I can do no other. (Ich kann nicht anders.)

MARTIN LUTHER, Speech. Diet of Worms, 18
April, 1521. Concluding sentence. Inscribed on his monument at Worms.

God helping her, she [America] can do no other.
WOODROW WILSON, War Speech, to Congress,
2 Apr., 1917. Concluding sentence.

6 I will go, though as many devils aim at me as there are tiles on the roofs of the houses.

MARTIN LUTHER. (RANKER, History of the Reformation. Vol. i, p. 533.)

On the 16th of April, 1521, Luther entered the imperial city [of Worms]. . . . On his approach,
. . . the Elector's chancellor entreated him . . .
not to enter a town where his death was decided.

The answer which Luther returned was simply this: "Tell your master that if there were as many devils at Worms as tiles on its roofs, I would enter."

BUNSEN, Life of Luther.

7 Grand rough old Martin Luther Bloomed fables—flowers on furze,
The better the uncouthier:

Do roses stick like burrs?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Tinkers.

8 Luther was guilty of two great crimes,—he struck the Pope in his crown, and the monks in their belly.

ERASMUS, Colloquies.

9 What! shall one monk, scarce known beyond his cell,
Front Rome's far-reaching bolts, and scorn
her frown?

Brave Luther answered Yes; that thunder's swell

Rocked Europe, and discharmed the triple crown.

J. R. LOWELL, To W. L. Garrison. St. 5.

10 The solitary monk who shook the world,
From pagan slumber, when the gospel trump Thunder'd its challenge from his dauntless lips

In peals of truth.

and God's Supply*.

11 His words are half battles.

RICHTER, of Martin Luther. (CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Priest.)

12 They [Luther and Calvin] condemned the Pope and desired to imitate him.

VOLTAIRE, To the Author of "Les Trois Im-posteurs".

Luther and Calvin, who, whatever they taught,
Led folk from superstition to free thought.

ROBERT BRIDGES, La Gloire de Voltaire.

LUXURY

13 And if, the following day, he chance to find
A new repast, or an unstated spring,
Blesses his stars, and thinks it luxury.

ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 4.

No wish profan'd my overwhelmed heart.

Blest hour! it was a luxury,—to be!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Reflections on Having Left a Place of Retirement, l. 41.

14 Superfluities do not hurt. (Superflua non nocent.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, De Civitate Dei. Quoted as a saying of "those skilled in the law."

A rich man's superfluities are often a poor man's redemption.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, *Who Wants a
Gaius? Act i, sc. 1*.

1 And ye shall walk in silk attire,
And siller hae to spare.

SUBANNA BLAMIRE, The Siller Crown. Quoted by Dickens, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 66.

Silks and satins, scarlets and velvets, put out the kitchen fire.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

2 Thus first necessity invented stools,
Convenience next suggested elbow-chairs,
And Luxury the accomplish'd Sofa last.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 86.

3 Too much plenty makes mouth dainty.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1749.

4 What will not Luxury taste? Earth, sea, and air,
Are daily ransacked for the bill of fare!

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. iii, l. 199.

5 O Luxury! thou curs'd by heaven's decree,
How ill-exchang'd are things like these for thee!

How do thy potions, with insidious joy,
Diffuse their pleasures only to destroy!

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 395.

6 We can do without any article of luxury we have never had; but when once obtained, it is not in human nature to surrender it voluntarily.

THOMAS CHANDLER HALIBURTON, The Clock-maker.

Them as ha' never had a cushion don't miss it.
GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 49.

7 Nature is free to all; and none were foes,
Till partial luxury began the strife.
JAMES HAMMOND, Elegies. No. 11.

8 Persian elegance, my lad, I hate. (Persicos odi, puer, apparatus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 38, l. 1.

Dear Lucy, you know what my wish is,—
I hate all your Frenchified fuss.

W. M. THACKERAY, Ad Ministrum.

The pomp of the Persian I hold in Aversion,
I loathe all those gingerbread tricks.

FRANKLIN P. ADAMS, Persicos Odi.

9 There is a limit to luxury.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, xx, 186.

You can only drink thirty or forty glasses of beer a day, no matter how rich you are.

COL. ADOLPHUS BURCH, Newspaper Interview.

10 Wherever luxury ceases to be innocent, it also ceases to be beneficial.

DAVID HUMER, Remarks: Of Refinement.

11 We read on the forehead of those who are surrounded by a foolish luxury, that Fortune sells what she is thought to give. (Il fit su front de ceux qu'un vain luxe environne, Que la fortune vend ce qu'on croit qu'elle donne.)

LA FONTAINE, Philemon et Baucis.

12 Luxury is like a wild beast, first made fiercer with tying and then let loose.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

13 Impatient of a scene whose luxuries stole, Spite of himself, too deep into his soul

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet.

14 Fell luxury! more perilous to youth Than storms or quicksands, poverty or chains.

HANNAH MORE, Belshazzar.

Luxury and dissipation, soft and gentle as their approaches are, and silently as they throw their silken chains about the heart, enslave it more than the most active and turbulent vices.

HANNAH MORE, Essays: Dissipation.

15 Give us the luxuries of life, and we will dispense with its necessities.

J. L. MOTLEY (HOLMES), The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6.)

The superfluous, a very necessary thing. (Le superflu, chose très nécessaire.)

VOLTAIRE, Le Mondain, l. 21.

16 Luxury is an enticing pleasure, a bastard mirth, which hath honey in her mouth, gall in her heart, and a sting in her tail

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems: Bk. i, Hugo.

17 We rich men count our felicity and happiness to lie in these superfluities, and not in those necessities.

SCOPAS OF THESALY. (PLUTARCH, Morals: Of the Love of Wealth PASCAL, Pensées, v, 1.)

18 It is the superfluous things for which men sweat. (Ad supervacua sudatur.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. iv, 11.

Superfluous things like these, doubtless the man who first called them "hindrances" had a prophetic foresight. (Quæ sine dubio talia divinavit futura, qualia nunc sunt, qui primus appellavit "impedimenta.")

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxvii, 11

19 The want of necessities is always . . . accompanied by the envious longing for superfluities.

SOLOM. (ORELLI, Opuscula Græcorum Velerum, i, 168.)

20 Falsely luxurious! will not man awake?

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 67.

21 Most of the luxuries, and many of the so-called comforts of life, are not only not indispensable, but positive hindrances to the elevation of mankind.

BENJAMIN DAVID THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

M

MACAULAY, THOMAS BABINGTON

1 As soon as I had time to look at my neighbour, . . . I settled that he was some obscure man of letters or of medicine, perhaps a cholera doctor. . . . Having thus settled my opinion, I went on eating my dinner, when Auckland, who was sitting opposite to me, addressed my neighbour, "Mr. Macaulay, will you drink a glass of wine?" I thought I should have dropped off my chair. It was MACAULAY, the man I had been so long most curious to see and to hear, whose genius, eloquence, astonishing knowledge, and diversified talents have excited my wonder and admiration, . . . and here I had been sitting next to him, hearing him talk, and setting him down for a dull fellow.

CHARLES C. F. GREVILLE, Memoirs. Pt. I, 6 Feb., 1832.

I never was more struck than upon this occasion by the inexhaustible variety and extent of his [Macaulay] information. . . . It is impossible to mention any book in any language with which he is not familiar; to touch upon any subject, whether relating to persons or things, on which he does not know everything that is to be known.

GREVILLE, Memoirs. Pt. II, 21 Jan., 1841.

2 Macaulay is like a book in breeches. . . . He has occasional flashes of silence, that make his conversation perfectly delightful.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. I, p. 363.)

To take Macaulay out of literature and society and put him in the House of Commons, is like taking the chief physician out of London during a pestilence.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. I, p. 265.)

3 I wish I was as sure of anything as Macaulay is of everything.

WILLIAM WINDHAM.

MACHINERY

4 It is the Age of Machinery, in every outward and inward sense of that word.

CARLYLE, Signs of the Times.

5 The mystery of mysteries is to view machines making machines.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby Bk. IV, ch. 2.

6 Things are in the saddle and ride mankind.

EMERSON, Ode.

7 The machine unmakes the man. Now that the machine is so perfect, the engineer is nobody.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

What I ha' seen since ocean steam began Leaves me na doot for the machine: but what about the man?

RUDYARD KIPLING, McAndrew's Hymn.

8 Armed with his machinery man can dive, can fly, can see atoms like a gnat; he can peer into Uranus with his telescope, or knock down cities with his fists of gunpowder.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Resources.

9 One machine can do the work of fifty ordinary men. No machine can do the work of one extraordinary man.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xviii, p. 26.

10 Don't throw a monkey-wrench into the machinery.

PHILANDER JOHNSON, (Everybody's Magazine, May, 1920, p. 36.)

11 It is never the machines that are dead. It is only the mechanically-minded men that are dead.

GERALD STANLEY LEE, Crowds. Pt. II, ch. 5.

Machinery is the sub-conscious mind of the world.

GERALD STANLEY LEE, Crowds. Pt. II, ch. 8.

12 It is questionable if all the mechanical inventions yet made have lightened the day's toil of any human being.

J. S. MILL, Principles of Political Economy.

Without doubt machinery has greatly increased the number of well-to-do idlers.

KARL MARX, Capital.

13 Machines are worshipped because they are beautiful, and valued because they confer power; they are hated because they are hideous, and loathed because they impose slavery.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Sceptical Essays, p. 83.

14 You're not a man, you're a machine.

BERNARD SHAW, Arms and the Man. Act III.

15 There will be little drudgery in this better ordered world. Natural power harnessed in machines will be the general drudge.

H. G. WELLS, Outline of History. Ch. XII, par. 4.

All their devices for cheapening labour simply resulted in increasing the burden of labour.

WILLIAM MORRIS, News from Nowhere, p. 131.

MCKINLEY, WILLIAM

16 The bullet that pierced Goebel's breast
Cannot be found in all the West;
Good reason; it is speeding here [to Washington]

To stretch McKinley on his bier

ARMSTRONG BIRCH, New York Journal, February 4, 1901. Basis of Roosevelt's denunciation of William Randolph Hearst as instigator of McKinley's assassination. (See SULLIVAN, "Our Times," iii, 280.)

If bad institutions and bad men can be got rid of only by killing, then the killing must be done. Editorial in N. Y. Evening Journal, April 10, 1901, attacking President McKinley.

Where is McKinley, Mark Hanna's McKinley,

His slave, his echo, his suit of clothes?
VACCEL LINDRAY, Bryon, Bryon, Bryon.

In his [McKinley's] photographs he is always the same. He would never consent to be photographed in a negligent pose, and always took the most meticulous care about every detail of his appearance and his posture. He embalmed himself, so far as posterity is concerned rods, and hushed into obedience.

DOROTHEA LYNDE DIX, Memorial to the Legislature of Massachusetts, 1843, p. 4.

I have myself seen more than nine thousand idiots, epileptics and insane in the United States
... bound with galling chains, bowed beneath fetters, lacerated with ropes, scourged with rods.

DOROTHEA LYNDE DIX, First petition to Congress. (Senate Misc. Doc., No. 150, 30 Cong.
1st Sess.)

O hark! what mean these yells and cries?

His chain—some furious madman breaks;

He comes—I see his glaring eyes;

Now, now, my dungeon grate he shakes.

Help! help!—He's gone! O fearful woe,

Such screams to hear, such sights to see!

My brain, my brain!—I know, I know

I am not mad, but soon shall be.

MATTHEW GREGORY LEWIS, The Maniac.

Mad in the judgment of the mob, sane, perhaps, in yours. (Demens Judicio vulgi, sanus fortasse tuo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 6, l. 97.

Much madness is divinent sense

To a discerning eye;

Much sense the starkest madness.

'Tis the majority

In this, as all, prevails

Assent, and you are sane;

Demur,—you're straightway dangerous,

And handled with a chain.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 11.

Not so much of thee is left among us
As the hum outliving the hushed bell.

J. R. LOWELL, The Darkened Mind. Referring to his mother, who had become insane.

Demoniac frenzy, moping melancholy,
And moon-struck madness.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 485.

Of all mad creatures, if the learn'd are right,
It is the slaver kills, and not the bite.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 105.

That he is mad, 't is true: 't is true 't is pity;
And pity 't is 't is true.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 97.

O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven!
Keep me in temper: I would not be mad!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 5, l. 50.

V—Madness and Sanity

Who then is sane? He who is not a fool.

(Quisnam igitur sanus? Qui non stultus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 158.

Sanity consists in not being subdued by your means.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

Sanity is a madness put to good uses.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 146.

He who can simulate sanity will be sane.
(Qui poterit sanum fingere, sanus erit.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 304.

It is not madness
That I have utter'd: bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-word; which madness

Would gambol from.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 141.

Every man has a sane spot somewhere.
R. L. STEVENSON AND LLOYD OSBOURNE, The Wrecker.

MAID

ginning of the famous sextet from Florodora, which opened in New York, October, 1900.

Tell me, are there any more at home like you?
Disposition shady, But a perfect lady,
A beginner but a winner, Mamie!

WILL D. COBB, Mamie. (1901)

Maids' nays are nothing; they are shy
But do desire what they deny.

There be more maids than Mawkin, more men than Hodge, and more fools than Firk.

THOMAS DEKKER, Shoemaker's Holiday. Act
iii, sc. 1. (1600)

And, when once the young heart of a maiden is stolen,

The maiden herself will steal after it soon.

THOMAS MOORE, Ilse Olsen.

Men often deceive; but tender maids not often. (Sæpe viri fallunt; teneræ non sæpe puellæ.)

OVID, Art Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 31.

I know a maiden fair to see,
Take care!

She can both false and friendly be,
Beware! Beware!

Trust her not, She is fooling thee!

LONGFELLOW, Beware! (Hüt du Dich!)

What tender maid but must a victim fall
To one man's treat, but for another's ball?

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 95.

For what sad maiden can endure to seem
Set in for singleness?

THOMAS HOOD, Bianca's Dream.

Warn'd by the Sylph, O pious maid, beware!
This to disclose is all thy guardian can:

Beware of all, but most beware of man!

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 112.

And she who scorns a man must die a maid.
POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 28.

A maid that laughs is half taken.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

A maid that taketh yieldeth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

A maid often seen, a gown often worn,
Are disesteemed and held in scorn.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Be somewhat scarier of your maiden presence.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 121.

What shall be the maiden's fate?

Who shall be the maiden's mate?

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto i, st. 16.

I am a simple maid, and therein wealthiest,
That I protest I simply am a maid.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 3, l. 72.

- 1 The chastest maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act I, sc. 3, l. 36.

MAIDENHOOD

- 17 A damsel with a dulcimer
In a vision once I saw:

It was an Abyssinian maid,
And on her dulcimer she played,
Singing of Mount Abora.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Kubla Khan, l. 37.

1 She's neither proud nor saucy yet,
She's neither plump nor gaucy yet;
But just a jinking,
Bonny blinking,
Hilly-skilly lassie yet.

JAMES HOGG, My Love She's but a Lassie Yet.

2 She stood breast-high amid the corn,
Clasp'd by the golden light of morn,
Like the sweetheart of the sun,
Who many a glowing kiss had won.
HOOD, Ruth.

3 Maiden! with the meek, brown eyes,
In whose orbs a shadow lies
Like the dusk in evening skies!

Thou whose locks outshine the sun,
Golden tresses, wreathed in one,
As the braided streamlets run!

Standing, with reluctant feet,
Where the brook and river meet,
Womanhood and childhood fleet!

LONGFELLOW, Maidenhood.

Bear a hily in thy hand;
Gates of brass cannot withstand
One touch of that magic wand.

LONGFELLOW, Maidenhood.

4 She walks—the lady of my delight—
A shepherdess of sheep.

Her flocks are thoughts. She keeps them white;

She guards them from the steep.

She feeds them on the fragrant height,
And folds them in for sleep.

ALICE MEYNELL, The Shepherdess.

5 The rare and radiant maiden, whom the angels name Lenore—

Nameless here for evermore.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven.

6 She dwelt among the untrodden ways
Beside the springs of Dove,

A maid whom there were none to praise
And very few to love.

WORDSWORTH, Lucy, Pt. I.

MAJORITY AND MINORITY

7 When bad men combine, the good must associate; else they will fall one by one, an un-pitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents.

8 To be in the weakest camp is to be in the strongest school.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Heretics.

9 A majority is always the best repartee.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tanquer, Bk. II, ch. 14.

10 Shall we judge a country by the majority, or by the minority? By the minority, surely.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

11 All history is a record of the power of minorities, and of minorities of one.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

That cause is strong which has not a multitude,
but one strong man behind it.

J. R. LOWELL, Address, Chelsea, Mass., 22 Dec., 1885.

12 Decision by majorities is as much an expedient as lighting by gas.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, House of Commons, 21 Jan., 1858.

13 The oppression of a majority is detestable and odious; the oppression of a minority is only by one degree less detestable and odious.

GLADSTONE, Speech, House of Commons, 1870, on Irish Land Bill.

The most dangerous foe to truth and freedom in our midst is the compact majority. Yes, the damned, compact, liberal majority.

HENRIK IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act iv.

The only tyrannies from which men, women and children are suffering in real life are the tyrannies of minorities.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, New York City, 20 March, 1912.

The great mass of the people are in more danger of having their rights invaded and their liberties destroyed by the overweening influence of organized minorities, who have fanatical or selfish interests to serve, than by the force of an unthinking or cruel majority.

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, Drifting Sands of Party Politics, p. 6.

14 Minority is no disproof:

Wisdom is not so strong and fleet

As never to have known defeat.

LAURENCE HOUSMAN, Advocatus Diaboli.

15 The minority is always in the right.

HENRIK IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act iv.

The majority never has right on its side.

HENRIK IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act iv.

The opinion of the majority is not the final proof of what is right. (Nicht Stimmmehrheit ist des Rechtes Probe.)

SCHILLER. (Quoted by H. D. SEDGWICK, In Praise of Gentlemen. Title page.)

When great changes occur in history, when great principles are involved, as a rule the majority are wrong.

EUGENE V. DANE, Speech, at trial, Cleveland, O., 12 Sept., 1918.

The fact disclosed by a survey of the past that majorities have been wrong, must not blind us to the complementary fact that majorities have usually not been entirely wrong.

HERBERT SPENCER, First Principles. Ch. 1, sec. 1.

1 If by the mere force of numbers a majority should deprive a minority of any clearly written constitutional right, it might, in a moral point of view, justify revolution—certainly would if such a right were a vital one.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1861.

2 Safer with multitudes to stray,
Than tread alone a fairer way:
To mingle with the erring throng,
Than boldly speak ten millions wrong.

ROBERT NUGENT, Epistle to a Lady. See also PEOPLE: APOTHEGMS.

3 One, of God's side, is a majority.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech on John Brown, Harper's Ferry, 1 Nov., 1859.

One, with God, is always a majority, but many a martyr has been burned at the stake while the votes were being counted.

THOMAS B. REED. (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

4 Governments exist to protect the rights of minorities. The loved and the rich need no protection,—they have many friends and few enemies.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Address, Boston, 21 Dec., 1860.

5 How a minority,
Reaching majority,
Seizing authority,
Hates a minority!

LEONARD H. ROBINSON, Minorities.

6 A majority, with a good cause, are negligent and supine.

SWIFT, Letter to a Member of Parliament in Ireland, 1708.

MAN

I—Man: Definitions

- 14 Good Lord, what is man? for as simple he looks,
Do but try to develop his hooks and his crooks!
With his depths and his shallows, his good and his evil;
All in all he's a problem must puzzle the devil.
BURNS, Inscribed to the Hon. C. J. Fox.
Are we a piece of machinery that, like the Æolian harp, passive, takes the impression of the passing accident? Or do these workings argue something within us above the trodden clod?
BURNS, Letter to Mrs. Dunlop, 1 Jan., 1789.
- 15 Admire, exult—despise—laugh, weep,—for here
There is such matter for all feeling:—Man!
Thou pendulum betwixt a smile and tear.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 109.

For ours is a most fictile world, and man is the most angelic plastic of creatures.

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. 1, bk. 1, ch. 2.

1 Man is an embodied paradox, a bundle of contradictions.

11 Man is the miracle in nature. God

Is the One Miracle to man.

JEAN INGELW, The Story of Doom. Bk. vii, l. 271.

12 Man is a machine into which we put what we call food and produce what we call thought.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Gods.

13 Limited in his nature, infinite in his desires, man is a fallen god who remembers the heavens.

LAMARTINE, Méditations. Ser. II.

14 Man is a torch, then ashes soon,
May and June, then dead December,
Dead December, then again June.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Chinese Nightingale.

15 This Being of mine, whatever it be, consists of a little flesh, a little breath, and the part which governs. ("Ὁ τί ποτε τοῦτο εἶμι, σάρκα σὸν καὶ πνεῦμα καὶ τὸ ἡγεμονικόν.")

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. II, sec. 2.

16 This many-headed, divers-armed, and furiously-raging monster is man; wretched, weak and miserable man: whom, if you consider well, what is he, but a crawling, and ever-moving, ants'-nest?

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. II, ch. 12.

What a chimera, then, is man! What a novelty! What a monster, what a chaos, what a contradiction, what a prodigy! Judge of all things, feeble worm of the earth, depository of truth, a sink of uncertainty and error, the glory and the shame of the universe

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. vii, No. 434.

17 A pilgrim panting for the rest to come;

An exile, anxious for his native home;

A drop dis severed from the boundless sea;

A moment parted from eternity.

HANNAH MORE, Reflections of King Hezekiah, l. 129.

O man, strange composite of heaven and earth!
Majesty dwarf'd to baseness! fragrant flower
Running to poisonous seed! and seeming worth
Cloaking corruption! weakness mastering power!

Who never art so near to crime and shame,
As when thou hast achieved some deed of name!

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, The Dream of Gerontius, l. 291.

1 Man is a rope connecting animal and superman.—a rope over a precipice. . . . What is great in man is that he is a bridge and not a goal.

NIETZSCHE, Thus Spake Zarathustra Sec. 4.

2 Man's the bad child of the universe.

JAMES OPPENHEIM, Laughter.

3 Placed on this isthmus of a middle state,
A being darkly wise and rudely great:
With too much knowledge for the Sceptic side,
With too much weakness for the Stoic's

pride, . . .
Alike in ignorance, his reason such,
Whether he thinks too little or too much;
Chaos of thought and passion, all confused;
Still by himself abused or disabused;
Created half to rise, and half to fall;
Great lord of all things, yet a prey to all;
Sole judge of truth, in endless error hurl'd;
The glory, jest, and riddle of the world!

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epist. lviii, 27.

10 When I beheld this I sighed, and said within myself. Surely man is a Broomstick!

SWIFT, A Meditation upon a Broomstick.

11 Before the beginning of years,
There came to the making of man

Time, with a gift of tears;

Grief, with a glass that ran;

Pleasure, with pain for heaven;

Summer, with flowers that fell;

Remembrance fallen from heaven,

And madness risen from hell;

Strength without hands to smite;

Love that endures for a breath;

Night, the shadow of light.

And Life, the shadow of death.

IV—Man: A Bubble

See also Life: A Bubble; World: A Bubble

² What's he, born to be sick, so always dying,
That's guided by inevitable fate;
That comes in weeping, and that goes out crying;

Whose calendar of woes is still in date;
Whose life's a bubble, and in length a span;
A concert still in discords? 'Tis a man

WILLIAM BROWNE, Britannia's Pastorals Bk. i, song 2, l. 192.

³ The not-incurious in God's handiwork
(This man's-flesh he hath admirably made,
Blown like a bubble, kneaded like a paste,
To coop up and keep down on earth a space
That puff of vapour from his mouth, man's soul).

ROBERT BROWNING, An Epistle: Karshush, l. 2.
A drop in Ocean's boundless tide, unfathom'd waste of agony;

Where millions live their horrid lives by making other millions die.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. iii, st. 20.

⁴ The bubble winked at me, and said,
"You'll miss me, brother, when you're dead."
OLIVER HERFORD, Toast: The Bubble Winked.

⁵ Like to the falling of a Star;
Or as the flights of Eagles are;
Or like the fresh Spring's gaudy hue;
Or silver drops of morning Dew;
Or like a Wind that chafes the flood;
Or Bubbles which on water stood;
Even such is Man, whose borrow'd light
Is straight call'd in, and paid to night.

The Wing blows out; the Bubble dies;
The Spring entomb'd in Autumn lies;
The Dew dries up; the Star is shot;
The Flight is past; and Man forgot.

HENRY KING (?), Sic Vita (Poems, 1657). These lines were included in Francis Beaumont's Poems, published in 1640; nevertheless the evidence as to their authorship favors Bishop King, whose verses were circulated in manuscript form long before they were collected and printed. For further discussion of authorship, and examples of imitations, see APPENDIX.

Like the dew on the mountain,
Like the foam on the river,
Like the bubble on the fountain,
Thou art gone, and for ever!
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto III, st. 16.

⁶ A man is a bubble, said the Greek proverb (Πομπήν δ' ἀνθρώπου) . . . descending from

God, and the dew of heaven, from a tear and a drop of rain.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Dying Ch. i, sec. 1.

How we bladders of wind strut about. We are meaner than flies; flies have their virtues, but we are nothing but bubbles. (Utres inflati ambulamus. Minoris quam muscæ sumus, muscæ tamen aliquam virtutem habent, nos non plura sumus quam bullæ.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 42. The last phrase is a proverb used by many writers, among them: VARRO, De Re Rustica: Preface; SENECA, Apococynosis; LUCAN, Charron; and ERASMUS, Adagia.

Like bubbles on the sea of matter borne,
They rise, they break, and to that sea return.

POPE, Essay on Man Epist. iii, l. 19.

⁷ For what are men who grasp at praise sublime,
But bubbles on the rapid stream of time,
That rise, and fall, that swell, and are no more,
Born, and forgot, ten thousand in an hour?
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 285.

V—Man: A Child

⁸ What is man? A foolish baby;
Vainly strives, and fights, and frets:
Demanding all, deserving nothing,
One small grave is all he gets.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Cui Bono.

⁹ Men are but children of a larger growth;
Our appetites are apt to change as theirs,
And full as craving too, and full as vain.

DEYDEN, All for Love. Act iv, sc. 1.

¹⁰ Man to the last is but a froward child;
So eager for the future, come what may,
And to the present so insensible!

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Reflections.

¹¹ They are but children, too; though they have gray hairs, they are, indeed, children of a larger size.

SENECA, De Ira. Sec. 8.

¹² Man is a restless thing, still vain and wild,
Lives beyond sixty, nor outgrows the child.

ISAAC WATTS, To the Memory of T. Gunston, Esq., l. 189.

VI—Man: A Shadow

¹³ Dark fluxion, all unfixable by thought,
A phantom dim of past and future wrought,
Vain sister of the worm—life, death, soul, clod—
Ignore thyself, and strive to know thy God!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Self-Knowledge.

¹⁴ We are spirits clad in veils;
Man by man was never seen;
All our deep communing fails
To ransome the shadowy screen.

CHRISTOPHER PEARCE CRANCH, Gnosis.

¹ We are dust and shadow. (Pulvis et umbra sumus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 7, l. 16.

² Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils.

Old Testament: Isaiah, II, 22.

³ We are none other than a moving row
Of Magic Shadow-shapes that come and go Round with the Sun-illuminated Lantern held
In Midnight by the Master of the Show.

Every man is as God made him, ay, and often worse.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. II, ch. 4.

God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act I, sc. 2, l. 60.

⁹ 'Twas much, that man was made like God before,
But, that God should be made like man, much more.

JOHN DONNE, Holy Sonnets. No. xv.

¹⁰ So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him.

Old Testament: Genesis, I, 26.

Man is God's image; and a poor man is Christ's stamp to boot.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 64.

¹¹ And first the golden race of speaking men
Were by the dwellers in Olympus made;
They under Cronos lived, when he was king
In heaven. Like gods were they, with careless mind,

From toil and sorrow free, and nought they knew

Of dread old age.

HERODOTUS, Works and Days, l. 109.

¹² There wanted yet the master work, the end
Of all yet done; a creature who, not prone
And brute as other creatures, but endued
With sanctity of reason, might erect
His stature, and upright with front serene Govern the rest, self-knowing, and from thence

Magnanimous to correspond with Heav'n.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 505.

Thus while the mute creation downward bend
Their sight, and to their earthy mother tend,
Man looks aloft, and with erected eyes
Beholds his own hereditary skies.

(Pronaque quum spectant animalia cœtera terram,

Os homini sublime dedit, cœlumque tueri
Jussit, et erectos ad sidera tollere vultus.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. I, l. 84. (Dryden, tr., l. 106.)

¹³ What a wonderful privilege to have the weakness of a man and the serenity of a god!
(Ecce res magna, habere imbecillitatem hominis, securitatem dei.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Luciliūm. Epist. lili, sec. 12.

Let each man think himself an act of God,
His mind a thought, his life a breath of God.

HORACE, Art Poetica, l. 21.

1 Shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it,
What makest thou?

Old Testament: Isaiah, xlv, 9.

2 Upon the potter's flying wheel the clay
Knows not the purpose of its plasmic day;
So we upon the blindly-whirling sphere
Are shaped to ends which do not yet appear.
JAMES B. KENYON, The Potter's Clay.

3 For I remember stopping by the way
To watch a Potter thumbing his wet Clay:
And with its all-obiterated Tongue
It murmured—"Gently, Brother, gently, pray!"

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 37. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

Said one among them—"Surely not in vain
My substance of the common Earth was ta'en
And to this Figure moulded, to be broke,
Or trampled back to shapeless Earth again."

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 84. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

The shatter'd bowl shall know repair; the riven lute shall sound once more;
But who shall mend the clay of man, the stolen breath to man restore?

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. ix, st. 40.

4 Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonour?

New Testament: Romans, ix, 21.

After a momentary silence spake
Some Vessel of a more ungainly make:
"They sneer at me for leaning all awry:
What I did the Hand then of the Potter shake?"

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 86. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

All this of Pot and Potter—Tell me then,
Who is the Potter, pray, and who the Pot?

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát. St. 87. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

5 I have thought some of Nature's journeymen had made men and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 38.

6 Not for this
Was common clay ta'en from the common earth,
Moulded by God, and temper'd with the tears
Of angels to the perfect shape of man.

TENNYSO, The Palace of Art: Introduction.

IX—Man: His Growth

7 What? Was man made a wheel-work to wind up,

And be discharged, and straight wound up anew?

No! grown, his growth lasts; taught, he ne'er forgets;

May learn a thousand things, not twice the same.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Death in the Desert, l. 447.

8 Though his beginnings be but poor and low,
Thank God, a man can grow!

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, Per Aspera.

9 Human improvement is from within outwards.

FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Divus Caesar.

10 Men never amount to much until they outgrow their fathers' notions, sir.

LONDON CABELL GARLAND, Response, while
Chancellor of Vanderbilt University in 1891, to a student protesting against the agnostic tendencies of a professor.

11 Man seems the only growth that dwindles
here.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 126.

12 In the twentieth century war will be dead, the scaffold will be dead, hatred will be dead, frontier boundaries will be dead, dogmas will be dead; man will live. He will possess something higher than all these—a great country, the whole earth, and a great hope, the whole
heaven.

VICTOR HUGO, The Future of Man.

13 And step by step, since time began,

No means, no method unemploy'd,
To bless him, if he can.

YOUNG, Resignation. Pt. i, st. 119.

X—Man: His Virtues

16 Man is his own star; and the soul that can Render an honest and a perfect man,
Commands all light, all influence, all fate;
Nothing to him falls early or too late.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Honest Man's Fortune: Epilogue.

17 Love, hope, fear, faith—these make humanity;

These are its sign and note and character.

Man is the only one that knows nothing, that can learn nothing without being taught. He can neither speak nor walk nor eat, and in short he can do nothing at the prompting of nature only, but weep.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii, sec. 4.

10
O how contemptible a thing is man unless he can raise himself above humanity. (O quam contempta res est homo nisi supra humana se erexerit.)

SENECA, Naturales Quaestiones. Bk. i, Profae.

"Oh, what a vile and abject thing is man, unless he can erect himself above humanity." Here is a bon mot and a useful desire, but equally absurd.
For to make the handful bigger than the hand, the armful bigger than the arm, and to hope to stride further than the stretch of our legs, is impossible and monstrous.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

Unless above himself he can

Erect himself, how poor a thing is man.

SAMUEL DANIEL, To the Lady Margaret, Countess of Cumberland. St. 12. Quoted by Wordsworth, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 330.

"How poor a thing is man!" alas 'tis true,
I'd half forgot it when I chanced on you.

SCHILLER, The Moral Poet.

Man and his affairs, church and state and school, trade and commerce, and manufactures and agriculture, even politics, the most alarming of them all—I am pleased to see how little space they occupy in the landscape.

H. D. THOREAU, Walking.

14
All that I care to know is that a man is a human being—that is enough for me; he can't be any worse.

MARK TWAIN, Concerning the Jews.

1 Mankind, when left to themselves, are unfit for their own government.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Lee, 31 Oct., 1786.

The mass of men are neither wise nor good.

JOHN JAY, Letter to Washington, 27 June, 1786.

2 Man only,—rash, refined presumptuous Man—

Starts from his rank, and mars Creation's plan!

Born the free heir of nature's wide domain,
To art's strict limits bounds his narrow'd reign;

Resigns his native rights for meaner things,
For Faith and Fetters, Laws and Priests and Kings.

XII—Men: Most Men Are Bad

3 Most men are bad. (Οι πολλοὶ κακοί.)

BIAS OF PARENTE, one of the seven wise men of Greece, who lived about 566 B. C. The phrase is said to have been inscribed on the wall of the temple at Delphi. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bias, Sec. 88. AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 189.) Ausonius Latinizes it: Plures mali.

By "bad" I meant uncultured men and savages, who disregard right and equity and hallowed customs.

AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 192.

4 Bad's the best of us.

JOHN FLETCHER, Rolls. Act iv, sc. 2.

Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

SHAKESPEARE [?], The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 102.

5 I'm no better than the best.

And whether worse than the rest

Of my fellow-men, who knows?

O. W. HOLMES, My Aunt.

Man passes away; his name perishes from record and recollection; his history is as a tale that is told, and his very monument becomes a ruin.

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch Book: Westminster Abbey. Conclusion.

Man being in honour abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish.

Old Testament: Psalms, xlix, 12, 20.

Mark how fleeting and paltry is the estate of man, —yesterday in embryo, to-morrow a mummy or ashes. So for the hair's-breadth of time assigned to thee live rationally, and part with life cheerfully, as drops the ripe olive, extolling the season that bore it and the tree that matured it.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations Bk iv, sec. 48.

He weaves, and is clothed with derision;

Sows, and he shall not reap;

His life is a watch or a vision

Between a sleep and a sleep

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

Man is born in vanity and sin; he comes into the world like morning mushrooms, soon thrusting up their heads into the air, . . . and as soon they turn into dust and forgetfulness.

Than just to look about us and to die,
Expatiate free o'er all this scene of man;
A mighty maze! but not without a plan;
Eye Nature's walks, shoot folly as it flies,
And catch the manners living as they rise;
Laugh where we must, be candid where we
can,

But vindicate the ways of God to man.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. I, l. 3.

In human works, tho' labour'd on with pain,
A thousand movements scarce one purpose gain;
In God's, one single can its end produce,
Yet serve to second too some other use:
So man, who here seems principal alone,
Perhaps acts second to some sphere unknown,
Touches some wheel, or verges to some goal:

If men are always more or less deceived on the subject of women, it is because they forget that they and women do not speak altogether the same language.

AMIEL, Journal, 26 Dec., 1868.

There is nothing enduring in life for a woman except what she builds in a man's heart.

JUDITH ANDERSON, Newspaper Interview, 8 March, 1931.

The vast mass of men have to depend on themselves alone; the vast mass of women hope or expect to get their life given to them.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Isadora Duncan, p. 310.

The whole world was made for man, but the twelfth part of man for woman; man is the whole world and the breath of God; woman the rib and crooked piece of man.

Thou large-brain'd woman and large-hearted man.

E. B. BROWNING, To George Sand: A Desire.

Preach as we will, in this wrong world of ours,
Man's fate and woman's are contending powers;

Each strives to dupe the other in the game,—
Guilt to the victor—to the vanquish'd shame!

BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. II, sec. 2.

What a strange thing is man! and what a stranger
Is woman! What a whirlwind is her head.

And what a whirlpool full of depth and danger
Is all the rest about her.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto IX, st. 64.

There can no man in humblest bias acquit

TENNYSON, The Princess Pt. v, l. 437.

The woman's crime is man's, they rise or fall

Together, dwarf'd or godlike, bond or free

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vi, l. 243.

For woman is not undeveloped man,

But diverse. Could we make her as the man,

Sweet Love were slain; his dearest bond is this,

Not like to him, but like in difference.

Yet in the long years liker must they grow;

The man be more of woman, she of man;

He gain in sweetness and in moral height,

Not lose the wrestling thence that shows the good;

She mental breadth, nor fail in childhood's quest;

Nor lose the childish in the larger mind;

Still at the best she set herself to man,

Like perfect music unto noble words.

I.—Manners Definitions

10 Manners must adorn knowledge, and smooth its way through the world Like a great rough diamond, it may do very well in a closet by way of curiosity, and also for its intrinsic value, but it will never be worn, nor shine, if it is not polished.

JOHN GARRISON, Letters, 1 July, 1748

11 Women will be like gold. Give their intrinsic value: but if they are not polished, they certainly have less of their lustre, and even polished metal will pass upon more people than rough gold

LEO TOLSTOI, Diary, 1 March, 1882

12 It is not the refinement of the manners, but the refinement of the soul, that is the true refinement of the manners

LEO TOLSTOI, Diary, 1 March, 1882

13 What's a fine person, or a beautiful face, unless department gives them decent grace?

14 Men'd with all other requests to please, Some want the striking elegance of case, The curious eye their awkward movement traces They seem like puppets led about by wires

CHARLES CRUICKSHANK, The Rosicrucian, 1 741

15 Different manners belong to different pursuits (Disparis mores disparia studia sequuntur)

CICERO, De Amicitia Ch xx, sec 74

16 Contact with manners is education

17 DIONYSIUS OF HALICARNASSUS, Arts Rhetorica Ch xi, sec 2

18 Manners are the happy ways of doing things If they are superficial, so are the dew-drops which give such a depth to the morning meadows

EMERSON, Conduct of Life Behavior

19 Manners have been somewhat cynically defined to be a contrivance of wise men to keep fools at a distance

EMERSON, Conduct of Life Behavior

20 There is nothing settled in manners, but the laws of behavior yield to the energy of the individual

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series Manners

21 Manners are greater than laws, by their delicate nature they fortify themselves with an impassable wall of defence

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures Public and Private Education

22 Perhaps, if we could examine the manners of different nations with impartiality, we should find no people so rude, as to be without any rules of politeness, nor any so polite, as not to have some remains of rudeness

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Remarks Concerning the Savages of North America

23 The manners of nations are equally bad

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae No 39

24 The society of women is the foundation of good manners. (Der Umgang mit Frauen ist das Element guter Sitten)

25 What better school for manners than the company of virtuous women?

DAVID HUMPHREY, Essays The Rise of Arts and Sciences

26 The difference between a well-bred and an ill-bred man is this One immediately attracts your liking, and the other your aversion You love the one till you find reason to hate him, you hate the other till you find reason to love him.

SAMUEL JOHNSON (ROSWELL, Life, IV, 319)

27 The great refinement is false delicacy, and the delicacy is solid refinement (La trop grande subtilité est une fausse délicatesse, et la véritable délicatesse est une solide subtilité.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 128

For as laws are necessary that good manners may be preserved, so there is need of good manners that laws may be maintained.

MACHIAVELLI, Des Discorsi. Pt. I, sec. 18.

Self-respect is at the bottom of all good manners. They are the expression of discipline, of good-will, of respect for other people's rights and comfort and feelings.

E. S. MARTIN, A Father to His Freshman Son.

You must practise
The manners of the time, if you intend
To have favour from it.

MARSHALL, The Unnatural Combat. Act I, sc. 1.

Good manners are the technic of expressing consideration for the feelings of others.

ALICE DUER MILLER, I Like American Manners. (Saturday Evening Post, 13 Aug., 1932.)

The most delightful of companions is he who combines the mind of a gentleman with the emotions of a bum. . . . Toward men, ever an aristocrat; toward women, ever a commoner—that way lies success.

G. J. NATHAN, The Autobiography of an Attitude

All Manners take a tincture from our own,
Or come discoloured from our Passions shown;
Or Fancy's beam enlarges, multiplies,
Contracts, inverts, and gives ten thousand dyes

POPE, Moral Essays. Epist. I, l. 33.

Our manners, like our faces, though ever so beautiful, must differ in their beauty

SHAFESBURY, Characteristics. Vol. III, p. 262.

Those that are good manners at the court are as ridiculous in the country as the behaviour of the country is most mockable at the court.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act III, sc. 2, l. 46.

The great secret is not having bad manners or good manners or any other particular sort of manners, but having the same manners for all human souls.

MARRIAGE

I—Marriage Definitions

19 Marriage always demands the greatest understanding of the art of insincerity possible between two human beings
VICKI BAUM, And Life Goes On, p 141

The one charm of marriage is that it makes a life of deception absolutely necessary for both parties
OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray Ch 1

¹ Marriage: The state or condition of a community consisting of a master, a mistress, and two slaves, making in all, two.

AMEROSÉ BIERCK, Devil's Dictionary, p. 213.

² The mere idea of marriage, existing to weaken the will by distracting its straight aim in the life of practically every young girl, is the simple secret of their confessed inferiority in men's pursuits and professions today.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Isadora Duncan, p. 310.

³ In the married state, the world must own, Divided happiness was never known. To make it mutual, nature points the way; Let husbands govern: gentle wives obey.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Provok'd Husband Act v, sc. 2. See also WIFE: THE CROWING HEN.

⁴ The first bond of society is marriage (Prima societas in ipso conjugio est.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 17, sec. 54

⁵ Wedlock's a lane where there is no turning.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Magnus and Morna. Sc. 3.

⁶ Marriage must be a relation either of sympathy or of conquest

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Bk. iii, ch. 48.

⁷ Bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh.

Old Testament: Genesis, ii, 23.

Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh.

Old Testament: Genesis, ii, 24.

And they two shall be one flesh.

New Testament: Ephesians, v, 31.

And they twain shall be one flesh.

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 5; Mark, x, 8.

Our state cannot be sever'd; we are one, One flesh, to lose thee were to lose myself.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 958

⁸ The torment of one, the felicity of two, the strife and enmity of three.

WASHINGTON IRVING.

⁹ Matrimony is something that the bachelor misses and the widower escapes.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book.

^{9a} Death itself to the reflecting mind is less serious than marriage. . . . Death is not a blow, it is not even a pulsation; it is a pause. But marriage unrolls the awful lot of numberless generations. Health, genius, honour are the words inscribed on some; on others are disease, fatuity, and infamy.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR. (Quoted by SARAH GRAND, The Heavenly Twins. Motto to Bk. II.)

¹⁰ Marrying cannot be without women, nor can the world subsist without them. To marry is physis against incontinence.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 726.

On what pretense can man have interdicted marriage, which is a law of nature? It is as though we were forbidden to eat, to drink, to sleep.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 728.

¹¹ Marriage, if one will face the truth, is an evil, but a necessary evil (Tò γάμος, έάν τις τήν αλήθειαν σκοπή, κακόν μέν έστιν, άλλ' αναγκαίον κακόν.)

MEANER, Fragments. No. 651.

¹² Wedlock is a padlock

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 56. (1678)

¹³ Marriage is the Keeley cure for love's intoxication.

ELLEN ROWLAND, Love Letters of a Cynic.

¹⁴ Marriage is nothing but a civil contract.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Marriage.

¹⁵ A world-without-end bargain

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 799.

¹⁶ Is it not the most horrible of all the means which the world has had recourse to, to bind the noble to itself?

SHELLEY, Letter to T. J. Hogg, 21 June, 1811.

¹⁷ Marriage is a lottery.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 252.

Marriage is a lottery in which men stake their liberty and women their happiness.

MADAME DE RIEX, Epigram.

Marriage is a lottery, but you can't tear up your ticket if you lose.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book

¹⁸ Marriage is one long conversation, chequered by disputes.

R. L. STEVENSON, Memories and Portraits, p. 189.

¹⁹ Marriage is a step so grave and decisive that it attracts light-headed variable men by its very awfulness.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i. But marriage, if comfortable, is not at all heroic. It certainly narrows and dampens the spirits of generous men. In marriage, a man becomes slack and selfish, and undergoes a fatty degeneration of his moral being. . . . The air of the fireside withers out all the fine wildings of the husband's heart.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i. Marriage is like life in this—that it is a field of battle, and not a bed of roses.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

²⁰ Two lives bound fast in one with golden ease; Two graves grass-green beside a grey church tower.

THOMYSON, Chromola.

1 Marriage is the only adventure open to the cowardly

VOLTAIRE, Pensées d'un Philosophe

2 Marriage is a status of antagonistic cooperation. In such a status necessarily centripetal and centrifugal forces are continuously at work and the measure of its success obviously depends on the extent to which the centripetal forces are predominant

JOHN M. WOOLSEY, Federal Judge, Decision, rendered 6 April, 1931, holding that Marie Stopes's Married Love is not obscene

3 But marriage is a fetter, is a snare,
A hell, no lady so polite can bear

YOUNG, Love of Fame Satire vi, l 65

4 Marriage with peace is this world's Paradise,
With strife, this life's Purgatory

UNKNOWN, Politeuphuia, p 227 (1669)

Where there is strife betwixt a man and wife,
'tis hell,

And mutual love may be compar'd to heaven
JOSHUA COOKE, How a Man May Choose a Good Wife Act 1, sc 1

The marriage state with and without the affection suitable to it, is the completest image of Heaven and Hell we are capable of receiving in this life

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator No 480

Well married, a man is winged ill-matched, he is shackled

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine Vol v, p 91

20 Marriages would in general be as happy, and often more so, if they were all made by the Lord Chancellor

SAMUEL JOHNSON (BOSWELL, Life, 1776)

Notwithstanding all that wit, or malice, or pride, or prudence will be able to suggest, men and women must at last pass their lives together.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler No 119

I have met with women whom I really think would like to be married to a Poem, and to be given away by a Novel.

KEATS, Letters to Fanny Brawne Letter 2

Here you may see Benedick the married man
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing Act I, sc 1, l 269 (1598) It was from this use of the word that "Benedick" or "Benedict," as a synonym for a married man, originated, especially for a supposedly confirmed bachelor who falls victim to Cupid's arrow.

How dost thou, Benedick the married man?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing Act v, sc 4, l 100

Wish the veteran joy of his entrance into the band of Benedicts

WALTER SCOTT In LOCKHART, Life (1839), Vol vi, p. 313 (1821) In frequent use thereafter, usually in a jocular sense

He married off his daughter, giving her, as he said himself, for a trial marriage of thirty days ("Εἰς τρεῖς μῶνς ὑπὸ πείρῃς ἡμερῶν")

ALEXANDER, Didymus Frag 118

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae No 520

The wedlock of minds will be greater than that of bodies (Magna erit animorum quam corporum conjugium)

ERASMUS, Procus et Puella

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets No cxvi

More things belong [to marriage] than four bare legs in a bed

JOHN HENWOOD, Proverbs Pt 1 ch 8

She who is born handsome is born married

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs

Such as marry but to a fair face, tie themselves off to a foul bargain

ROBERT GREENE, Works Vol viii, p 36

Some ladies are too beauteous to be wed,
For where's the man that's worthy of their bed?

YOUNG, Love of Fame Satire vi, l 83

It takes patience to appreciate domestic bliss;
volatile spirits prefer unhappiness

GEORGE SANTAYANA, The Life of Reason Vol ii, p. 4

"Whenever I marry," says masculine Ann,

"I must really insist upon wedding a man!"
But what if the man (for men are but human)
Should be equally nice about wedding a woman?

J G SAXE, Dilemma

Of all actions of a man's life his marriage does least concern other people, yet of all actions of our life, 'tis most meddled with by other people

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk Marriage

I say, we will have no more marriages Those that are married already, all but one, shall live the rest shall keep as they are To a nunnery go

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet Act iii sc 1, l 155

Makes marriage vows

As false as dicers oaths

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet Act iii, sc 4, l 44 See also LOVE LOVE'S PERJURIES

The whole world is strewn with snares, traps gins and pitfalls for the capture of men by women

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman Introduction

Marriage is popular because it combines the maximum of temptation with the maximum of opportunity

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists

Marriage is unpopular because it combines the minimum of temptation with the maximum of opportunity

UNKNOWN, Shaw Revised

Married women are kept women and they are beginning to find it out

LOGAN PEARSALE SMITH, Afterthoughts

What they do in heaven we are ignorant of, but what they do not we are told expressly that they neither marry nor are given in marriage

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects

They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, neither marry, nor are given in marriage

NEW TESTAMENT Luke, xx, 35

Wedded persons may thus pass over their lives quietly if the husband becomes deaf and the wife blind

RICHARD TAVERNER, Garden of Wisdom, ii, 4 (1539)

A good marriage would be between a blind wife and a deaf husband (Un bon mariage se dressoit d'une femme aveugle, avecques un mary sourd)

MONTAIGNE, Essays Bk iii, ch 5 Quoted as a saying

A husband must be deaf, and his wife blind, to have quietness

UNKNOWN, School House for Women (1541)

Wedding is destiny, And hanging likewise

JOHN HEYWOOD, English Proverbs Pt 1, ch 3 (1546)

The ancient saying is no heresy,
Hanging and wiving go by destiny

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice Act
ii, sc 9, l 82 The proverb is used by many writers, among them BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, ii, 5, 5, CHAPMAN, All Fools, v, 1, FARQUHAR, Recruiting Officer, iii, 2,
SWIFT, Polite Conversation, 1

8 Truly some men there be
That live always in great horror,
And say it goeth by destiny

To hang or wed both hath one hour,

And whether it be, I am well sure,
Hanging is better of the twain,

Sooner done and shorter pain

UNKNOWN, The School-house (c 1542)

10 A woman seldom asks advice before she has bought her wedding clothes

ADDISON, The Spectator No 475

11 Therefore it is fitting for the women to be married at about the age of eighteen, and the men at thirty-seven, or a little before

ARISTOTLE, Politics Bk vii, ch 14, sec 6.

Let still the woman take
An elder than herself, so wears she to him,
So sways she level in her husband's heart
For, boy, how ever we do praise ourselves,
Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn,
Than women's are

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night Act ii, sc 4, l 30

Then let thy love be younger than thyself,
Or thy affection cannot hold the bent
For women are as roses, whose fair flower
Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night Act ii, sc 4, l 37

12 We should marry to please ourselves, not other people

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, The Maid of the Mill Act
iii, sc 4

DIOGENES, when asked the proper time to marry (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes Sec 54)

He was reputed one of the wise men that made answer to the question when a man should marry? 'A young man not yet, an elder man not at all.'

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Marriage and Single Life. Also Apothegms, No. 220.

Honest men marry quickly, but wise men not at all.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 2.

A woman needs a stronger head than her own for counsel—she should marry. (Una mujer no tiene. Valor para el consejo, y la conviene Casarse.)

CALDERON, El Purgatorio de Sans Patria. Act iii, sc. 4.

I have always thought that every woman should marry, and no man.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 30.

Men in single state should tarry, While women, I suggest, should marry.

SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN, Advice on Marriage.

It is a woman's business to get married as soon as possible, and a man's to keep unmarried as long as he can.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act ii.

Marriage is of so much use to a woman, opens out to her so much more of life, and puts her in the way of so much more freedom and usefulness, that, whether she marry well or ill, she can hardly miss some benefit.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

Keep thy eyes wide open before marriage, and half shut afterwards.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

Wholly abstain, or wed. Thy bounteous Lord Allows thee choice of paths; take no by-ways.

Contenance hath his joy; weigh both, and so If rottenness have more, let Heaven go.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 3.

Marry your son when you will, your daughter when you can.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Be careful to marry a woman who lives near to you. (Τὴν δὲ μέλαινα γαμεῖν, ἥ τις σέθεν ἔγγυς οἶκε.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 700.

Who marries does well, who marries not does better.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, ii, 666. (1659)

Marriage is the best state for man in general; and every man is the worse man, in proportion as he is unfit for the married state.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

If you are honestly devoted to one woman,

then bow your head and submit your neck to the yoke. (Si tibi simplicitas uxoria, deditus uni Est animus, summitte caput cervice parata Ferre jugum.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 206.

To rise betimes, and to marry young, are what no man ever repents of doing.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk: Marriage.

Take heed, Camilla, that seeking all the Wood for a straight stick, you choose not at the last a crooked staff.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues.

Ev'n in the happiest choice, where fav'ring heaven

Has equal love and easy fortune giv'n,— Think not, the husband gain'd, that all is done;

The prize of happiness must still be won. And, oft, the careless find it to their cost, The lover in the husband may be lost; The graces might alone his heart allure; They and the virtues, meeting, must secure

GEORGE LYTELTON, Advice to a Lady.

And, to all married men, be this a caution, Which they should duly tender as their life, Neither to doat too much, nor doubt a wife.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Picture. Act v, sc. 3.

Advice to persons about to marry—Don't.

HENRY MAYHEW, in Punch, vol. viii, p. 1. (1845) This, the most famous joke that Punch ever made, is stated by Spielman, in his History of Punch, to have been written by Mayhew, one of the three co-editors under whose direction Punch was first published.

'Tis unlucky to marry in the month of May. (Mense malum Maio nubere.)

OVID, Fasts. Eleg. v, l. 490.

Marry in May, repent alway.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Marry in Lent, live to repent.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

It does not much signify whom one marries, as one is sure to find next morning that it is some one else.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Table-Talk.

Maidens! why should you worry in choosing whom you should marry?

Choose whom you may, you will find you have got somebody else.

JOHN RAY, Distiches. No. 10.

If thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 142.

'Tis my maxim, he's a fool that marries; but he's greater that does not marry a fool.

WYCHERLEY, Country Wife. Act i, sc. 1, l. 502.

Intelligent women always marry fools.

IV—Marriage Like with Like

5 Ah wise was he who first pondered this truth and gave it utterance that to marry in one's own degree is far the best and that neither among the rich nor the high born should marriage be desired by a man who toleth with his hands

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l 887

Oh! wise was he the first who taught

This lesson of observant thought,

That equal fates alone may bless

The bowers of nuptial happiness,

That never where ancestral pride

Inflames or affluence rolls its tide,

Should love's ill omened bonds entwine

The offspring of a humbler line

DOV MARQUIS, Tristram and Isolt

2 O thrice ill starred is he who marries when he is poor! (Ὁ τρίς κακοδαίμων, ὅστις ὅτε πένης γαμεῖ)

MEYANDER, Plocius

3 Let all mankind this certain maxim hold
Marry who will, our sex is to be sold
With empty hands no tassels you can lure,
But fulsome love for gain we can endure,
For gold we love the impotent and old,
And heave, and pant, and kiss, and chng, for
gold

Yet with embraces curses oft I mixt,
Then kiss'd again, and chid and rail'd betwixt
POPE, Wife of Bath. Prologue, l 170.

But honored well are charms to sell
If priests the selling do

NATHANIEL PARKER WILLIS, Unseen Spirits

4 I asked of Echo, 't other day
(Whose words are few and often funny),
What to a novice she could say
Of courtship, love and matrimony
Quoth Echo plainly,—'Matter o'-money'

CICERO, De Officiis Bk II, ch 20, sec 71)

8 My Lord Denbigh is going to marry a fortune, I forget her name, my Lord Gower asked him how long the honey-moon would last? He replied, 'Don't tell me of the honeymoon, it is harvest moon with me'

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to George Montagu,
19 May, 1756

VI—Marriage: December and May

9 What woes must such unequal union bring,
When hoary Winter weds the youthful Spring?

You, like Mezentius in the nuptial bed,
Once more unite the living and the dead

W S GILBERT, Princess Ida Act 1

14 Better be an old man's darling than a young man's warling

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs Pt II, ch 7 (1546)

"Warling" was apparently coined for this proverb, which will be found also in CAM-DEN, Remains, 293, SWIFT, Polite Conversation, I, AINSWORTH, Miser's Daughter, III,
15, and elsewhere

Better be an old man's darling
Than become a young man's slave

VII—Marriage and Repentance

³ Be not hasty to marry, it's better to have one plough going than two cradles, and more profit to have a barn filled than a bed

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam

⁴ You should indeed have longer tarried
By the roadside before you married
W S LANDOR, To One Ill matched

⁵ In hasty recklessness men often marry,
And afterwards repent it all their lives

VIII—Marriage and Love

⁹ The angry tyrant lays his yoke on all,
Yet in his fiercest rage is charming still,
Officious Hymen comes when'er we call,
But haughty Love comes only when he will
APHRA BEHN, Love and Marriage

'Tis Love alone can make our fetters please
APHRA BEHN, Love and Marriage

¹⁰ Love matches are made by people who are content, for a month of honey, to condemn themselves to a life of vinegar

COUNTNESS OF BLESSINGTON, Commonplace Book

Marriage, from love, like vinegar from wine—
A sad, sour, sober beverage—by time
Is sharpen'd from its high celestial flavour
Down to a very homely household savour
BYRON, Don Juan Canto iii, st 5

¹¹ For Wedlock without love, some say,
Is but a lock without a key
It is a kind of rape to marry
One that neglects or cares not for ye
BUTLER, Hudibras Pt ii, canto i, l 321

¹² 'Tis melancholy and a fearful sign
Of human frailty, folly, also crime,
That love and marriage rarely can combine,
Although they both are born in the same clime
BYRON, Don Juan Canto iii, st 5

¹³ People marry through a variety of other reasons, and with varying results, but to marry for love is to invite inevitable tragedy
J B CABELL, The Cream of the Jest, p 235

¹⁴ Can you keep the bee from ranging,
Or the ringdove's neck from changing?
No! nor fettered Love from dying
In the knot there's no untying

CHAUCKER, The Clerkes Tale, l 117

¹⁶ Marriage has, as you say, no natural relation to love. Marriage belongs to society, it is a social contract
S T COLERIDGE, Table Talk, p 450

¹⁷ And all the young ladies said that to be sure a love match was the only thing for happiness, where the parties could anyway afford it

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Castle Rackrent. Continuation of Memoirs

¹⁸ Where there's marriage without love, there will be love without marriage
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734

There can be only one end to marriage without love, and that is love without marriage.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

Where love is there is marriage; where love is not, there is prostitution.

JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, Where Love is.

'Tis highly rational, we can't dispute,
That Love, being naked, should promote a suit.

But doth not oddity to him attach
Whose fire's so oft extinguished by a match?

RICHARD GARNETT, On Love and Marriage.

Marriage the happiest bond of love might be.
If hands were only joined where hearts agree.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, The British Enchanters.
Act v, sc. 1.

Union of hearts, not hands, does marriage make,
And sympathy of mind keeps love awake.

AARON HILL, Albion.

If a man really loves a woman, of course he wouldn't marry her for the world if he were not quite sure that he was the best person she could by any possibility marry.

O W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 10.

It is commonly a weak man who marries for love.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life. 1776.)

It is love that is sacred. . . . Marriage and love have nothing in common. . . . We marry only once . . . but we may love twenty times. . . . Marriage is law, and love is instinct

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, The Love of Long Ago.

Hail wedded love, mysterious law, true source
Of human offspring, sole propriety
In Paradise of all things common else
By thee adulterous lust was driv'n from men
Among the bestial herds to range; by thee,
Founded in reason, loyal, just, and pure,
Relations dear, and all the charities
Of father, son, and brother, first were known.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 750.

Love is often a fruit of marriage. (L'amour est souvent un fruit de mariage.)

MOLIERE, Sganarelle. Sc. 1, l. 54.

The old family maxim, that "if she marries first, love will come after."

ELIZABETH STODOL, The Spectator. No. 605.

Marry first and love will follow.

HARRISON CONLEY, The Belle's Strategem. Act II, sc. 1. Quoted as "the good old maxim."

The woman that marries to love better will be as much mistaken as the woman that marries to live better. Marrying to increase love is like gadding to become rich; you only lose what little stock you had before.

WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act iv.

A good marriage (if any there be) refuses the company and conditions of love; it endeavors to present those of amity.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. III, ch. 5.

I see no marriages fail sooner, or more troubled, than such as are concluded for beauty's sake, and huddled up for amorous desires.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. III, ch. 5.

You cannot pluck roses without fear of thorns, Nor enjoy a fair wife without danger of horns

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734

Where I love I must not marry,

Where I marry, cannot love

THOMAS MOORE, Love and Marriage.

They gied him my hand, tho' my heart was at sea.

ANNE BARNARD, Auld Robin Gray.

The garlands fade, the vows are worn away;
So dies her love, and so my hopes decay.

PORR, Pastorals: Autumn, l. 69.

How oft, when press'd to marriage, have I said,
Curse on all laws but those which Love has made!

Love, free as air, at sight of human ties,
Spreads his light wings, and in a moment flies.
PORR, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 75.

Marry for love and work for siller.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Who marries for love without money, hath merry nights and sorry days.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Love as a relation between men and women was ruined by the desire to make sure of the legitimacy of children.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Marriage and Morals, p. 27.

I will marry her, sir, at your request; but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance. . . . I hope, upon familiarity will grow more contempt: I will marry her; that I am freely dissolved, and dissolutely.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act I, sc. 1, l. 253.

'Tis safest in matrimony to begin with a little aversion.

STERNDEN, The Rivals. Act II, sc. 2.

If they only married when they fell in love, most people would die unwed.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Ch. I.

The Lion is the King of Beasts, but he is scarcely suitable for a domestic pet. In the same way, I suspect love is rather too violent a passion to make a good domestic sentiment.

R. L. STYVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Ch. 1.

1 Venus, a beautiful, good-natured lady, was the goddess of love; Juno, a terrible shrew, the goddess of marriage: and they were always mortal enemies.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

2 The only thing that can hallow marriage is love, and the only genuine marriage is that which is hallowed by love.

LEO TOLSTOY, The Kreutzer Sonata. Ch. 2.

3 All true love is grounded on esteem.

GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, True Love.

Wedded love is founded on esteem.

ELIJAH FENTON, Mariamne.

4 One should always be in love. That is the reason one should never marry.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

IX—Marriage: Made in Heaven

5 True it is that marriages be done in heaven and performed on earth.

WILLIAM PAINTER, Palace of Pleasure. iii, 24. (1567)

Marriages are made in heaven and consummated on earth. (Les mariages se font au ciel, et se consomment sur la terre.)

UNKNOWN, A French proverb.

6 Marriage is destiny, made in heaven.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. (1590)

7 Matches are made in heaven.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 5, subs. 5. (1621) In frequent use thereafter.

8 If marriages Are made in Heaven, they should be happier. THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Isabella; or, The Fatal Marriage. Act iv, sc. 2.

X—Marriage: The Wedding

9 They stood before the altar and supplied The fire themselves in which their fat was fried.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary, p. 23.

10 To have and to hold from this day forward, for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness, and in health, to love and to cherish, till death us do part.

Book of Common Prayer: Solemnisation of Matrimony.

With this ring I thee wed, with my body I thee worship, and with all my worldly goods I thee endow.

Book of Common Prayer: Solemnisation of Matrimony. In America, the second clause is omitted.

She is mine to have and to hold! She has chosen between love and gold!

All the joys life can give

Shall be hers, while I live,

For she's mine to have and to hold.

WILL A. HEHLAN, She Is Mine to Have and to Hold.

To Have and to Hold.

MARY JONESTON. Title of novel.

11 The business of a poor waiting-woman, here upon earth, is to be scraping up something against a rainy day, called the day of marriage.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act I, sc. 2.

12 Happiness untold awaits them

When the parson consecrates them.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act I.

13 So, with decorum all things carried; Miss frown'd, and blush'd, and then was—married.

GOLDSMITH, The Double Transformation, l. 19.

14 For next to that interesting job, The hanging of Jack, or Bill, or Bob, There's nothing so draws a London mob As the noosing of very rich people.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansiegg: Her Courtship.

15 There is something about a wedding-gown prettier than in any other gown in the world.

DOUGLAS JERROLD. (Douglas Jerrold's Wit: A Wedding-Gown.)

For talk six times with the same single lady, And you may get the wedding dresses ready.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 59.

16 The voice that breathed o'er Eden,

That earliest wedding-day,

The primal marriage blessing,

It hath not passed away.

JOHN KEBLE, Holy Matrimony.

17 Nothing is to me more distasteful than that entire complacency and satisfaction which beam in the faces of a new-married couple,—in that of the lady particularly.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: A Bachelor's Complaint.

18 Fair Concord, ever abide by their couch, and to so well matched a pair may Venus ever be propitious. (Candida perpetuo reside, Concordia, lecto, Tamque pari semper sit Venus æqua iungo.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 13.

God the best maker of all marriages
Combine your hearts in one.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 386.

What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 6.

What God hath joined together no man shall ever put asunder: God will take care of that.

BERNARD SHAW, Getting Married.

Under this window in stormy weather
I marry this man and woman together;
Let none but Him who rules the thunder
Put this man and woman asunder.

SWIFT, Marriage Service from His Chamber Window.

Yet 'tis "so nominated in the bond,"
That both are tied till one shall have expired.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto III, st. 7.

To church in the morning, and there saw a wedding in the church, which I have not seen many a day; and the young people so merry one with another! and strange to see what delight we married people have to see these poor fools decoyed into our condition, every man and woman gazing and smiling at them.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 25 Dec., 1665.

To church the parties went,
At once with carnal and devout intent.

POPE, January and May, l. 309.

You've picked an unlucky day for changing your name. (Ne bodie malo cum auspicio nomen commutaveria.)

PLAUTUS, Astutia, l. 373. (Act II, sc. 2.)

Wooded, and married, and a',
Married, and wooded, and a'
And was she nae very weel off
That was wooded, and married, and a'?

ALEXANDER ROSS, Song.

But who ever heard of a marriage deterred
Or even deferred
By any contrivance so very absurd
As scolding the boy, and caging his bird?

J. G. Saxe, Pyramus and Thisbe.

A man may weep upon his wedding day.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII: Prologue, l. 32.

Till holy church incorporate two in one.

I must marry the girl first, and ask his consent afterwards.

R. B. SHEDDEN, St. Patrick's Day. Act I, sc. 1.

Behold, whilst she before the altar stands,
Hearing the holy priest, that to her speaks,

And bleaseth her with his two happy hands,
How the red roses flush up in her cheeks,
And the pure snow with goodly vermeil stain,
Like crimson dyed in grain:
That even th' angels, which continually
About the sacred altar do remain,
Forget their service and about her fly,
Oft peeping in her face, that seems more fair,
The more they on it stare.

SPENSER, Epithalamion, l. 223.

Against their bridal day, which is not long:
Sweet Thames, run softly, till I end my song.

SPENSER, Prothalamion, l. 35.

Now when they sever wedded hands,
Joy trembles in their bosom-strands,
And lovely laughter leaps and falls
Upon their lips in madrigals.

R. L. STEVENSON, Underwoods. No. 4.

What woman, however old, has not the bridal-favours and raiment stowed away, and packed in lavender, in the inmost cupboards of her heart?

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Ch. 33.

Design, or chance makes others wive,
But nature did this match contrive.

II—Marriage: Bride and Bridegroom

The bride bath paced into the hall,
Red as a rose is she.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. I.

Holy and pure are the drops that fall
When the young bride goes from her father's hall.

FELICIA HEMANS, The Bride of the Greek Isle.

Blest is the Bride on whom the sun doth shine.

ROBERT HERRICK, A Nuptial Song.

Blessed is the corpse that the rain falls on;
Blessed is the bride that the sun shines on.

WILLIAM HONE, Table-Book, 667.

Fair weather weddings make fair weather lives.
RICHARD HOVEY, The Marriage of Guenevere.
Act I, sc. 3.

As the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride.
Old Testament: Isaiah, lxii, 5.

As are those dulcet sounds in break of day
That creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear
And summon him to marriage.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
III, sc. 2, l. 51.

A bonny bride is soon buskit.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

1 And you, brides and bridegrooms all,
With measure heap'd in joy to the measures
fall.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 4,
l. 184.

2 A happy bridesmaid makes a happy bride.
TENNYSON, The Bridesmaid.

Bridesmaids may soon be brides; one wedding brings on another.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars.

XII—Marriage: the Honeymoon

3 Is Venus odious to brides? Or do they mock their parents with false tears, which they shed plentifully within their virgin bowers?

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxvi, l. 15.

4 More anxious than ever bride was on her wedding night, when wishes, hopes, fears, and doubts, tumultuously agitate, please, and terrify her.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 June, 1752.

5 'Tis not beauty that witcheth bridegrooms, but nobleness. (Ὁ δὲ κάλλος ἀλλ' ἀρετὰ τέκοντα τοῖς ζευγνέταις.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 208.

O lady, nobility is thine, and thy form is the reflection of thy nature!

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 238.

Solon bade the bride eat a quince the first night of marriage, intimating thereby, it seems, that the bridegroom was to expect his first pleasure from the bride's mouth and conversation.

PLUTARCH, Morals: Conjugal Precepts. Sec. 2.

6 Need we expose to vulgar sight
The raptures of the bridal night? . . .
Let it suffice, that each had charms;
He clasp'd a goddess in his arms;
And, though she felt his usage rough,
Yet in a man 'twas well enough.

GOLDSMITH, The Double Transformation, l. 21.

7 The moon, the moon, so silver and cold,
Her fickle temper has oft been told,
Now shady—now bright and sunny—
But of all the lunar things that change,
The one that shows most fickle and strange,
And takes the most eccentric range,
Is the moon—so called—of honey!

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kumanegg: Her Honeymoon.

8 Other rites
Observing none, but adoration pure
Which God likes best, into their inmost bower

Handed they went; and ead'd the putting off
These troublesome disguises which we wear,

Straight side by side were laid; nor turn'd,
I ween,

Adam from his fair spouse, nor Eve the rites

Mysterious of connubial love refus'd:
Whatever hypocrites austere talk
Of purity and place and innocence,
Defaming as impure what God declares
Pure, and commands to some, leaves free to all.

Our Maker bids increase; who bids abstain
But our destroyer, foe to God and Man?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 736.

She what was honour knew,
And with obsequious majesty approv'd
My pleaded reason. To the nuptial bow'r
I led her blushing like the morn: all Heav'n
And happy constellations on that hour
Shed their selectest influence; the earth
Gave sign of gratulation, and each hill;
Joyous the birds; fresh gales and gentle airs
Whisper'd it to the woods, and from their wings
Flung rose, flung odours from the spicy shrub.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 508.

9 When a couple are newly-married, the first month is honey-moon or smick-smack;
The second is hither and thither: the third is thwack thwack:

The fourth, the Devil take them that brought thee and I together.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 53.

10 To-night,
When I should take possession of the bride.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 5, l. 28.

Surfeting in joys of love, With his new bride.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 252.

11 Put off your shame with your clothes when you go in to your husband, and put it on again when you come out.

THEANO, wife of Pythagoras, advising a woman. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras.
Bk. viii, sec. 43.)

12 All the women we need are inside, said the bridegroom, and closed the door on the bride.

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xv, l. 77.

XIII—Marriage: Man and Wife

13 Thus in the East they are extremely strict,
And wedlock and a padlock mean the
same; . . .

But then their own polygamy's to blame;
Why don't they knead two virtuous souls
for life

Into that moral centaur, man and wife?
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 158. This stanza, which Byron composed in bed, 27
Feb., 1821, was omitted by his publisher

From the first edition of the poem, but replaced in subsequent editions when Byron protested in a fury "that I will not permit any human being to take such liberties with my writings."

† Valentine: The two greatest monsters in the world are a man and a woman.
Sir Sampson Legend: Why my opinion is that those two monsters, joined together, make a yet greater, that's a man and his wife.

CONGRUVE, Love for Love. Act iv, sc. 2.
Composed that monstrous animal, a husband and wife.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xv, ch. 9.

2 The reason that husbands and wives do not understand each other is because they belong to different sexes.

DOROTHY DIX, in her syndicated column.

3 Pure, as the charities above,
Rise the sweet sympathies of love;
And closer chords than those of life
Unite the husband to the wife.

JOHN LOGAN, The Lovers.

4 There is no such cosy combination as man and wife. (Oleiver obtrus obdris totus des drisp te aut yvuh)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 647.

Husband and wife come to look alike at last.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 7.

5 Men are April when they woo, December when they wed; maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 147.

They dream in courtship, but in wedlock wake
POPE, The Wife of Bath, l. 103.

You must not contrast too strongly the hours of courtship with the years of possession.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 17 March, 1845.

6 He is the half part of a blessed man
Left to be finished by such as she;
And she a fair divided excellence,
Whose fulness of perfection lies in him.
O, two such silver currents, when they join,
Do glorify the banks that bound them in!
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 437.

XIV—Marriage: Its Pleasures

7 And such a bliss is there betwixt them two
That, save the joy that lasteth evermo',
There is none like that any creature
Hath seen or shall, while that the world may dure.

CHURCHMAN, Man of Law's Tale, l. 1075.

The joys of marriage are the heaven on earth,
Life's paradise, great princings, the soul's quiet,
Snares of concord, earthly immortality,
Eternity of pleasures.

JOHN FORD, The Broken Heart. Act I, sc. 2, l. 102.

8 Thus hand in hand through life we'll go;
Its checkered paths of joy and woe

With cautious steps we'll tread.

NATHANIEL COTTON, The Fieside. St. 31.

9 As your wedding ring wears,
You'll wear off your cares.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6146.

10 Remember the nightingales which sing only some months in the spring, but commonly are silent when they have hatched their eggs, as if their mirth were turned into care for their young ones. Yet all the molestations of Marriage are abundantly recompensed with other comforts which God bestoweth on them who make a wise choice of a wife.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State.

As the birds do, so do we,
Bill our mate, and choose our tree.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Three Singers to Young Blood.

11 Thrice happy they whom an unbroken bond unites,
And whom no quarrel shall sunder before life's final day.

(Felices ter et amplius,

Quos inrupta tenet copula nec malis

Divulsus querimoniis

Suprema citius solvet amor die.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 13, l. 17.

12 There is, indeed, nothing that so much seduces reason from vigilance, as the thought of passing life with an amiable woman

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (Boswell, Life, i, 351.)

13 Ay, marriage is the life-long miracle,
The self-begetting wonder, daily fresh.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act ii, sc. 9.

14 Not caged, my bird, my shy, sweet bird,
But nested—nested!

HARRINGTON LULHAM, Nested.

15 Let nothing break our bond but Death,
For in the world above

'Tis the breaker Death that soldereth
Our ring of Wedded Love.

GERALD MASSEY, On a Wedding Day. St. 11.

16 Blest pair; and O yet happiest if ye seek
No happier state, and know to know no more.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 774.

1
Grave authors say, and witty poets sing,
That honest wedlock is a glorious thing.
POPE, January and May, l. 21.

The married man may bear his yoke with ease,
Secure at once himself and Heav'n to please;
And pass his inoffensive hours away,
In bliss all night, and innocence all day:
Tho' fortune change, his constant spouse remains,
Augments his joys, or mitigates his pains.
POPE, January and May, l. 37.

2
Purest Love's unwasting treasure,
Constant faith, fair hope, long leisure,
Days of ease, and nights of pleasure,
Sacred Hymen! these are thine.
POPE, Tragedy of Brutus: Chorus.

3
The sacred academy of man's life,
Is holy wedlock in a happy wife.
FRANCIS CHARLES, History of Queen Esther.
Sec. iii, med. 3.

4
One year of joy, another of comfort, and all the rest of content.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63. A marriage wish.

5
But happy they! the happiest of their kind!
Whom gentler stars unite, and in one fate
Their hearts, their fortunes, and their beings blend.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 1113.

6
Thrice happy is that humble pair,
Beneath the level of all care,
Over whose heads those arrows fly
Of sad distrust and jealousy.
EDMUND WALLER, The Marriage of the Dwarfs,
l. 7.

XV—Marriage: Its Pains

7
Though women are angels, yet wedlock's
the devil.
BYRON, To Eliza Quoted.

8
Here's a happy new year! but with reason
I beg you'll permit me to say—
Wish me many returns of the season,
But as few as you please of the day.
BYRON, On My Wedding-Day.

This day, of all our days, has done
The worst for me and you:—
'Tis just six years since we were one,
And five since we were two.
BYRON, To Penelope, 2 Jan., 1821.

9
We wedded men live in sorrow and care.
CHAUCER, The Merchant's Prologue, l. 16.

10
Man and wife,
Coupled together for the sake of strife.
CHARLES CRUSCHKA, The Rosiad, l. 1005.

War is no strife,
To the dark house and the detested wife.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act II,
sc. 3, l. 308.

Body and soul, like peevish man and wife,
United jar, and yet are loath to part.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night II, l. 175.

11
Oh! how many torments lie in the small circle of a wedding-ring!

COLLEY CIBBER, Double Gallant. Act. I, sc. 2.

12
The kindest and the happiest pair
Will find occasion to forbear,
And something every day they live
To pity, and, perhaps, forgive.

COWPER, Mutual Forbearance Necessary to the Happiness of the Married State.

13
If a man stay away from his wife for seven years, the law presumes the separation to have killed him; yet, according to our daily experience, it might well prolong his life.
CHARLES JOHN DARLING, Scintille Juris.

14
The victim o' connubiality.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 20.

Wen you're a married man, Samivel, you'll understand a good many things as you don't understand now; but vether it's worth while goin' through so much to learn so little, as the charity boy said ven he got to the end of the alphabet, is a matter o' taste.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 27.

15
Falsely your Church seven sacraments does frame:

Penance and Matrimony are the same.
RICHARD DUKE, To a Roman Catholic Friend upon Marriage.

16
I don't think matrimony consistent with the liberty of the subject.

FARQUHAR, The Twin Rivals. Act v, sc. 3.

'Tis a kind of bilboes to be married.
FLETCHER, The Wild Goose Chase. Act I, sc. 2.

The married man turns his staff into a stake.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

But married once,
A man is staked or poun'd, and cannot graze
Beyond his own hedge.

MASSINGER, The Fatal Dowry. Act iv, sc. 1.

No man with such a faithful true intelligence at his side would ever stray far from his reservation.

DAN QUIN, Scrapbook, 29 Jan., 1892, p. 32, referring to William Jennings Bryan.

17
When the husband is fire and the wife tow,
the devil easily sets all in a flame.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5594.

18
They that marry ancient people, merely in expectation to bury them, hang themselves,

in hope that one will come and cut the halter.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane States: Of Marriage.

The husband's sullen, dogged, shy,
The wife grows sippant in reply;
He loves command and due restriction,
And she as well likes contradiction.
She never slavishly submits,
She'll have her will, or have her fits;
He his way tugs, she t'other draws;
The man grows jealous, and with cause.

JOHN GAY, Cupid, Hymen, and Plutus.

Yet Wedlock's a very awful thing!
'Tis something like that feat in the ring,
Which requires good nerve to do it—
When one of a "Grand Equestrian Troop"
Makes a jump at a gilded hoop,
Not certain at all
Of what may befall
After his getting through it!
THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansiegg: Her Marriage. St. 19.

It is so far from natural for a man and a woman to live in the state of marriage, that we find all the motives which they have for remaining in that connection, and the restraints which civilized society imposes to prevent separation, are hardly sufficient to keep them together.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1772.)

No man likes to live under the eye of perpetual disapprobation.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1772.)

You may think you had a conscience, but what is a conscience to a wife? . . . To marry is to domesticate the Recording Angel.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. II.

What! Posthumus, are you, who once had your wits, taking to yourself a wife? What snakes are driving you mad? Can you submit to a she-tyrant when there is so much rope to be had, so many dizzy heights of windows standing open?

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 28.

At length he stretches out his foolish head to the conjugal halter. (Stultia maritali jam porrigit ora capistro.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 43.

If you marry, it will be that the lyrist Echion or the flute player Ambrosius may become a father.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 76.

We, led by the impulse of our minds and by blind passion, desire marriage. (Nos, animum impulsi et cæca magnæque cupidinis ducti, Conjugium petimus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 330.

Pleasant the snaffle of Courtship, improving the manners and carriage;
But the colt who is wise will abstain from the terrible thornbit of Marriage.

RUDYARD KIPPLING, Certain Maxims of Hafis.

There are convenient marriages, but no delightful ones. (Il y a de bons mariages, mais il n'y en a point de délicieux.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 113.

Quoted by Bernard Shaw, Candida. Act I.

Who are happy in marriage? Those with so little imagination that they cannot picture a better state, and those so shrewd that they prefer quiet slavery to hopeless rebellion.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. II, p. 245.

Like sculptured effigies they might be seen Upon their marriage-tomb, the sword between;

Each wishing for the sword that severs all.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 1.

The Furies spread that wedding couch. (Eumenides straveræ torum.)

OVIN, Metamorphoses. Bk. vi, l. 431.

Accursed from their birth they be Who seek to find monogamy,
Pursuing it from bed to bed—I think they would be better dead.

DOROTHY PARKER, Monogamy.

Bigamy is having one wife too many. Monogamy in certain instances is the same thing.

UNKNOWN. (London Opinion.)

Some dish more sharply spiced than this Milk-soup men call domestic bliss.

COVENTRY PATMORE, Olympus.

Good Heav'n, no doubt, the nuptial state approves,
Since it chastises still what best it loves.

POPE, January and May, l. 282.

The honest farmer and his wife,
To years declin'd from prime of life,
Had struggled with the marriage noose,
As almost every couple does, . . .
Jointly submitting to endure
That evil, which admits no cure.

MATTHEW PRIOR, The Lady.

"A different cause," says Parson Sly,
"The same effect may give:
Poor Lubin fears that he may die;
His wife, that he may live."

MATTHEW PRIOR, A Reasonable Affliction.

Marriage is worse than cross I win, pile you lose.

THOMAS SHADWELL, Essex Wells.

1 A young man married is a man that's marr'd.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
II, sc. 3, l. 315.

2 O curse of marriage,
That we can call these delicate creatures
ours,
And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love
For others' uses.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act III, sc. 3, l. 268.

3 She's not well married that lives married
long;
But she's best married that dies married young.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act IV, sc. 5,
l. 77.

4 When a man marries, dies, or turns Hindoo,
His best friends hear no more of him.
SHELLEY, Letter to Maria Gisborne.

When a man's friend marries, all is over between them.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, The Log.

5 When a wife or mistress lives as in a jail, the person who confines her lives the life of a jailer.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, On Men and Manners.

6 The best of men and the best of women may sometimes live together all their lives, and
... hold each other lost spirits to the end

R. L. STREVENS, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. I.

Even if we take matrimony at its lowest, even if we regard it as no more than a sort of friendship recognised by the police.

R. L. STREVENS, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. I.

Once you are married, there is nothing left for you, not even suicide, but to be good.

R. L. STREVENS, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. I.

7 As the husband is, the wife is; thou art
mated with a clown,
And the grossness of his nature will have weight to drag thee down.

He will hold thee, when his passion shall have spent its novel force,
Something better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 47.

Alas! for all the pretty women who marry dull
men,
Go into the suburbs and never come out
again.

What do these pretty women suffer when they marry?

They bear a boy who is like Uncle Harry.

ANNA WICKHAM, Meditation at Kew.

8 It is he who has broken the bond of marriage—not I. I only break its bondage.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act II.

9 The real drawback to marriage is that it makes one unselfish. Unselfish people are colorless.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 6.

10 "No married man but is tempest-tossed," they all say, and marry knowing it. ("Ὅτι ἐστὶ γάμος, ἐστὶν ὁ χειμῶνας," λέγουσι πάντες, καὶ γαμήσιον εἰσβότες.)

XVI—Marriage and Celibacy

12 Certainly, the best works and of greatest merit for the public, have proceeded from the unmarried or childless men.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Marriage and Single Life.

13 One was never married, and that's his hell;
another is, and that's his plague.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
I, sec. II, mem. 4, sub. 7.

14 Single gentlemen who would be double.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto XV, st. 48.

15 I would not answer for myself if I could find an affectionate family, with good shooting and first-rate claret.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 30.

16 Space is ample, east and west,
But two cannot go abreast.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, The Over-Soul.

Though we called your friend from his bed this night, he could not speak for you,
For the race is run by one and one and never by two and two.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tomlinson.

Down to Gehenna or up to the Throne,
He travels the fastest who travels alone.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Winners.

Who travels alone, without lover or friend,
But hurries from nothing, to thought at the end.
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, *Reply to Rudyard
Kipling's Poem*.

Swift and sure go the lonely feet,
And the single eye sees cold and true,
And the road that has room and to spare for one
May be sorely narrow for two.

AMELIA JOSEPHINE BURN, To Lovers.

17 Bachelor's Hall! what a queer-lookin' place
it is!

None was from such all the days of my life!
JOHN FLETCHER, Bachelor's Hall.

A bachelor
May thrive by observation on a little,
A single life's no burthen: but to draw
In yokes is chargeable, and will require
A double maintenance.

JOHN FORD, The Pancies Chaste and Noble.
Act 1, sc. 3, l. 82.

We bachelors laugh and show our teeth, but you married men laugh till your hearts ache
GEORGE HERBERT, Jocula Prudentum

Nothing is finer or better than a single life
(Melius nil cælibe vita)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. 1, ep. 1, l. 88

Marriage has many pains, but celibacy has no pleasures.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, xi, 74.

Celibates replace sentiment by habits.

GEORGE MOORE, Impressions. Paraphrasing Balzac.

Marriage may often be a stormy lake, but celibacy is almost always a muddy horsepond

T. L. PRACOCK, Medicourt. Ch. 7

Let sinful bachelors their woes deplore,
Full well they merit all they feel, and more.
POPE, January and May, l. 29.

Thrice-blessed they that master so their blood,

To undergo such maiden pilgrimage;
But earthlier happy is the rose distill'd,
Than that which, withering on the virgin
thorn,

Grows, lives and dies in single blessedness
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act 1, sc. 1, l. 74.

Shall I never see a bachelor of threescore
again?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
1, sc. 1, l. 201.

The world must be peopled. When I said, I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till
I were married.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
1, sc. 3, l. 231.

If you wish the pick of men and women,
take a good bachelor and a good wife.

R. L. STANBROOK, Virginius Patrique. Pt. 1

It is not for nothing that Don Quixote was a bachelor and Alonso Arce was married.

R. L. STANBROOK, Virginius Patrique. Pt. 1

Celibacy, like the fly to the heart of an apple, dwells in a perpetual sweetness, but mis-

shaps, and is confined and dies in singularity.
JENNIE TAYLOR, Sermons: The Marriage Ring.

The happy married man dies in good style at home, surrounded by his weeping wife and children. The old bachelor don't die at all—he sort of rots away, like a pollywog's tail

ANTHONY WALKER, The Draft in Baldinsville.

Nowadays all the married men live like bachelors, and all the bachelors like married men.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 15.
Married men are viler than bachelors.

A. W. PICKENS, Preserving Mr. Panmure. Act 1

I never married, and I wish my father never had. (Μὴ γάμος αὐτῷ δὲ πατρί)

UNKNOWN, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 309)

I'm Smith of Stoke, aged sixty-odd,

I've lived without a dame

From yOUTH-time on; and would to God

My dad had done the same

THOMAS HARDY, Epitaph on a Pessimist.

XVII—Marriage: The In and the Out

Wedlock, indeed, hath oft compared been
To public feasts, where meet a public rout,
Where they that are without would fain go
in.

And they that are within would fain go out

SIR JOHN DAVIES, The Married State. (1612)

Wedlock, as old men note, hath likened been Unto a public crowd or common rout;
Where those that are without would fain get in,
And those that are within would fain get out.
Grief oft treads upon the heels of pleasure,
Marry'd in haste, we oft repent at leisure;
Some by experience find these words misplaced,
Marry'd at leisure, they repent in haste.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

Oh, could he have my share of din,

And I his quiet!—past a doubt

Twould still be one man bored within,

And just another bored without.

J. R. LOWELL, Without and Within.

It happens as with cages: the birds without despair to get in, and those within despair of getting out.

BRONTË, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

Is not marriage an open question, when it is alleged, from the beginning of the world, that such as are in the institution wish to get out, and such as are out wish to get in.

ROXBOROUGH, Representative Men: Mordaunt.

'Tis just like a summer bird cage in 'a garden;
the birds that are without despair to get in, and the birds that are within despair, and are in a consumption, for fear they shall never get out.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act 1, sc. 2.

1 Marriage is like a beleaguered fortress; those who are without want to get in, and those within want to get out. (Le mariage est comme une forteresse assiégée; ceux qui sont dehors veulent y entrer et ceux qui sont dedans en sortir.)

QUITTARD, Études sur Proverbes Français, p. 102.

I'd rather be outside a-looking in than on the inside a-looking out.

TED SKYDER. Title and refrain of popular song. (1906)

2 Marriage is a desperate thing: the frogs in Æsop were extreme wise; they had a great mind to some water, but they would not leap into the well, because they could not get out again.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Marriage.

3 People who share a cell in the Bastille, or are thrown together on an uninhabited isle, if they do not immediately fall to fisticuffs, will find some possible ground of compromise.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

4 The reason why so few marriages are happy is because young ladies spend their time in making nets, not in making cages.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

XVIII—Marriage: Second Marriage

5 Women who have been happy in a first marriage, are the most apt to venture upon a second.

ANDERSON, The Drummer. Act ii, sc. 1.

6 When widows exclaim loudly against second marriages, I would always lay a wager that the man, if not the wedding-day, is absolutely fixed on.

FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. vi, ch. 8.

7 For I'm not so old, and I'm not so plain, And I'm quite prepared to marry again.

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act i.

8 He loves his bonds, who, when the first are broke,

Submits his neck unto a second yoke.

ROBERT HEERICK, Hesperides. No. 42.

9 Alas! another instance of the triumph of hope over experience.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to the second marriage of a friend who had been unhappy with his first wife. (BOSWELL, Life, 1770, quoting from the Collection of Dr. William Maxwell.)

10 Christ saw a wedding once, the Scripture says,

And saw but one, 'twas thought, in all his days;

Whence some infer, whose conscience is too nice,

No pious Christian ought to marry twice.

Pope, The Wife of Bath, l. 9.

11 Disagreeable suspicions are usually the fruits of a second marriage. (Les soupçons importuns Sont d'un second hymen les fruits les plus communs.)

RACINE, Phèdre. Act II, sc. 5.

12 In second husband let me be accurst! None wed the second but who killed the first.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act III, sc. 2, l. 189.

The instances that second marriage move Are base respects of thrift, but none of love: A second time I kill my husband dead When second husband kisses me in bed.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act III, sc. 2, l. 192.

13 I think you are happy in this second match, For it excels your first.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act III, sc. 5, l. 224.

14 Alas, she married another. They frequently do. I hope she is happy—because I am.

ARTEMUS WARD, Lecture.

15 When a man marries again it is because he adored his first wife.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 15.

MARTYR AND MARTYRDOM

16 A tear is an intellectual thing, And a sigh is the sword of an Angel King, And the bitter groan of the martyr's woe Is an arrow from the Almighty's bow.

WILLIAM BLAKE, The Grey Monk.

17 Commend me to the king, and tell him he is constant in his course of advancing me; from a private gentlewoman he made me a marquise, and from a marquise a queen; and now, as he had left no higher degree of earthly honour, he hath made me a martyr.

ANNE BOLEYN, on the way to execution. (FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms, No. 9.)

18 The noble army of martyrs.

Book of Common Prayer: Morning Prayer.

19 Plaintive martyrs, worthy of the name.

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night.

20 To know how to say what others only know How to think is what makes men poets or sages; and to dare to say what others only dare to think makes men martyrs or reformers—or both.

ELIZABETH RUNDLE CHARLES, Chronicle of the Schönberg-Cotta Family.

1 They liv'd unknown

 he was dying, 17 July, 1882.

3 For all have not the gift of martyrdom.
 DRYDEN, Hind and the Panther. Pt. ii, l. 59.

4 The martyr cannot be dishonored.
 EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

5 Pain is superficial and therefore fear is. The torments of martyrdom are probably most keenly felt by the bystanders.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage.

6 A little bread and wine in a dungeon sufficed for the liturgy of the martyrs.

P. G. HAMERTON, Modern Frenchmen: Henri Perreye.

7 For one the dew, the hare-bell and the song;
 For one the mire, the butry and the thong.
 AMORY HAKE, Life.

8 Who falls for love of God, shall rise a star.
 BEN JONSON, An Epistle to a Friend.

9 The dungeon oped its hungry door
 To give the truth one martyr more.
 J. R. LOWELL, On the Death of C. T. Torrey.

10 I look on martyrs as mistakes,
 But still they burned for it at stakes.
 JOHN MASEFIELD, Everlasting Mercy, l. 933.

11 Martyrs! who left for our reaping,
 Truths you have sown in your blood!
 THOMAS MOORE, Where Is Your Dwelling?

12 It is the cause, not the death, that makes the martyr.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.)

13 Every step of progress the world has made has been from scaffold to scaffold, and from stake to stake.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Woman's Rights.

14 Who perisheth in needless danger is the devil's martyr.

JOHN RAY, English Preachers.

15 From many a garnished niche around,

Stern saints and tortured martyrs frowned.
 SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto vi,
 st. 79.

16 Of one, whose naked soul stood clad in love,
 Like a pale martyr in his shirt of fire.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sc. ii, l. 225.

Pycroft (Ways and Means of Men of Letters) reports Smith's printer as saying, "We utterly ruined one poet through a ridiculous misprint of 'shirt' for 'sheet,'" but there is no foundation for the story, as the line is not a misprint.

17 And martyrs, when the joyful crown is given,

Forget the pain by which they purchased
 heaven

GEORGE STEPHENY, To King James II.

Martyrs by the pang without the palm.
 E. B. BROWNING.

18 The more ye mow us down, the more quickly we grow; the blood of Christians is fresh seed. (Plures efficimur quoties metimur a vobis; semen est sanguis Christianorum.)

TERTULLIAN, Apologeticus. Ch. 50 Generally quoted, "The blood of martyrs is the seed of the Church."

The blood of martyrs is the seed of Christians
 (Sanguis martyrum semen Christianorum.)

BEYERLINCK, Magnus Theatrum Vitæ Humanorum. (1665)

The seed of the Church, I mean the blood of primitive Martyrs.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History of Britain.
 Pt. iv, bk. 1. (1665)

19 It is martyrs who create faith rather than faith that creates martyrs.

MICHEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies,
 p. 103.

There have been quite as many martyrs for bad causes as for good ones.

H. W. VAN LOON, America.

20 I am very fond of truth, but not at all of martyrdom.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to D'Alembert, Feb., 1776.

21 These Christs that die upon the barricades, God knows it I am with them, in some things.

OSCAR WILDE, Sonnet to Liberty.

22 The world would use us just as it did the

I—Medicine: Definitions

17 Medicine is a science which hath been, as we have said, more professed than laboured, and yet more laboured than advanced: the labour having been, in my judgment, rather in circle than in progression.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

1 Surely every medicine is an innovation; and he that will not apply new remedies, must expect new evils.

BACON, Essays: Of Innovations.

2 Then comes the question, how do drugs, hygiene and animal magnetism heal? It may be affirmed that they do not heal, but only relieve suffering temporarily, exchanging one disease for another.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 483.

3 Dr. Bigelow's formula was, that fevers are self-limiting; afterwards that all disease is so; therefore no use in treatment. Dr. Holmes said, No use in drugs. Dr. Samuel Jackson said, Rest, absolute rest, is the panacea.

Take a little rum

The less you take the better,

Pour it in the lakes

Of Wener or of Wetter.

Dip a spoonful out

And mind you don't get groggy,

Pour it in the lake

Of Winnipissiegie.

Stir the mixture well

Lest it prove inferior,

Then put half a drop

Into Lake Superior.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 434.

2 Will toys amuse, when med'cines cannot cure?
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 67.

III—Medicine: Worse Than the Disease

3 I find the medicine worse than the malady.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act iii, sc. 2.

4 The cure is not worth the pain. (Τὸ ἐκασθῆναι τῆς ἀλγυδύος οὐκ ἀξίον.)
GAULUS MARTUS, after having had a varicose vein cut from his leg. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Gauius Martius. Ch. 6, sec. 3.)

The cure is worse than the disease.
PHILIP MASSINGER, The Bondman. Act i, sc. 1.

5 There are some remedies worse than the disease. (Graviora quædam sunt remedia periculis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No 301.
The remedy is worse than the disease
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seditions; JUVENAL, Satires, xvi, 31; LE SAGE, Gil Blas, bk. xii, ch. 8, and many others.

6 His remedies were more grievous than the offence. (Gravior remediis quam delicta erant.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 28.

7 The medicine increases the disease. (Ægrestique medendo.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 46.

IV—Medicine: Desperate Remedies

8 No remedies cause so much pain as those which are efficacious. (Nulla remedia tam faciunt dolorem quam que sunt salutaria.)
BACON, Letter to Lord Henry Howard. Quoted.

9 'Tis not amiss, ere ye're giv'n o'er,
To try one desperate medicine more;
For where your case can be no worse,
The desperate'st is the wisest course.
BUTLER, Epistle of Hudibras to Sidrophel, l. 5.

And fit it therefore suits
The mood of one of my high temperature
To pause inactive while await me means

Of desperate cure for these so desperate ills.

THOMAS HAMDY, The Dynasts. Act iv, sc. 3.

10 Extreme remedies are very appropriate for extreme diseases.

HIPPOCRATES, Adagis.

11 When desperate ills demand a speedy cure,
Distrust is cowardice, and prudence folly.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 87.

12 For the strongest maladies the strongest remedies. (Aux plus fortes maladies les plus forts remèdes.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

13 No one tries desperate remedies at first. (Extrema primo nemo tentavit loco.)
SENeca, Agamemnon, l. 153.

14 Diseases desperate grown
By desperate appliance are relieved,
Or not at all.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 9. (1602)

A desperate disease must have a desperate cure.

THOMAS SHADWELL, Humourists, iv. (1670)

Strong disease requires a strong medicine.

TAVERNER, Proverbs. Fo. iv. (1539)

V—Medicine: Herbs as Medicine

15 The Lord hath created medicines out of the earth; and he that is wise will not abhor them.

APROCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 4.

16 And in requital ope his leathern scrip,
And show me simples of a thousand names,
Telling their strange and vigorous faculties.

MILTON, Comus, l. 626.

17 No cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue
Under the moon, can save the thing from death.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 144.

In such a night
Medea gather'd the enchanted herbs
That did renew old Æson.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 12.

18 O, mickle is the powerful grace that lies
In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 15.

19 He preferred to know the power of herbs and their value for curing purposes, and, heedless of glory, to exercise that quiet art. (Scire potestates herbarum usumque medendi Maluit et mutas agitare inglorius artis.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 394.

Learn from the beasts the physic of the field.
Poet, Essay on Man. Epist. iii, l. 174.

1 Why should a man die who has sage in his garden? (Cur moriatur homo, cui salvia crescit in horto?)

UNKNOWN, Regimen Sanitatis Salernitanum, l. 177.

Of all the garden herbs none is of greater virtue than sage.

THOMAS COGAN, The Haven of Health. (1596)

MEDIOCRITY

2 Mediocrity is safest. (In medio spatio mediocritas firma locantur.)

NICHOLAS BACON. Quoted by Chief-Justice Sir John Popham in sentencing Raleigh.

3 Commonplace and cringing, one gets everywhere. (Médiocre et rampant, et l'on arrive à tout.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Barbier de Séville. Act III, sc. 7.

4 This miserable fate
 Suffer the wretched souls of those who lived
 Without or praise or blame.

(Questo misero modo
 Tengono l'anime triste di coloro,
 Che visser senza infamia e senza lodo.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto iii, l. 34. (Cary, tr.)

They are being goaded along by swarms of wasps and hornets.

5 The secret of ugliness consists not in irregularity, but in being uninteresting.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty.

6 Oh, mediocrity,
 Thou priceless jewel, only mean men have,
 But cannot value.

JOHN FLETCHER, Queen of Corinth. Act III, sc. 1.

7 The universal subjugator, the commonplace.
 (Was uns alle bändigt, das Gemeine.)

GOETHE, Taschenbuch für Damen auf das Jahr 1806.

8 Not below mediocrity, nor above it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Phillips.

9 Mediocre minds generally condemn everything which passes their understanding. (Les esprits médiocres condamnent d'ordinaire tout ce qui passe leur portée.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 375.

To mediocrity genius is unforgivable.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

10 Mediocrity is praised in all cases. (Médiocrité est en tous cas louée.)

LA Fontaine, Works. Bk. III, ch. 13.

Wish then for mediocrity. (Souhaitez donc médiocrité.)

BAILEY, Works. Bk. IV, Prologue.

11 Who shines in the second rank is eclipsed in the first. (Qui brille au second rang, s'éclipse au premier.)

VOLTAIRE, La Henriade. Canto I, l. 31.

Who, like the hindmost chariot wheels, art curst,
 Still to be near, but ne'er to reach the first.

Put meekness in thy mind.
 SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act II, sc. 2, l. 107.

MEETING

19 If e'er we meet hereafter, we shall meet
 In happier climes, and on a safer shore.
 ADDISON, Cato. Act IV, sc. 4.

20 We met—'twas in a crowd—and I thought he would shun me.
 T. H. BATY, Song: We Met.

21 We loved, sir—used to meet:
 How sad and bad and mad it was—
 But then, how it was sweet!
 ROBERT BROWNING, Confessions. St. 9.

22 It lightens, it brightens
 The tenebrous scene,
 To meet with, and greet with
 My Davie or my Jean!
 ROBERT BURNS, Epistle to Davie.

1 For alday meeteth man at unset stevene
(i. e., unexpectedly).

4 The joy of meeting not unmixed with pain.
LONGFELLOW, Moriuri Salutamus, l. 113.

5 In whatever place you meet me, Postumus, you cry out immediately, and your first words are, "How do you do?" You say this, even if you meet me ten times in one single hour:
you, Postumus, have nothing, I suppose, to do.

MARTIAL, Epigrams Bk. II, ep. 67.

6 In life there are meetings which seem Like a fate.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. II, canto III, sec. 8.

7 And we meet, with champagne and a chicken,
at last.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, The Lover. Quoted
by Scott, St. Roman's Well. Ch. 7.

8 Some day, some day of days, threading the street
With idle, heedless pace,
Unlooking for such grace,
I shall behold your face!
Some day, some day of days, thus may we meet.

NORA FERRY, Some Day of Days.

9 The joys of meeting pay the pangs of absence;

Else who could bear it?

NICHOLAS ROWE, Tamerlane. Act II, sc. 1.

And doth not a meeting like this make amends
For all the long years I've been wand'ring away?

THOMAS MOORE, And Doth Not a Meeting?

10 The meeting of these champions proud
Seemed like the bursting thunder-cloud.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto III,
st. 5.

11
1st Witch: When shall we three meet again,

Along the flowery hedge I stray,

To meet mine ain dear somebody.

ROBERT TANNABILL, Love's Fear.
Like torrents from a mountain source
We rush'd into each other's arms.

TENNYSON, The Letters St. 5.

13 Although I enter not,
Yet round about the spot

Oftimes I hover,

And at the sacred gate
With longing eyes I wait,
Expectant of her.

THACKERAY, At the Church Gate. (Pendennis.
Ch. 31.)

14 Meet me by moonlight alone,
And then I will tell you a tale

Must be told by the moonlight alone,
In the grove at the end of the vale!

J. AUGUSTINE WADE, Meet Me by Moonlight.

II—Meeting and Parting

15 Like a plank of driftwood
Tossed on the watery main,

Another plank encountered,
Meets, touches, parts again;
So tossed, and drifting ever,

On life's unresting sea,

Men meet, and greet, and sever,
Parting eternally.

EDWIN ARNOLD, Book of Good Counsel. A free translation from the Sanskrit of the Hitopa-desa. See Fortnightly Review, July, 1898, for literal translation by Max Müller.

As two floating planks meet and part on the sea,
O friend! so I met and then drifted from thee.

WILLIAM R. ALGER, Poetry of the Orient: The Brief Chance Encounter.

16 Like driftwood spars which meet and pass
Upon the boundless ocean-plain,
So on the sea of life, alas!

Man meets man, meets, and leaves again.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Terrace at Berne, l. 45.

Two lives that once part, are as ships that divide
When, moment on moment, there rushes between
The one and the other, a sea;—

Ah, never can fall from the days that have been
A gleam on the years that shall be!

BULWER-LYTTON, A Lament, l. 10.

1 We meet, we on the bridge of Time to change one greeting and to part?
SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. i, st. 11

2 Weep not, she says, at Nature's transient pain,
Congenial spirits part to meet again!
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 405.

3 We only part to meet again.
JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell.

4 As vessels starting from ports thousands of miles apart pass close to each other in the naked breadth of the ocean, nay, sometimes even touch in the dark.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 3.

5 Ships that pass in the night, and speak each other in passing,

Only a signal shown and a distant voice in the darkness;

So on the ocean of life, we pass and speak one
another,

Only a look and a voice, then darkness again and a silence

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: The Theologian's Tale: Elizabeth. Pt. iv. The first phrase was used by Beatrice Harradan as the title of a novel.

6 We twain have met like the ships upon the sea,
Who hold an hour's converse, so short, so sweet;
One little hour! and then, away they speed
On lonely paths, through mist, and cloud, and foam,

To meet no more.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sc. 4

Alas, by what rude fate

Our lives, like ships at sea, an instant meet,
Then part forever on their courses fleet!

E. C. STEEDMAN, The Blameless Prince. St. 51.

7 Sing, minstrel, sing us now a tender song
Of meeting and parting, with the moon in it.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Ulysses. Act i, sc. 1.

8 Our parting was all sob and sigh,
Our meeting was all mirth and laughter.

W. M. FRAZEE, The Belle of the Ball.

9 Say good-bye er howdy-do—
What's the odds betwixt the two?

Comin'—goin'—every day—
Best friends first to go away—

Grasp of hands you'd ruther hold
Than their weight in solid gold,

Slips their grip while greetin' you,—
Say good-bye er howdy-do?

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, *Good-Bye er
Good-Bye*.

10 Their meetings made December June.
Their every parting was to die.

EMERSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xviii.

⁷ Experience teaches that a good memory is generally joined to a weak judgment.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 9.

A great memory does not make a philosopher, any more than a dictionary can be called a grammar.

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, Knowledge in Relation to Culture.

⁸ Many a man fails to become a thinker for the sole reason that his memory is too good.

NIETZSCHE, Maxims.

⁹ The jar will long retain the fragrance with which it was steeped when new (Quo semel est imbuta recens, servabit odorem Testa diu)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 69.

Long, long be my heart with such memories fill'd!

Like the vase in which roses have once been distill'd.

You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will.

But the scent of the roses will hang round it still.

THOMAS MOORE, Farewell! But Whenever.

Rose-leaves, when the rose is dead,
Are heaped for the beloved's bed;
And so thy thoughts, when thou art gone,
Love itself shall slumber on.

SHKLEY, To —: Music When Soft Voices.

¹⁰ Everyone complains of his lack of memory,

but nobody of his want of judgment. (Tout le monde se plaint de sa mémoire, et personne ne se plaint de son jugement.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULT, Maxims. No. 89.

¹¹ Remarkable memory, yours! (Memor es probe!)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 343. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

¹² If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxvii, 6.

¹³ Though yet of Hamlet . . . The memory be green.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 2.

Lord, keep my Memory Green.

DICKENS, The Haunted Man. Ch. 3.

And the tear that we shed, though in secret it rolls,

Shall long keep his memory green in our souls.

THOMAS MOORE, Oh, Breathe Not His Name.

¹⁴ 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 85.

¹⁵ Purpose is but the slave to memory.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 197.

¹⁶ Illiterate him, I say, quite from your memory.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act i, sc. 2.

¹⁷ Left behind as a memory for us. (Nobis meminisse relictum.)

STATIUS, Silvæ. Bk. ii, l. 55.

Nothing now is left But a majestic memory.

LONGFELLOW, Three Friends of Mine, l. 10.

III—Memory: Its Sweetness

¹⁸ The safe relation of past trouble possesses its delight. (Habet enim præteriti doloris securæ recordatio delectionem.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. v, epis. 12, sec. 5.

How sweet to remember the trouble that is past.

EURIPIDES, (PLUTARCH, Morals.)

That which is bitter to endure may be sweet to remember.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4385.

Sorrows remembered sweeten present joy.

ROBERT POLLOX, Course of Time. Bk. i, l. 454.

Things that were hard to bear are sweet to remember. (Quæ fuit durum pati, Meminisse dulce est.)

SENECA, Hercules Furiosus, l. 656.

Perchance some day the memory of this sorrow will even bring delight.

(FORNAT ET HEC OLIM MEMINISSE JUVABIT.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 703.

¹⁹ What peaceful hours I once enjoy'd!

How sweet their memory still!

WILLIAM COWPER, Walking with God.

When Time, who steals our years away

Shall steal our pleasures, too,
The memory of the past will stay,
And half our joys renew.
THOMAS MOORE, Song.

Oh! in the still night,
Ere Slumber's chain has bound me,
Fond Memory brings the light
Of other days around me.
THOMAS MOORE, The Light of Other Days.

The light of other days is faded,
And all their glories past.
ALFRED BURN, The Bohemian Girl: Song.

Oh! the good times when we were so unhappy.
(Oh! le bon temps où étions si malheureux.)

DUMAS, Le Chevalier d'Hormental. Bk. ii, p. 318.

Oh! that was the good time; I was very unhappy.
(Oh! c'était le bon temps; j'étais bien malheureuse.)

SOPHIE ARNOULD, Remark, to Rulhière.

One day, a famous actress was telling me of the rages of her first lover, and, half-dreaming, halflaughing, she added this charming word. Oh, that was the good time—I was very unhappy.
(Un jour, une actrice fameuse

Me conta les fureurs de son premier amant;
Mottée rêvant, mottée rieuse,

Elle ajouta ce mot charmant:
Oh! c'était le bon temps, j'étais bien malheureuse.)

CLAUDE RULHIÈRE, Épître à Monsieur de Cho—.

So may it be: that so dead Yesterday,
No sad-eyed ghost but generous and gay,
May serve you memories like almighty wine,
When you are old!

W. E. HENLEY, When You Are Old.

This memory brightens o'er the past,
As when the sun, concealed
Behind some cloud that near us hangs,
Shines on a distant field.

LONGFELLOW, A Gleam of Sunshine. St. 14.

Only stay quiet while my mind remembers
The beauty of fire from the beauty of embers.

JOHN MASKFIELD, On Growing Old.

A thousand fantasies
Begin to throng into my memory,
MILTON, Comus, l. 205.

And memories vague of half-forgotten things,
Not true nor false, but sweet to think upon.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise:
March, l. 63.

Then, when the world is born again
And the sweet past before thee lies,

Shall thy heart think of coming pain,
Or vex itself with memories?

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. xiv, l. 213.

For it is a pleasure, too, to remember. (Nam-que est meminisse voluptas.)
OVID, Heroides. Epist. xviii, l. 55.

Sweet Memory, wafted by thy gentle gale
Oft up the stream of Time I turn my sail.
ROGERS, The Pleasures of Memory. Pt. ii, l. 1.

Lull'd in the countless chambers of the brain,
Our thoughts are link'd by many a hidden chain.
ROGERS, The Pleasures of Memory. Pt. i, l. 171.

Thou fill'st from the winged chalice of the soul
Thy lamp, O Memory, fire-winged to its goal.

D. G. ROSSETTI, Mnemosyne.

O Memory! thou soul of joy and pain!
RICHARD SAVAGE, The Bastard, l. 57.

Praising what is lost
Makes the remembrance dear.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
v, sc. 3, l. 19.

Mankind are always happier for having been happy; so that, if you make them happy now, you make them happy twenty years hence by the memory of it.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy:
Lecture 22, On Benevolent Affections

A land of promise, a land of memory,
A land of promise flowing with the milk
And honey of delicious memories!
TENNYSON, The Lover's Tale, l. 326.

Out of the cradle endlessly rocking,
Out of the mocking-bird's throat, the musical shuttle, . . .

A reminiscence sing.
WALT WHITMAN, Out of the Cradle.

And, when the stream
Which overflowed the soul was passed away,
A consciousness remained that it had left,
Deposited upon the silent shore
Of memory, images and precious thoughts,
That shall not die, and cannot be destroyed.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion Bk. vii, l. 25.

If there be a joy that slights the claim
Of grateful memory, let that joy depart!
WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. ii,
No. 5.

For oft, when on my couch I lie
In vacant or in pensive mood,
They flash upon that inward eye
Which is the bliss of solitude;

And then my heart with pleasure fills,
And dances with the daffodils.

WORDSWORTH, I Wandered Lonely as a Cloud.

Wordsworth stated that this stanza was suggested by his wife.

The thought of our past years in me doth breed
Perpetual benediction.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality. St. 9.

Where'er I go,
Thy genuine image, Yarrow!
Will dwell with me,—to heighten joy,
And cheer my mind in sorrow.

WORDSWORTH, Yarrow Visted, l. 85.

IV—Memory: Its Bitterness

1
For of fortune's sharp adversity
The worst kind of infortune is this,
A man to have been in prosperity,
And it remember, when it passed is.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 1625.

Of joys departed,
Not to return, how painful the remembrance!
ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 109.

No traces left of all the busy scene,
But that remembrance says: The things have been

SAMUEL BOYSE, The Deity.

2
There is no greater sorrow than to recall, in misery, the time when we were happy. (Nes-sun maggior dolore Che ricordarsi del tempo felice Nella miseria.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 121.

There is no worse sorrow than remembering happiness in the day of sorrow (Il n'est pire douleur Qu'un souvenir heureux dans le jour de malheur.)

ALFRED DE MUSSET, La Saule.

But woe to him, who left to moan,
Reviews the hours of brightness gone.

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia in Tauris, l. 1121. (An-stice, tr.)

Memory of happiness makes misery woeful.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4650.

But were there ever any
Writ'ed not at passed joy?

KEATS, Stanzas: In a Dream-Nighted December.

Nor nothing more may heart's disavance
Than of old joy new remembrance.

LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. i, l. 650. (c. 1440)

3
O Memory! thou fond deceiver!
Still importunate and vain;
To former joys recurring ever,
And turning all the past to pain.

GOLDSMITH, The Captivity. Act i, sc. 1.

Remembrance wakes with all her busy train,
Swells at my breast, and tenses the pain to pain.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 81.

4
The bitter memory
Of what he was, what is, and what must be.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 24.

5
O dear, dear Jeanie Morrison,
The thoughts o' bygone years

Still fling their shadows o'er my path,
And blind my een wi' tears.

WILLIAM MOTTERSWELL, Jeanie Morrison.

6
When time has assuaged the wounds of the mind, he who unseasonably reminds us of them, opens them afresh.

(At cum longa dies sedavit vulnera mentis, Intempestive qui movet illa, novat.)

OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 11,
l. 19.

7
Yet hath my night of life some memory,
My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 314.

8
Remember thee!
Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat

In this distracted globe Remember thee!
Yea, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fond records.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 95.

I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 222.

It presses to my memory,
Like damned, guilty deeds to sinners' minds.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 2,
l. 110.

9
Here did she fall a tear; here in this place
I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace:
Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be
seen,

In the remembrance of a weeping queen.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 104.

There's rosemary, that's for remembrance.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 175.

10
When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear time's waste.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxx.

How sharp the point of this remembrance is!
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 1, l. 138.

Let us not burden our remembrance with
A heaviness that's gone.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 1, l. 199.

11
This is truth the poet sings:
That a sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things.
TENNYSON, Locksley Hall. St. 38.

The saddest lot of all is to know the good, and yet, perforce, to be debarr'd therefrom.
PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. iv, l. 510. Said by Churton Collins (Illustrations of Tennyson, p. 62) to have inspired Tennyson's line.

So joys, remembered without wish or will,
Sharpen the keenest edge of present ill.
WORDSWORTH, Sonnets: Captivity.

V—Memory: Tender Memories

Oh, I have roamed o'er many lands,
And many friends I've met;
Not one fair scene or kindly smile
Can this fond heart forget.
T. H. BAYLY, Song: Oh, Steer My Bark.

Ah, we fondly cherish
Faded things
That had better perish.
Memory clings
To each leaf it saves.
J. H. BOWER, Gather Leaves and Grasses.

'Tis but a little faded flower,
But oh, how fondly dear!
'T will bring me back one golden hour,
Through many a weary year.
ELLEN CLEMENTINE HOWARTH, 'Tis But a Little Faded Flower.

Where is the heart that doth not keep,
Within its inmost core,
Some fond remembrance hidden deep,
Of days that are no more?
ELLEN CLEMENTINE HOWARTH, 'Tis But a Little Faded Flower.

Who hath not saved some trifling thing
More prized than jewels rare,
A faded flower, a broken ring,
A tress of golden hair.
ELLEN CLEMENTINE HOWARTH, 'Tis But a Little Faded Flower.

Yet for old sake's sake she is still, dear,
The prettiest doll in the world.
CHARLES KINGSLEY, My Little Doll.

When other lips and other hearts
Their tales of love shall tell,
In language whose excess imparts
The power they feel so well,
There may, perhaps, in such a scene,
Some recollection be
Of days that have as happy been,
And you'll remember me.
ALFRED BURN, Then You'll Remember Me.
(The Bohemian Girl. Act III.)

Oh! scenes in strong remembrance set!
Scenes never, never to return!

ROBERT BURNS, The Lament. St. 10.
Still o'er these scenes my mem'ry wakes,
And fondly broods with milder care;
There but th' impression stronger makes,
As streams their channels deeper wear.
ROBERT BURNS, To Mary in Heaven.

While Memory watches o'er the sad review
Of joys that faded like the morning dew.
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. II, l. 45.

How cruelly sweet are the echoes that start
When memory plays an old tune on the heart!

ELIZA COOK, Old Dobbin. St. 16.

O Genevieve, sweet Genevieve,
The days may come, the days may go,
But still the hands of mem'ry weave
The blissful dreams of long ago.
GEORGE COOPER, Sweet Genevieve. A popular song the music of which was written about 1877 by Henry Tucker.

Don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt,—
Sweet Alice, whose hair was so brown,
Who wept with delight when you gave her a smile,
And trembled with fear at your frown?
THOMAS DUNN ENGLISH, Ben Bolt. First published in The New Mirror (N. Y.), 2 Sept., 1843.

A place in thy memory, Dearest!
Is all that I claim:
To pause and look back when thou hearest
The sound of my name.
GERALD GRIFFIN, A Place in Thy Memory.

Only a dream, and yet I hear you singing, Singing in the shadows, while gently falls
the dew.
Roses may fade, but each returning twilight
Brings the fragrant memory of you.
BERNARD HAMBLIN, The Memory of You.

I recollect a nurse called Ann,
Who carried me about the grass,
And one fine day a fine young man
Came up and kissed the pretty lass.
She did not make the least objection.
Thinks I, "Aha,
When I can talk I'll tell Mama,"
And that's my earliest recollection.
F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, A Terrible Infant.

The leaves of memory seemed to make
A mournful rustling in the dark.
LONGFELLOW, The Fire of Driftwood.
There comes to me out of the Past
A voice, whose tones are sweet and wild,
Singing a song almost divine,
And with a tear in every line.
LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. III, Interlude.

To live with them is far less sweet
Than to remember thee.
THOMAS MOORE, I Saw Thy Form.
So turn our hearts, as on we rove,
To those we've left behind us!
THOMAS MOORE, The Journey Onwards.

All to myself I think of you,
Think of the things we used to do,

Think of the things we used to say,
Think of each happy bygone day.
Sometimes I sigh, and sometimes I smile,
But I keep each olden, golden while
All to myself

WILBUR D. NESBIT, All to Myself.

1 My home, the city, and the image of well-known places pass before my eyes. (Ante oculos errant domus, urbsque et forma locorum)

2 OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 57.

I remember, I remember
The house where I was born,
The little window where the sun
Came peeping in at morn.

3 THOMAS HOOD, I Remember, I Remember.

4 I wept for memory.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, She Sat and Sang Always.

5 Still are the thoughts to memory dear.
SCOTT, Rokeby Canto i, st. 33.

6 The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination,
And every lovely organ of her life
Shall come apparell'd in more precious habit,
More moving-delicate and full of life,
Into the eye and prospect of his soul.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. 1. l. 226.

7 Ah, how much less all living loves to me,
Than that one rapture of remembering thee.
(Heu quanto minus est cum reliquis versari, quam tui meminisse.)

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Epitaph to the Memory of Mary Doleman. (Munby, tr.)

8 I am with you,
Wandering through Memory Lane.
B. G. DE SILVA, Memory Lane. (1924)

9 As the dew to the blossom, the bud to the bee,

As the scent to the rose, are those memories
to me.

AMELIA C. WELBY, Pulpit Eloquence.

10 Passing sweet
Are the domains of tender memory!
WORDSWORTH, Ode to Lycoris. No. ii, l. 50.

VI—Memory and Forgetfulness

See also Forgetfulness

11 I sit beside my lonely fire
And pray for wisdom yet:
For calmness to remember
Or courage to forget.

CHARLES HAMILTON ADÉ, Remember or Forget.

Forget that I remember,

And dream that I forget.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Rococo.

12 Remembrances embellish life but forgetfulness alone makes it possible. (Les souvenirs embellissent la vie, l'oubli seul la rend possible.)

GENERAL CALDENI, Written in an Album.

13 We have all forgot more than we remember.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5442.

14 A retentive memory is a good thing, but the ability to forget is the true token of greatness.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

15 Ah, tell me not that memory
Sheds gladness o'er the past;
What is recalled by faded flowers,
Save that they did not last?
Were it not better to forget,
Than but remember and regret?

LEITIA ELIZABETH LANDON, Despondency.

16 Better by far you should forget and smile,
Than that you should remember and be sad.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, A Birthday.

17 Though varying wishes, hopes, and fears
Fever'd the progress of these years,
Yet now, days, weeks, and months but seem
The recollection of a dream.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto iv, Introduction, l. 21.

18 I shall remember while the light lives yet,
And in the night-time I shall not forget.

SWINBURNE, Ereotion.

19 Teach me not the art of remembering, but the art of forgetting, for I remember things
I do not wish to remember, but I cannot forget things I wish to forget.

THEMISTOCLES, when Simonides offered to teach him the art of memory. (CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. 32, sec. 104.)

20 Mem: To remember to forget to ask
Old Whitbred to my house one day.

JOHN WOLCOT, Whitbread's Brewery Visited by Their Majesties.

MERCY

21 For Mercy, Courage, Kindness, Mirth,
There is no measure upon earth;
Nay, they wither, root and stem,
If an end be set to them.

LAURENCE BINYON, A Song.

For Mercy has a human heart,
Pity a human face,
And Love, the human form divine,
And Peace, the human dress.

Then every man, of every clime,
That prays in his distress,

Prays to the human form divine,
Love, Mercy, Pity, Peace.
WILLIAM BLAKE, The Divine Image.

1. Mercy is for the merciful.

BYRON, Lines on Hearing Lady Byron Was Ill.

Mercy to him that shows it, is the rule.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 595.

Mercy of mercy needs must arise.

LAWLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus xii, l. 233.

2. Bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering.

New Testament: Colossians, iii, 12.

Open thy bowels of compassion.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act iv, sc. 7.

3. We hand folks over to God's mercy, and show none ourselves

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 42. See also GOD: His Mercy.

4. Cowards are cruel, but the brave

Love mercy and delight to save.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt i, fab. 1.

5. And shut the gates of mercy on mankind.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard. St 17

6. Mercy the wise Athenians held to be

Not an affection, but a Deity.

ROBERT HEYRICK, Mercy.

7. Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 7.

Who will not mercy unto others show,

How can he mercy ever hope to have?

SPEERER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto i, st. 42.

8. Mercy is better than vengeance. (Ἐλεος ἀλλὰ καὶ ὀφείλημα.)

PITTACUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus Bk. i, sec. 76.)

9. Mercy stood in the cloud, with eye that wept Essential love.

POLLOK, The Course of Time. Bk iii, l. 658.

10. Teach me to feel another's woe,

To hide the fault I see;

That mercy I to others show,

That mercy show to me.

POPE, Universal Prayer. St. 10.

11. So much his courage and his mercy strive,
He wounds to cure, and conquers to forgive.

PENON, Ode in Imitation of Horace. Bk. iii, ode 2.

12. Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxv, 10.

13. It is a bad cause which asks for mercy.

(Mala causa est que requirit misericordiam.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententia. No. 346. See also JUSTICE AND MERCY

14. It is impossible to imagine anything which better becomes a ruler than mercy. (Ex-cogitare nemo quicquam poterit quod magis decorum regi sit quam clementia.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk i, ch. 19, sec. 1.

Humanity always becomes a conqueror.

SHERIDAN, Pizarro. Act i, sc. 1.

It is noble to grant life to the vanquished.

(Pulchrum est vitam donare minori.)

STATIUS, Thebais. Bk. vi, l. 816.

Tigers have courage and the rugged bear,
But man alone can, whom he conquers, spare.

WALLER, Epistle to My Lord Protector.

16. Mercy often gives death instead of life.
(Mortem misericors sepe pro vita dabit.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 329.

18. Where to serves mercy
But to confront the visage of offence?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 46

You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy;
For your own reasons turn into your bosoms,

As dogs upon their masters, worrying you

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 81

I cry you, mercy, 'tis but Quid for Quo

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry VI. Act v, sc. 3, l. 109.

17. Mercy is not itself, that oft looks so;

Pardon is still the nurse of second woe

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 297. See also JUSTICE LET JUSTICE BE DONE.

18. No ceremony that to great ones 'longs,
Not the king's crown, nor the deputed sword,

The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe,

Become them with one half so good a grace

As mercy does.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 59.

19. The quality of mercy is not strain'd;

It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven

Upon the place beneath: it is twice blest;

It blesseth him that gives and him that takes.

'Tis mightiest in the mightiest: it becomes

The throned monarch better than his crown;

His sceptre shows the force of temporal

power,

The attribute to awe and majesty,

Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;

But mercy is above this sceptred sway;

It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,

It is an attribute to God himself;

And earthly power doth then show likest

God's

When mercy seasons justice.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 154.

We do pray for mercy;
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 200.

Brother, you have a vice of the gods in you,
Which better fits a lion than a man.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 3, l. 37.

Will thou draw near the nature of the gods?
Draw near them then in being merciful:
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 117.

For mercy will soon pardon the meanest:
but mighty men shall be mightily tormented.
Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, vi, 6.

Sweet Mercy! to the gates of Heaven
This Minstrel lead, his sins forgiven;
The rueful conflict, the heart riven
With vain endeavour,
And memory of Earth's bitter leaven
Effaced for ever.

WORDSWORTH, Thoughts Suggested on the Banks of the Nile, l. 55.

MERIT

Merit and good-breeding will make their way everywhere.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1747.

The force of his own merit makes his way.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 1, l. 64.

Amongst the sons of men how few are known
Who dare be just to merit not their own.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Epistle to Hogarth, l. 1.

The little merit man can plead
In doing well, dependeth still
Upon his power of doing ill.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iv, l. 248.

View the whole scene, with critic judgement scan,

And then deny him merit if you can.
Where he falls short, 'tis Nature's fault alone;
Where he succeeds, the merit's all his own.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rascals, l. 1023.

Referring to Thomas Sheridan, the actor.

It sounds like stories from the land of spirits
If any man obtain that which he merits
Or any merit that which he obtains.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Good Great Man.

No farther seek his merits to disclose,
Or draw his faculties from their dread
abode,

(There they alike in troubling hope repose)
The bosom of his Father and his God.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard: The Epitaph.

Distinguish between baseness and merit, not by descent, but by purity of life and heart.
(Turpi seculis honestum Non patre præ-claro, sed vita et pectore puro.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. vi, l. 63.

Man's chief merit consists in resisting the impulses of his nature.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. ii, p. 285.

What merit to be dropped on fortune's hill?
The honour is to mount it!

J. S. KNOWLES, The Hunchback. Act i, sc. 1.

The same principle leads us to neglect a man of merit that induces us to admire a fool.
(Du même fonds dont on néglige un homme de mérite, l'on sait encore admirer un sot.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 12.

Nature makes merit and fortune uses it.
(La nature fait le mérite, et la fortune le met en œuvre.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 153.

There are people who disgust with merit, and others who please with faults. (Il y a des gens dégoûtés avec du mérite, et d'autres qui plaisent avec des défauts.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 155.

Our merit wins the esteem of honest men, and our lucky star that of the public. (Notre mérite nous attire l'estime des honnêtes gens, et notre étoile celle du public.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 165.

The world more often rewards the appearance of merit than merit itself. (Le monde récompense plus souvent les apparences du mérite que le mérite même.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 166.

There is merit without eminence, but there is no eminence without some merit. (Il y a du mérite sans élévation, mais il n'y a point d'élévation sans quelque mérite.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 400.

Eminence is to merit what dress is to beauty.
(L'élévation est au mérite ce que la parure est aux belles personnes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 401.

By merit rais'd To that had eminence.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 5.

What is merit? The opinion one man entertains of another.

HENRY JOHN PALMERSTON, Speeches. Quoted by Carlyle in Shooting Niagara.

1 We should try to succeed by merit, not by favor. (Virtute ambire oportet, non favoribus.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo: Prologue, l. 78.

2 Beauties in vain their pretty eyes may roll;
Charms strike the sight, but merit wins the soul.

Pope, The Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 33.

3 The sufficiency of merit is to know that my merit is not sufficient.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. II, emb. I.

4 O, if men were to be saved by merit, what hole in hell were hot enough for him?

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 119.

5 For merit lives from man to man,
And not from man, O Lord, to thee.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam: Prelude. St. 9.

6 In the use,
Not in the bare possession lies the merit.
GILBERT WEST, Institution of the Garter, l. 461.

MERMAID

7 According to the constitution of mermaids, so much of a mermaid as is not a woman must be a fish.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 1.

8 What at top is a lovely woman, ends below in a black and ugly fish. (Desinat in piscem mulier formosa superne.)

HORACE, Art Poetica, l. 4.

9 O, train me not, sweet mermaid, with thy note.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act III, sc. 2, l. 45.

But, lest myself be guilty to self-wrong,
I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act III, sc. 2, l. 168.

As if some mermaid did their ears entice.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 202.

10 Once I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a mermaid on a dolphin's back
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath
That the rude sea grew civil at her song:
And certain stars shot madly from their spheres,

To hear the sea-maid's music.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act II, sc. 1, l. 149.

11 Who would be A mermaid fair,
Singing alone, combing her hair?

TENNYSON, The Mermaid.

Slow sail'd the weary mariners and saw,
Betwixt the green break and the running foam,

Sweet faces, rounded arms, and bosoms prest
To little harps of gold; and while they mused,
Whispering to each other half in fear,
Shrill music reach'd them on the middle sea.
TENNYSON, The Sea Fairies.

As merry as mice in malt.
C. H. SPENCER, John Ploughman. Ch. 16.

IV—Merriment: Some Merry Men

2
In Paris a queer little man you may see,
A little man all in gray;
Rosy and round as an apple is he,
Content with the present whate'er it may be,
While from care and from cōsh he is equally free,

And merry both night and day!
"Ma foil I laugh at the world," says he,
"I laugh at the world, and the world laughs at me!"

What a gay little man in gray.

BENJAMIN, The Little Man all in Gray. (Ansell Edwards, tr.)

3
I'll be merry and free,
I'll be sad for naeboddy;
Naeboddy cares for me,
I care for naeboddy.
ROBERT BURNS, I Hae a Wife.

There was a jolly miller once,
Lived on the river Dee;
He work'd, and sung, from morn till night,
No lark more blithe than he.
And this the burthen of his song,
For ever us'd to be,
"I care for nobody, not I,
If no one cares for me."

ISAAC BUCKENSTAFF, Love in a Village. Act 1, 5.

4
He was a care-defying blade
As ever Bacchus listed!
Tho' Fortune sair upon him laid,
His heart, she ever muss'd it.
He had nae wish but—to be glad,
Nor want but—when he thirsted;
He hated naught but—to be sad.
ROBERT BURNS, The Jolly Beggars.

5
A merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour's talk withal:
His eye begets occasion for his wit;
For every object that the one doth catch,
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest,
Which his fair tongue, conceit's expositor,
Delivers in such apt and gracious words
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

BENJAMIN, Love's Labour's Lost. Act II, sc. 1, l. 65.

6
Don Pedro: In faith, lady, you have a merry heart.

Beatrice: Yes, my lord; I thank it, poor soul, it keeps me the widdow sick of care.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act II, sc. 1, l. 343.

Don Pedro: To be merry best becomes you; but, out of question, you were born in a merry hour.

Beatrice: No, sure, my lord, my mother cried; but then there was a star danced, and under that was I born.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act II, sc. 1, l. 346.

MIDNIGHT

7
This dead of midnight is the noon of thought,
And Wisdom mounts her smith with the stars.

ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, A Summer's Evening Meditation, l. 51.

8
That hour, o' night's black arch the keystone.
BURNS, Tam o' Shanter.

9
Is it for work? There comes no fool to bore us.

Midnight intoxicates the human swine;
I, pen in hand, with all the gods for chorus,
Write then my clearest thought, my noblest line.

Midnight is mine

MORTIMER COLLINS, Midnight Is Mine

But wouldst thou hear the melodies of Time,
Listen when sleep and drowsy darkness roll
Over hush'd cities, and the midnight chime
Sounds from their hundred clocks, and deep bells toll,

Like a last knell over the dead world's soul.

THOMAS HOOD, The Plea of the Midsummer Fairies, l. 298.

10
It was evening there,
But here the very noon of night.
(Vespero là, e qui mezza notte era.)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto xv, l. 6.

11
Comus and his midnight crew.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode for Music, l. 2.

12
There is a budding morrow in midnight.
KEATS, To Homer.

13
I stood on the bridge at midnight,
As the clocks were striking the hour,
And the moon rose o'er the city,
Behind the dark church-tower.
LONGFELLOW, The Bridge.

From the coal cisterns of the midnight air
My spirit drank repose;
The fountain of perpetual peace flows there,
From those deep cisterns flows.
LONGFELLOW, Hymn to the Night.

Midnight! the outpost of advancing day!
The frontier town and citadel of night!
LONGFELLOW, The Two Rivers. Pt. 1.

14
O wild and wondrous midnight,
There is a might in thee
To make the charmed body
Almost like spirit be,

And give it some faint glimpses

Of immortality!

J. R. LOWME, Midnight.

Midnight brought on the dusky hour

Friendliest to sleep and silence.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 667.

Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered, weak and weary.

'Tis now the very witching time of night,

When churchyards yawn and hell itself breathes out

Contagion to this world.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act III, sc. 2, l. 406.

When it draws near to witching time of night.

BLAIR, The Grave, l. 55.

'Tis the witching hour of night.

KELLS, A Prophecy, l. 1.

We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act III, sc. 2, l. 228.

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve; Lovers, to bed; 'tis almost fairy time.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act v, sc. 1, l. 370.

Pale Midnight on her starry throne.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto IV, l. 40.

Midnight, and yet no eye

Through all the Imperial City closed in sleep!

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Curse of Kehama. Pt. I, l. 1.

Midnight, yet not a noose

From Tower Hill to Piccadilly noosed!

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses: The Rebuilding.

And thy dark pencil, midnight! darker still In melancholy dipt, embrowns the whole.

And, tedious years of Gothic darkness pass'd; Emerg'd all splendour in our isle at last. COWPER, Table Talk, l. 556.

Greece boasts her Homer; Rome can Virgil claim;

England can either match in Milton's fame. (Græcia Mæonidam, jactet sibi Roma Maronem Anglia Miltonum jactat utrique parem.)

SALVAGGI, Ad Joannem Miltonum.

10 Three Poets, in three distant Ages born, Greece, Italy, and England did adorn.

The first in loftiness of thought surpass'd. The next in majesty, in both the best;

The force of nature could no farther go; To make the third she join'd the former two.

DRYDEN, Lines under the Portrait of Milton.

Referring to Homer, Virgil, and Milton.

11 Nor second He, that rode sublime Upon the seraph-wings of Ecstasy,

The secrets of th' Abyss to spy. He pass'd the flaming bounds of Place and Time:

The living Throne, the sapphire blaze, Where Angels tremble, while they gaze,

He saw; but blasted with excess of light, Closed his eyes in endless night.

THOMAS GRAY, Progress of Poetry. Pt. iii, st. 2.

12 He was a Phidias that could cut a Colossus out of a rock, but could not cut heads out of cherry stones.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to Milton. (HANNAH MORE, Johnsoniana.)

13 I am old and blind!

Men point at me as smitten by God's frown. ELIZABETH LLOYD, Milton on His Blindness.

Sometimes attributed to Milton himself. Miss Lloyd was a member of the Society of Friends of Philadelphia, Pa.

14 Milton's strong pinion now not Heav'n can bound,

Now, serpent-like, in prose he sweeps the ground,

In quibbles, Angel and Archangel join, And God the Father turns a School-divine.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epts. 1, l. 99.

15 O mighty-mouth'd inventor of harmonies, O skill'd to sing of Time or Eternity,

God-gifted organ-voice of England, Milton, a name to resound for ages.

TENNYSON, Milton.

16 Lover of Liberty at heart wast thou, Above all beauty bright, all music clear:

To thee she bared her bosom and her brow, Breathing her virgin promise in thine ear,

And bound thee to her with a double vow,— Exquisite Puritan, grave Cavalier!

HENRY VAN DYKE, Milton.

The ancients advised us to sacrifice to the Graces, but Milton sacrificed to the Devil.
VOLTARE, Egmont.

We who are Milton's kindred, Shakespeare's heirs

WILLIAM WATSON, An Exaggerated Deference to Foreign Literary Opinion.

The New World honors him whose lofty plea
For England's freedom made her own more sure,

Whose song, immortal as its theme, shall be
Their common freehold while both worlds endure.

WHITTIER, On the Milton Window, in St. Margaret's, Westminster.

That mighty orb of song, The divine Milton
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. I, l. 249.

The nightless Milton, with his hair
Around his placid temples curled.

WORDSWORTH, The Italian Lincenci. Pt. I, l. 12.

Thy soul was like a Star, and dwelt apart,
Thou hadst a voice whose sound was like the sea:
Pure as the naked heavens, majestic, free,
So didst thou travel on life's common way,
In cheerful godliness, and yet thy heart
The lowliest duties on herself did lay.

WORDSWORTH, Sonnets. London, 1802.

I—Mind: Definitions

A man's felicity consists not in the outward and visible blessings of fortune, but in the inward and unseen perfections and riches of the mind

AMARCHANDIN, (Plutarch, The Banquet of the Seven Wise Men. Sec. 11)

The mind of man is far from the nature of a clear and equal glass, . . . nay, it is rather like an enchanted glass, full of superstition and imposture.

BACON, Advancement of Learning: Of the Understanding.

I had rather believe all the fables in the Legend and the Talmud and the Alcoran, than that this universal frame is without a mind

BACON, Essays: Of Atheism.

The mind is the man, and the knowledge of the mind

BACON, Miscellaneous Tracts Upon Human Understanding: The Front of Knowledge. Sec. 1.

The forehead is the gate of the mind. (Reason not animal instinct.)

CARO, De Proverbia. Quintilian. Bk. II, l. 11.

Nature's first great title—mind.

The growth of the intellect is spontaneous
in every expansion

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Intellect.

Thou living ray of intellectual fire.

WILLIAM FAULCONER, The Shipwreck. Canto I,
l. 104.

The mind is like a sheet of white paper in this, that the impressions it receives the oftenest, and retains the longest, are black ones.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

The mind of man is like a clock that is always running down, and requires to be as constantly wound up.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Sketches: On Cant and Hypocrisy.

The most perfect mind is a dry light (Lumen siccum optima anima)

HERACLITUS. Quoted by Bacon, who explains it to mean, a mind "not steeped and infused in the humours of the affections."

The mind is the atmosphere of the soul.
(L'esprit est atmosphère de l'âme.)

The brain is the citadel of the senses (Habet cerebrum sensus arcem.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xi,
sec. 49.

Our brains are seventy-year clocks. The Angel of Life winds them up once for all, then closes the case, and gives the key into the hand of the Angel of the Resurrection.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 8.

Our minds, like our stomachs, are whetted by change of food, and variety supplies both with fresh appetite. (Mens mutatione recreabitur, sicut in cibis, quorum diversitate reficitur stomachus, et plurius minore fastidio altitur.)

ch. II, sec. 1.

That little world, the human mind.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Ode to Superstition.

1 A man is not a wall, whose stones are crushed upon the road; or a pipe, whose fragments are thrown away at a street corner. The fragments of an intellect are always good
GEORGE SAND, Handsome Lawrence. Ch. 2.

2 Keep unshak'd That temple, thy fair mind.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline Act II, sc. 1, l. 67.

Thy mind is a very opal.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night Act II, sc. 4, l. 72.

3 Man's mind a mirror is of heavenly sights, A brief wherein all marvels summed be, Of fairest forms and sweetest shapes the store,
Most graceful all, yet thought may grace them more.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Content and Rich.

4 The human mind always makes progress, but it is a progress in spirals (L'esprit humain fait progrès toujours, mais c'est progrès en spirale)

MADAME DE STAËL.

"Spiral" the memorable Lady terms Our mind's ascent.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The World's Advance Trevelyan, in his notes to Meredith's Poetical Works, says that the "memorable lady" was Mrs Browning (see quotation from Aurora Leigh under ART DEFINITIONS), but the resemblance is much closer to the preceding quotation from Madame de Staël

5 Were I so tall to reach the Pole,
Or grasp the ocean in my span,
I must be measured by my soul;
The mind's the standard of the man.

In a wise passiveness.

WORDSWORTH, Expostulation and Reply.

¹⁹ If we work upon marble, it will perish. If we work upon brass, time will efface it. If we rear temples, they will crumble to dust. But if we work upon men's immortal minds, if we imbue them with high principles, with the just fear of God and love of their fellow men, we engrave on those tablets something which no time can efface, and which will brighten and brighten to all eternity.

XI—Mind: Mind and Matter

11 All the choir of heaven and furniture of earth—in a word, all those bodies which compose the mighty frame of the world—have not any subsistence without a mind

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, Principles of Human Knowledge.

12 Mind and Matter.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, title of dissertation.

Berkeley, in the early part of his life, wrote a dissertation against the existence of material beings and external objects, with such subtlety that Whiston acknowledged himself unable to confute it.

DR. JOHN HAWKESWORTH, Note to Swift's Letters, 1769.

13 When Bishop Berkeley said "there was no matter,"

And proved it—'twas no matter what he said.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 1

What is mind? No matter. What is matter?

Never mind.

THOMAS HEWITT KEY. (On the authority of F. J. FURNIVALL.)

14 Doctor Berkeley, Bishop of Cloyne, a very worthy, ingenuous, and learned man, has written a book to prove that there is no such thing as matter, and that nothing exists but in idea . . . His arguments, strictly speaking, are unanswerable, but yet I am so far from being convinced by them, that I am determined to go on to eat and drink, and walk and ride, in order to keep that Matter, which I so mistakenly imagine my body at present to consist of, in as good plight as possible.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 Sept., 1748.

15 Bishop Berkeley destroyed this world in one volume octavo; and nothing remained, after his time, but mind; which experienced a similar fate from the hand of Mr. Hume in 1737.

I—Moderation: Apothegms

15 Moderation is best. (Μέτρος ἀριστόν.)

CLEOBULUS OF LINDUS, one of the seven wise men of Greece, who died 579 B.C. This phrase, his maxim, is said to have been inscribed on the wall of the temple of Apollo at Delphi. The Latin form is, "Optimus modus." (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Cleobulus. Bk. i, sec. 93.)

Is not ariston metron "moderation is best?" (Ἄριστος μέτρος an ait optimus modus?)

CLEOBULUS. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientium, l. 152.)

Observe moderation: proportion is best in all things. (Μέτρος ἐπιεικεστάτη καὶ τὴν ἐν ἡμῶν ἀρετήν.)

HARLES, Works and Days, l. 694.

I, who have so much and so universally adored this ἀρετὴν μέτρον, "excellent moderation," at all times, and who have concluded the most moderate measure the most perfect, shall I pretend to an unreasonable and prodigious old age?

II—Moderation: The Golden Mean

The golden mean is free from trips.

STEPHEN GOSBOR, Pleasant Quips, p. 14. (1596)

Safely he jogs along the way which "Golden Mean" the sages call;

Who scales the brow of frowning Alp must face full many a slip and fall

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah, Pt. viii, st. 12.

Whoso cultivates the golden mean, avoids the poverty of a hovel and the envy of a palace. (Auream quisquis mediocritatem Diligit, tutus caret obsoleti Sordibus tecti, caret invidenda Sobrius aula.)

HORACE, Odes, Bk. II, ade 10, l. 5.

He that holds fast the golden mean, And lives contentedly between

The little and the great, Feels not the wants that punch the poor, Nor plagues that haunt the rich man's door, Imbittering all his state

HORACE, Odes, n, 10 (Cowper, tr.)

III—Moderation: Nothing in Excess

Nothing to excess. That is enough, or precept too will run to excess (Nil inimum. Satis hoc, ne sit et hoc inimum)

ANACREON. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiae, l. 49.)

Nothing in excess. (Μέτρον ἔστιν.)

EURIPIDES. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 136.)

Nothing in excess. (Μέτρον ἔστιν.)

SOLON. (DIODORUS LACRITIUS, Solon, Bk. 4, sec. 63. Laertius also ascribes this saying to Socrates, who lived two centuries later. Bk. ii, sec. 32: "Being once asked in what consisted the virtue of a young man, Socrates said, 'In doing nothing in excess.'—Tò μηδὲν ἄγαν.) The more familiar Latin form is, "Ne quid nimis." With the equally famous, "Know thyself" (Γνῶθι σεαυτὸν), it was inscribed on the temple of Apollo at Delphi.

1 Everything in excess is opposed to nature. (Πάν γὰρ τὸ πλεονεκτικὸν τῇ φύσει.)

Can we ever have too much of a good thing?

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 6.

People may have too much of a good thing.

JOHN WOLCOT, Subjects for Painters: The Gentleman and His Wife.

8 To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unho the rainbow, or with taper-light

To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,

Is wasteful and ridiculous excess.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 11.

But Shakespeare also says, 'tis very silly

"To gild refined gold, or paint the lily."

IV—Moderation: Living on Little

10 Men live better on little. (Vivitur exiguo melius.)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. Bk. i, l. 215.

Our portion is not large, indeed;

But then how little do we need,

For Nature's calls are few!

In this the art of living lies,

To want no more than may suffice,

And make that little do.

We'll therefore relish with content,

Whatever kind Providence has sent,

Nor aim beyond our power;

For, if our stock be very small,

'Tis prudent to enjoy it all,

Nor lose the present hour.

NATHANIEL COTTON, The Fireside. Sts. 9, 10.

11 He who understands the limits of life knows how easy it is to procure enough to remove the pain of want and make the whole life complete and perfect. Hence he has no longer any need of things which are to be won only by labor and conflict.

Give us enough but with a sparing hand.

EDMUND WALLER, Reflections.

You never know what is enough unless you know what is more than enough.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

14. He who desires only what is enough, is troubled neither by raging seas, nor hail-smitten vineyards, nor an unproductive farm. (Desiderantem quod satis est neque Tumultuosum sollicitat mare, . . . Non verberatæ grandine vineæ Fundusque mendax.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 1, l. 25.

15. The moderation of fortunate people comes from the calm which good fortune gives to their tempers. (La modération des personnes heureuses vient du calme que la bonne fortune donne à leur humeur.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 17.

Moderation is like sobriety: one would like to eat more, but one fears to make oneself ill. (La modération est comme la sobriété, on voudrait bien manger davantage, mais on craint de se faire mal.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 507.

16. Enjoy thy possessions as if about to die, and use them sparingly, as if about to live. That man is wise who understands both these commandments, and hath applied a measure both to thrift and unthrift.

LUCIAN, (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 26.)

It is great riches to a man to live sparingly with an even mind. (Divitiæ grandes homini sunt, vivere parce æquo animo.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. v, l. 1117.

17. Take this at least, this last advice, my son:

Keep a stiff rein, and move but gently on:
The coursers of themselves will run too fast,
Your art must be to moderate their haste.

OVIN, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 147. (Addison, tr.) The story of Phaëton.

Up hill, our course is rather slow;
Down hill, how merrily we go;
But when 'tis neither up nor down,
It is a middling pace I own.

VII—Moderation: Some Wishes

⁷ In the downhill of life when I find I'm declining,

May my lot no less fortunate be
Than a snug elbow-chair can afford for reclining,

And a cot that looks o'er the wide sea.

JOHN COLLINS, In the Downhill of Life.

⁸ Ah, yet, e'er I descend to th' grave,

May I a small House and large Garden have,
And a few Friends, and many Books, both
true,

Both wise, and both delightful too.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Wish. St. 2.

This only grant me, that my means may lie
Too low for envy, for contempt too high.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Myself.

⁹ Some have too much, yet still they crave;

I little have, yet seek no more:

They are but poor, though much they have,

And I am rich with little store:

They poor, I rich; they beg, I give;

They lack, I lend; they pine, I live.

SIR EDWARD DRYDEN, My Mind to Me a King- dom Is. St. 5.

¹⁰ May heaven (it's all I wish for) send
One genial room to treat a friend,

Where decent cupboard, little plate,

Display benevolence, not state.

And may my humble dwelling stand

Upon some chosen spot of land:

A pond before full to the brim,

Where cows may cool, and geese may swim;

Behind, a green like velvet neat,

Soft to the eye, and to the feet.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 642.

¹¹ Give me a three-legged table, a shell of clean salt, and a coat that, however coarse, will keep out the cold. (Sit mihi mensa tripes et Concha salis puri et toga, quæ defendere frigus

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 13.

¹² This is what I prayed for: a piece of land not very large, where there would be a garden, and near the house a spring of ever-flowing water, and above these a bit of woodland. More and better than this have the gods done for me. I am content.

(Hoc erat in votis: modus agri non ita magnus.

Hortus ubi et tecto vicinus jugis aque fons Et paulum silvæ super his foret. Auctius at-

que

Di melius fecere. Bene est.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 1. The opening words give expression, not to a wish,
but to satisfaction as the poet looks out across his little farm, the realization of his dreams. Hence the past tense of erat.

Give me, ye gods, the produce of one field,
That so I neither may be rich nor poor;

And having just enough, not covet more.

DRYDEN, Imitation of Horace.

O grant me, Heaven, a middle state,

Neither too humble nor too great;

More than enough for nature's ends,

With something left to treat my friends.

DAVID MALLAT, Imitation of Horace.

I've ~~in~~ with't that I had clear
For life, six hundred pounds a year;
A handsome house to lodge a friend;
A river at my garden's end;
A terrace walk, and half a rood
Of land set out to plant a wood.

SWIFT, Imitation of Horace. Bk. II, sat. 6.

In all my wanderings round this world of care,
In all my griefs—and God has given my share—
I still had hopes my latest hours to crown,
Amidst these humble bowers to lay me down.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 83.

Ye gods! my wishes are confined
To—health of body, peace of mind,
Clean linen, and a guinea!
EDWARD LYNGHET, Ambition.

That spot of ground pleases me in which small possession makes me happy, and where slight resources are abundant. (Illa placet tellus in qua res parva beatum Me facit et tenues humilianur opes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, ep. 96, l. 5.

If I live to grow old, as I find I go down,
Let this be my fate: in a country town,
May I have a warm house, with a stone at my gate,

And a cleanly young girl to rub my bald pate.
May I govern my passions with absolute sway,
Grow wiser and better as my strength wears
away,

Without gout or stone, by a gentle decay.

WALTER POPE, The Old Man's Wish. (1685)

Mine be a cot beside the hill;
A bee-hive's hum shall soothe my ear;
A willow brook, that turns a mill,
With many a fall, shall linger near.
SAMUEL ROBERTS, A Wish.

Give me, indulgent gods! with mind serene,
And guiltless heart, to range the sylvan scene;
No splendid poverty, no smiling care,
No well-bred hate, or servile grandeur, there.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. I, l. 243.

MODESTY

1—Modesty: Definitions

Modesty cannot properly be described as a virtue, for it is a feeling rather than a disposition—a kind of fear of disrepute.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. IV, ch. 9,
sec. 1.

Modesty is the only sure bait when you angle for praise.
LOAN COMPTON, Editha, A Tale, 1830.

Modesty is that feeling by which honorable shame acquires a valuable and lasting authority.

CICERO, De Inventione Rhetorica. Bk. II, 56.

Modesty is the citadel of beauty and of virtue. (Αἰσὺς τοῦ καλοῦ καὶ ἀρετῆς ἀμύνη.)

DEMAEUS, Phil Dodekateia. (MÜLLER, Oratores Attici. Vol. II, p. 438.)

Modesty is often mistaken for secrecy, and silence for bad temper. (Plerumque modestus Occupat obscuri speciem, taciturnitas acerbi.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. I, epis. 18, l. 94.

Modesty, and unstained Honor, sister to Justice. (Pudor, et Justicie soror, Incorrupta Fides.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. I, ode. 24, l. 6.

Modesty is to merit what shadows are to a painting; it gives it force and relief. (La mo-destie est au mérite ce que les ombres sont aux figures dans un tableau elle lui donne de la force et du relief.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Sec. 2.

Modesty antedates clothes and will be resumed when clothes are no more. Modesty died when clothes were born. Modesty died when false modesty was born.

MARK TWAIN. (PAINE, Life. Vol. III, p. 1513.)

II—Modesty: Apothegms

With time diffidence dies away in man. (Ἐν χρόνῳ δ' ἀναφέρεται τὸ τάρφος ἀνθρώπου.)
ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 857.

Modesty does not long survive innocence.

EDMUND BURKE, *Impeachment of Warren
Hastings*, 17 Feb., 1788.

I'm modest personified!

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act I.

I'm shy, nervous, modest, retiring, and diffident.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act I.

There's no false modesty about you.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act I.

An impudent fellow may counterfeit modesty, but I'll be hanged if a modest man can ever counterfeit impudence.

GOLDSMITH, The Stoich to Conquer. Act II.

A truly modest fellow. (Modestum demissus homo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. I, sat. 3, l. 57.

Modesty cannot be taught, it must be born.
(Pudor doceri non potest, nasci potest.)

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 492.

Modesty, once banished, never returns. (Pudor dimissus nunquam reſcit.)
PUSANUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 498.

When one remains modest, not after praise
but after blame, then is he really so.
JEAN PAUL RUCETTE, Hesperus. Ch. 12.

Everything that is exquisite hides itself.
JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest:
Joy. No. 50.

Modesty forbids what the law does not.
(Quod non vetat lex, hoc vetat fieri pudor.)
SENECA, Troades, l. 334.

An act
That blurs the grace and blush of modesty.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 40.

Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc.
2, l. 27.

III—Modesty: Its Virtues

Ever with the best desert goes diffidence.
ROBERT BROWNING, A Blot in the 'Scutcheon'.
Act I, sc. 2.

Modesty sets off one newly come to honour.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jaculis Prudentium.

Thy modesty's a candle to thy merit
HENRY FIELDING, Tom Thumb the Great. Act
I, sc. 3, l. 8.

Modesty becomes a young man. (Decet ver-cundum esse adulescentem.)
PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 833. (Act v, sc. 1.)

I have done one braver thing
Than all the Worthies did,
And yet a braver thence doth spring,
Which is, to keep that hid.
JOHN DONNE, The Undertaking.

He full of bashfulness and truth,
Loved much, hoped little, and desired naught
TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered. Bk. ii, st. 16.
(Fairfax, tr.)

IV—Modesty: Its Faults

Modest dogs miss much meat.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Modesty in a man is a crime. Don't be modest. It is a woman's virtue.
FREDERICK WATSON, Interview, on his 80th birthday, 23 Feb., 1931.

All men have their faults; too much modesty is him.
GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act II.
William was once a bashful youth;
His modesty was such,

That one might say (to say the truth),
He rather had too much.
WILLIAM COWPER, Of Himself.

There is a luxury in self-dispraise;
And inward self-disparagement affords
To meditative spleen a grateful feast.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion: Bk. iv, l. 475.

V—Modesty in Women

Modesty is the beauty of women.
UNKNOWN, A Goshic proverb.

Rare is agreement between beauty and modesty.
(Rara est adeo concordia formae Atque pudictiae.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 297. See also under BEAUTY.

Her modest looks the cottage might adorn,
Sweet as the primrose peeps beneath the thorn.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 329.

Like the violet, which alone
Prosper in some happy shade,
My Castara lives unknown
To no looser eye betrayed.
WILLIAM HARBINGTON, Castara. (1634)

More of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd
And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with
A pudency so rosy the sweet view on 't
Might well have warm'd old Saturn.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 9.

Modesty may more betray our sense
Than women's lightness.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act II,
sc. 2, l. 168.

Have you no modesty, no maiden shame,
No touch of bashfulness?
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 285.

He saw her charming, but he saw not half
The charms her downcast modesty conceal'd.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 229.

There is no woman, where there's no reserve.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 45.

Let those ankles never sweep
From their exquisite reserve.
ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes: Introduction.

Naked in nothing should a woman be;
But veil her very wit with modesty:
Let man discover, let her not display,
But yield her charms of mind with sweet delay.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 166.

1 My theme is always one, and ever was—
"Radix malorum est Cupiditas."

CHAUCER, Pardoner's Tale: Prologue, l. 5.

2 The love of money is the mother-city of all evils. (Τὴν φιλαργυρίαν εἶπε μητρόπολις πάντων τῶν κακῶν.)

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 50.)

For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

New Testament: 1 Timothy, vi, 10. Often incorrectly quoted. "Money is the root of all evil." The Latin is the oft-quoted, "Radix malorum est cupiditas." Mark Twain is credited with amending this to, "Lack of money is the root of all evil." Attributed also to Bernard Shaw

3 The love of money and the love of learning seldom meet.

MONK AND NUN

23 Despair makes the monk. (Desperatio facit monachum.)

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. 4, mem. 2, subs. 3. Quoted.

24 Merrily sang the monks in Ely
When Cnut, King, rowed thereby;
Row, my knights, near the land,
And hear we these monkes' song.

KING CANUTE (?), Song of the Monks of Ely. (c. 1030) A famous early English ballad, recorded by a monk of Ely in 1166. (See History of the English People.)

There was also a Nonne, a Prioressse,
That of her smiling was full simple and coy.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 118.

JOHN DAVENANT, A Ballad of a Nun.

I like the church, I like a cowl,
I love a prophet of the soul;
And on my heart monastic aisles
Fall like sweet strains or pensive smiles;
Yet not for all his faith can see,
Would I that cowed churchman be.
EMERSON, The Problem.

If you become a nun, dear,
A friar I will be;
In any cell you run, dear,
Pray look behind for me.
The roses all turn pale, too;
The doves all take the veil, too;
The blind will see the show;
What! you become a nun, my dear.
I'll not believe it, no!

MONTH

Thirty days hath November,
April, June, and September,
February hath twenty-eight alone,
And all the rest have thirty-one
RICHARD GRAPTON, Abridgement of the Chronicles of England (1570) "A rule to know how many days every month in the year hath" Reprinted in 1577, in Harrison's Description of England, as an English version of these Latin hexameters

JANUUS, APRILS, SEPTEMBERQUE, NOVEMBERQUE TRICE-NOS,
UNUM PLUS RELIQU, FEBRUS TENET OCTO VICENOS;
AT SI BISSEXTUS FUERIT, SUPERADDDITUR UNUS.

Thirty days hath September,
April, June, and November,
February has twenty-eight alone,
All the rest have thirty-one;
Excepting leap year,—that's the time
When February's days are twenty-nine.
UNKNOWN. (The Return from Parnassus.

EPICURUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 95.)

6 With this pleasant, merry toy, he . . . made his friends believe the moon to be made of green cheese.

ERASMUS, Adagia. (Udall, tr., 1542.) This is one of the most frequently found sayings in sixteenth and seventeenth century literature.

They would make men believe that the moon is made of green cheese.

JOHN FRITH, Antithesis, 315. (1573)

Or think that the moon is made of a green cheese.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Bk. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

He . . . thought the moon was made of green
cheese.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 11.

He made an instrument to know
If the moon shine at full or no;
That would, as soon as e'er she shone straight,
Whether 'twere day or night demonstrate;
Tell what her diameter to an inch is,
And prove that she's not made of green cheese.

sc. 9, l. 11.

17 How now, moon-calf? How dost thine agree?

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 139.

18 A sweet little Venus we'll fondle between us,
When I wed my old man in the moon.

JAMES THORNTON, My Sweetheart's the Man in the Moon. (1892)

19 Everyone is a moon, and has a dark side which he never shows to anybody.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

Nay: for if that moon could love a mortal, . . .
She would turn a new side to her mortal,
Side unseen of herdsmen, huntsman, steers-
man— . . .

Cynthia came riding on her silver car
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. ii, l. 107.

Choose a firm cloud before it fall, and in it
Catch, ere she change, the Cynthia of this minute
POPE, Moral Essays. Epica. ii, l. 19.

5 The moon, like a flower,
In heaven's high bow
With silent delight
Sits and smiles on the night

WILLIAM BLAKE, Night.

6 Curving on a sky imbued with colour,
Drifted over Fiesole by twilight;
Came she, our new crescent of a hair'sbreadth.

Full she flared it, lamping Samminiato.
Rouder 'twixt the cypresses and rounder,
Perfect till the nightingales applauded.

ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More. Sec. 15

7 That gentle Moon, the lesser light, the Lover's lamp, the Swain's delight,
A ruined world, a globe burnt out, a corpse upon the road of night.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidk Pt. v, l. 11.

8 The moon pul'd off her veil of light,
That hides her face by day from sight
(Mysterious veil, of brightness made,
That's both her lustre and her shade),
And in the lantern of the night,
With shining horns hung out her light.

BUTLER, Rudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 905.

9 The devil's in the moon for mischief; they Who call'd her chaste, methinks, began too soon

Their nomenclature; there is not a day,
The longest, not the twenty-first of June,
Seen half the business in a wicked way,
On which three single hours of moonshine

And then the moon is under all the while!
BUTLER, Don Juan. Canto 5, l. 107.

10 Into the sunset's pinky under merge
The moon dips like a pearly barge;
Enchantment sails through magic seas,
To fairyland Hesperides.

Over the hills and away.

MISSISSIPPI CRAWFORD, At Sunset.

11 Till clomb above the eastern bar
The horned Moon, with one bright star
Within the nether tips.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner, l. 209.

The moving Moon went up the sky,

And no where did abide:

Softly she was going up,

And a star or two beside.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner, l. 263

12 When the hollow drum has beat to bed
And the fiddle fifer hangs his head,
When all is mute the Moorish flute,
And nodding guards watch wearily,

Oh, then let me,

From prison free,

March out by moonlight cheerily.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Mountaineers.

Act i, sc. 2.

13 Hour after hour that passionless bright face
Climbs up the desolate blue.

DINAH MARIA MULOCK CRAIK, Moon-Struck.

14 How like a queen comes forth the lonely
Moon

From the slow opening curtains of the clouds;

Walking in beauty to her midnight throne!

GEORGE CROLY, Diana

15 The moon is distant from the sea,

And yet with amber hands

She leads him, docile as a boy,

Along appointed sands.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems Pt. iii, No. 31.

16 The man who has seen the rising moon break out of the clouds at midnight, has been present like an archangel at the creation of light and of the world.

EMERSON, Says, First Series: History.

17 The moon low sailing where the waters fill
The lozenge lake; beside the banks of balm,
Gleams like a chevron on the river's arm.

BRET HARTE, Cadet Grey. Canto, pl. st. 2.

18 A golden sickle reaping darkness down.

JAMES BARROW HOPKINS, Somerset.

19 He who would see old Hoghton right

Must view it by the pale moonlight.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, English Proverbs, and Proverbial Phrases, p. 106.

20 If thou would'st view fair Melrose right,
Go forth by the pale moonlight

SCOTT, Lays of the Minstrel. Canto, l. 1.

1 Mother of light! how fairly dost thou go
Over those hoary crests, divinely led!
Art thou that huntress of the silver bow
Fabled of old? Or rather dost thou tread
Those cloudy summits thence to gaze below,
Like the wild chamois from her Alpine snow,
Where hunters never climb'd—secure from dread?

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to the Moon. St. 1.

2 The crimson Moon, uprising from the sea,
With large delight, foretells the harvest near.

EDWARD HOVELL-THURLOW, The Harvest Moon.

3 Queen and huntress, chaste and fair,
Now the sun is laid to sleep.
Seated in thy silver chair,
State in wonted manner keep:

Hesperus entreats thy light,
Goddess excellently bright.
Bless us then with wished sight,
Goddess excellently bright.

BEN JONSON, Hymn to Diana. (Cynthia's Revels. Act v, sc. 3.)

4 What is there in thee, Moon! that thou should'st move
My heart so potently?

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iii, l. 142.

The moon put forth a little diamond peak,
No bigger than an unobserved star,
Or tiny point of fairy cimeter.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 497.

5 See yonder fire! It is the moon
Slow rising o'er the eastern hill.
It glimmers on the forest tips
And through the dewy foliage drips
In little rivulets of light,
And makes the heart in love with night.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. vi, l. 462.

6 The bent and broken moon,
Batter'd and black, as from a thousand battles,
Hangs silent on the purple walls of Heaven.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Ida. Sc. 2.

7 The moon had climbed the highest hill
Which rises o'er the source of Dee,
And from the eastern summit shed
Her silver light on tower and tree.

JOHN LOWE, Mary's Dream

8 Unmuffle, ye faint stars; and thou fair Moon,
That west'st to love the traveller's benison,
Stoop thy pale visage through an amber cloud,

And disinherit Chioce.

MILTON, Comus, l. 331.

I walk unseen
On the dry smooth-shaven green,
To behold the wand'ring Moon
Riding near her highest noon,
Like one that had been led astray
Through the heav'n's wide pathless way;
And oft, as if her head we bow'd,
Stooping through a fleecy cloud.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 65.

The Moon,
Rising in clouded majesty, at length,
Apparent Queen, unveil'd her peerless light,
And o'er the dark her silver mantle threw.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 606.

10 Like moonlight o'er a troubled sea,
Brightening the storm it cannot calm.

THOMAS MOORE, The Loves of the Angels,
l. 1153.

11 The moon looks On many brooks,
The brook can see no moon but this.

THOMAS MOORE, While Gazing on the Moon's Light. Lines suggested by:

The moon looks upon many night flowers, the night flowers see but one moon.

SIR WILLIAM JONAS

12 The moon was a ghostly galleon tossed upon cloudy seas.

ALFRED NOYES, The Highwayman.

13 Day glimmer'd in the east, and the white
Moon

Hung like a vapour in the cloudless sky.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy: The Lake of Geneva.

14 Again thou reignest in thy golden hall,
Rejoicing in thy sway, fair queen of night!

THOMAS ROSCOE, To the Harvest Moon.

15 The curled moon Was like a little feather
Fluttering far down the gulf.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The Blessed Damozel. St. 10.

16 Good even, good fair moon, good even to
thee;

I prithee, dear moon, now show to me
The form and the features, the speech and degree,

Of the man that true lover of mine shall be.
SCOTT, The Heart of Mid-Lothian. Ch. 17.

17 The glimpses of the moon.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 53.

Let us be Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 27.

18 Dull: What was a month old at Cain's birth, that's not five months old as yet?

Hol: Dictyanna, Goodman Dull; Dictyanna, goodman Dull.

Dull: What is Dictyanna?

Nath: A title to Phoebe, to Luna, to the moon.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 37.

1 Upon the corner of the moon,
There hangs a vaporous drop profound.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 23.

2 How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 54.

3 How slow
This old moon wanes! she lingers my desires,
Like to a step-dame or a dowager
Long withering out a young man's revenue.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act i, sc. 1, l. 3.

The moon, the governess of floods.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 103.

The wat'ry star.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2, l. 1.

4 It is the very error of the moon;
She comes more nearer earth than she was wont,
And makes men mad.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 109.

6 Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,
Who is already sick and pale with grief,
That thou her maid art far more fair than she:

Be not her maid, since she is envious.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 4.

6 Romeo: Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear,
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops—

Juliet: O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon,
That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 107.

7 That orb'd maiden with white fire laden,
Whom mortals call the moon.

SHELLEY, The Cloud, l. 45.

Bright wanderer, fair coquette of Heaven,
To whom alone it has been given
To change and be adored forever.

SHELLEY, Fragment: To the Moon.

Art thou pale for weariness
Of climbing Heaven and gazing on the earth,
Wandering companionless

Among the stars that have a different birth,—
And ever changing, like a joyless eye?
That finds no object worth its constancy?

SHELLEY, Fragment: To the Moon.

8 The young moon has fed
Her exhausted horn

With the sunset's fire.

SHELLEY, Hellas, l. 1031.

The moonlight's ineffectual glow.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto viii.

9 With how sad steps, O Moon, thou climb'st
the skies!

How silently and with how wan a face!

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet xxxi. Quoted by Wordsworth, Muscalaneous Sonnets. Pt. ii, No. 23.

With what a silent and dejected pace
Dost thou, wan Moon, upon thy way advance.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE, Angelina.

10 I with borrow'd silver shine,
What you see is none of mine.

First I show you but a quarter,
Like the bow that guards the Tartar:

Then the half, and then the whole,
Ever dancing round the pole.

SWIFT, On the Moon.

11 Behold, whatever wind prevail,
Slow westering, a phantom sail—
The lonely soul of Yesterday—

Unpiloted, pursues her way.

JOHN B. TABB, The Mid-day Moon.

12 Moon, worn thin to the width of a quill,
In the sawn clouds flying,

How good to go, light into light, and still Give light, dying.

SARA TEASDALE, Moon's Ending.

13 A maiden moon that sparkles on a sty.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 178.

14 Ask me no more: the moon may draw the sea.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vi, l. 364.

The innocent moon that nothing does but shine
Moves all the labouring surges of the world.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Mirage.

15 Pale ports o' the moon.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Hound of Heaven.

16 Lo, the moon ascending,
Up from the east the silvery round moon,
Beautiful over the house-tops, ghastly, phantom moon,

Immense and silent moon.

WALT WHITMAN, Dirge for Two Veterans.

17 But tenderly Above the sea
Hangs, white and calm, the hunter's moon.

J. G. WHITTIER, The Eve of Election. St. 1.

18 And suddenly the moon withdraws
Her sickle from the lightning skies,

And to her sombre cavern flea,
 Wrapped in a veil of yellow gauze.
 OSCAR WILDE, La Fête de la Lune.

1 You meaner beauties of the night,
 That poorly satisfy our eyes
 More by your number than your light;
 You common people of the skies,—
 What are you when the moon shall rise?
 SIR HENRY WOTTON, On His Mistress, The Queen of Bohemia.

2 Late, late yestreen I saw the new moon,
 Wi' the auld moon in hir arm.

3 By the light of the moon, my friend Pierrot,
 Lend me thy pen to write a word;
 My candle is out, I've no more fire,
 Open your door to me, for the love of God.
 (Au clair de la lune, Mon ami Pierrot,
 Prête moi ta plume, Pour écrire un mot;
 Ma chandelle est morte, Je n'ai plus de feu,
 Ouvre moi ta porte, Pour l'amour de Dieu.
 UNKNOWN. French folk song, quoted by George du Maurier in Trilby.)

MORALITY

4 Not the whiteness of years but of morals is to be praised. (Non annorum canities est laudanda, sed morum.)

AMBROSIVS, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, sec. 7.

5 Kant, as we all know, compared the Moral Law to the starry heavens, and found them both sublime. It would, on the naturalistic hypothesis, be more appropriate to compare it to the protective blotches on the beetle's back, and to find them both ingenious.

ARTHUR J. BALFOUR, Foundations of Belief: Naturalism and Ethics. See 1914:8.

6 The foundations of morality are like all other foundations: if you dig too much about them
 the superstructure will come tumbling down.
 SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Notes-books.

7 A moral (like all morals) melancholy.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 63.

"Tut, tut, child!" said the Duchess. "Every thing's got a moral, if you only can find it."
 LEWIS CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 9.

Whate'er the story be, the moral's true.
 DRYDEN, University of Oxford: Prologus.

8 Morality was held a standing jest,

And faith a necessary fraud at best.
 CHARLES CHURCHILL, Goikam. Bk. II, l. 597.

9 He cursed the canting moralist,
 Who measures right and wrong.
 JOHN DAVIDSON, A Ballad of a Post Born.

To denounce moralizing out of hand is to pronounce a moral judgment.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. i, p. 19.

10 Let us be moral. Let us contemplate existence.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 10.

11 Morality, said Jesus, is kindness to the weak; morality, said Nietzsche, is the bravery of the strong; morality, said Plato, is the effective harmony of the whole. Probably all three doctrines must be combined to find a perfect ethic; but can we doubt which of the elements is fundamental?

WILL DURANT, The Story of Philosophy.

12 Men talk of "mere Morality," which is much as if one should say "Poor God, with nobody to help him."

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

13 The moral system of the universe is like a document written in alternate ciphers, which change from line to line.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Calvinism.

14 Morality, when vigorously alive, sees farther than intellect.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Divus Cæsar.

15 It is for each man to procure himself the emotion he needs, and the morality which suits him.

RÉMY DE GOURMONT, Decadence.

16 We are doomed to be moral and cannot help ourselves.

JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, Morality.

17 Veracity is the heart of morality.

THOMAS HENRY HUXLEY, Universities Actual and Ideal.

18 Rhetoric takes no real account of the art in literature, and morality takes no account of the art in life.

J. W. KEUTCH, The Modern Temper, p. 154.

19 Morality without religion is only a kind of dead reckoning,—an endeavor to find our place on a cloudy sea.

LONGFELLOW, Kavanaugh. Ch. 13.

20 The difference between a moral man and a man of honor is that the latter regrets a discreditable act even when it has worked.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iv, p. 106.

I find the doctors and the sages
Have differed in all climes and ages,
And two in fifty scarce agree
On what is pure morality.

THOMAS MOORE, Morality, l. 15.

Never did mortal thought occur
In more unlucky hour than this;
For oh! I just was leading her
To talk of love and think of bliss.

THOMAS MOORE, The Snake.

There are many religions, but there is only one morality.

RUSKIN, Lectures on Art. Lect. II, sec. 37.

A moral fool.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act IV, sc. 2, l. 58.

Come, you are too severe a moralist.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act II, sc. 3, l. 301.

Absolute morality is the regulation of conduct in such a way that pain shall not be inflicted.

HERBERT SPENCER, Essays: Prison Ethics.

Morality knows nothing of geographical boundaries or distinctions of race.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. I, ch. 2.

If thy morals make thee dreary, depend upon it they are wrong.

R. L. STEVENSON, A Christmas Sermon.

Morals are a personal affair; in the war of righteousness every man fights for his own hand.

R. L. STEVENSON, Lay Morals.

There is no such thing as morality; it is not immoral for the tiger to eat the wolf, or the wolf the cat, or the cat the bird, and so on down; that is their business. . . . It is not immoral to create the human species—with or without intention, rather intended—exactly these things.

MARK TWAIN. (PAINK, Mark Twain.)

Morality is simply the attitude we adopt towards people we personally dislike.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act II.

Modern morality consists in accepting the standard of one's age.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray Ch. 6.

Morality was made for men, not men for morality.

ISAAC L. ZANDWIS, Children of the Ghetto,
Bk. II, ch. 6.

10 To show the world that now and then
Great ministers are mortal men.

DRYDEN, Epistles: To Sir G. Etherege, l. 43.

11 All things are born of earth; all things earth takes again. (Ἄπαντα γίνεταί χθονί, πάλιν τε λαμβάνεταί.)

EURIPIDES, Antiope. Frag. 48.

Earth all things bears and gathers in again. (Ἐν πάντα γίγνεται καὶ πάλιν κομίζεται.)

MEANDER, Monothikoi. No. 69.

12 Man loses all semblance of mortality by living in the midst of immortal blessings.

EPICURUS, Letter to Menæceus. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 135.)

13 To smell of a turf of fresh earth is wholesome for the body; no less are thoughts of mortality cordial to the soul.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane States.
Bk. iv.

14 All flesh is grass, and all the goodness thereof is as the flower of the field.

Old Testament. Isaiah, xl, 6.

All flesh is as grass.

New Testament. I Peter, i, 24.

Grass and hay, we are all mortal.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, Whimseys, 73. (1631)

All flesh is grass, and all its glory fades

Like the fair flow'r dishevel'd in the wind.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 261.

All flesh is hay

JOHN ERSKINE, Gospel Sonnets: Meditations
on Tobacco.

Since all flesh is grass ere 'tis hay,

O may I in clover lie snug,

And when old Time mows me away,

Be stacked with defunct Lady Mugg!

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses: The Beautiful Incendiary.

15 Mortality

Weights heavily on me like unwilling sleep.

KEATS, On Seeing the Elgin Marbles.

16 All that belongs to mortals is mortal; all things pass us by, or if not, we pass them by.

(Θυρά τὰ τῶν θνητῶν, καὶ πάντα παροχέται ἡμῶν: ἢ ἢ μὴ, ἀλλ' ἡμῶν πάντα παρερχόμεθα.)

LUCIAN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 31.)

17 How gladly would I meet

Mortality my sentence, and be earth

Insensible, how glad would lay me down
As in my mother's lap!

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. x, l. 775.

1 We are all mortal, and each is for himself.
(Nous sommes tous mortels, et chacun est pour soi.)

MOLIERE, L'École des Femmes. Act II, sc. 5, 4.

2 All that's bright must fade,—
The brightest still the fleetest;

All that's sweet was made

But to be lost when sweetest.

THOMAS MOORE, All That's Bright Must Fade.

3 Remember that thou art mortal. (Ménage' Gri-gnards ménages.)

PHOCYLIDES, Sententiae. No. 109.

Your lot is mortal; you wish for what is not mortal. (Sors tua mortalis; non est mortale quod optas.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. II, l. 56.

4 Consider
The lilies of the field whose bloom is brief:—
We are as they;

Like them we fade away

As doth a leaf.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Consider.

5 We cannot hold mortality's strong hand.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act IV, sc. 2, l. 82.

Gloucester: O, let me kiss that hand!

Learn: Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act IV, sc. 6, l. 134.

In them nature's copy's not eterne.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act III, sc. 2, l. 38.

6 Man's wretched state,
That flowers so fresh at morn, and fades at evening late.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. III, canto IX, st. 39.

All that in this world is great or gay

Doth as a vapour vanish and decay.

SPENSER, The Ruines of Time, l. 55.

7 The immortal could we cease to contemplate,
The mortal part suggests its every trait.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Her Portrait. St. 7.

Why have we longings of immortal pain,

And all we long for mortal?

FRANCIS THOMPSON, To the Setting Sun, l. 194.

8 Old age will come; disease may come before;
Fifteen is full as mortal as threescore.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire VI, l. 170.

All men think all men mortal but themselves.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night I, l. 424.

MOSES

9 And be buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Beth-peor: but no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxiv, 6.

By Nebo's lonely mountains,
On this side Jordan's wave,

In a vale in the land of Moab,

There lies a lonely grave;

But no man built that sepulchre,

And no man saw it e'er,

For the angels of God upturned the sod

And laid the dead man there.

Cecil Frances Alexander, The Burial of Moses.

This was the truest warrior

That ever buckled sword;

This the most gifted poet

That ever breathed a word;

And never earth's philosopher

Traced with his golden pen

On the deathless page truths half so sage

As he wrote down for men.

Cecil Frances Alexander, The Burial of Moses.

10 Now the man Moses was very meek, above all the men which were upon the face of the earth.

Old Testament: Numbers, xii, 3.

Moses was a merciful, meek man, and yet with what fury did he run through the camp, and cut the throats of three-and-thirty thousand of his dear Israelites that were fallen into idolatry.

Daniel Defoe, The Shortest Way with the Dissenters.

11 Whilst you are fighting (said Panurge) I will pray God for your victory, after the example of the chivalrous Captain Moses, leader of the people of Israel. (Pendant que combaterez, je prieray Dieu pour vostre victoire, à l'exemple du chevaleureux capitaine Moses, conducteur du peuple israëlique.)

Rabelais, Works. Bk. IV, ch. 37.

12 Softly his fainting head he lay

Upon his Maker's breast;

His Maker kiss'd his soul away,

And laid his flesh to rest.

ISAAC WATTS, The Death of Moses.

Like Moses to thyself convey,

And kiss my raptur'd soul away.

SAMUEL WESLEY, Collection Hymn.

Died of the kisses of the lips of God.

F. W. MYERS, St. Paul: Of Moses.

II—Mother: My Mother

37 Don't aim to be an earthly Saint, with eyes fixed on a star,

38 Just try to be the fellow that your Mother thinks you are.

39 WILL S. ADKIN, Just Try to Be the Fellow.

40 But the father's heart was broken,

41 And this is all he said:

42 "Their mother is in a casket

43 In the baggage coach ahead."

44 FRANK ARCHER, Mother. Later rewritten by Gusset L. Davis and renamed In the Baggage Coach Ahead. (1896)

45 My father urged me sair—my mother didn't speak.

46 But she looked in my face till my heart was like to break.

47 LADY ANNE BARNARD, Auld Robin Gray.

48 My mother! when I learn'd that thou wast dead;

49 Say, wast thou conscious of the tears I shed?

50 How'd thy spirit stir the sorrowing sea?

51 Wretch even then, did'st journey just begun?

Perhaps, thou gav'st me, though unseen, a kiss;
Perhaps a tear, if souls can weep in bliss—
Ah, that maternal smile! it answers.—Yes.

COWPER, On the Receipt of My Mother's Picture, l. 21.

You may have tangible wealth untold;
Caskets of jewels and coffers of gold.
Richer than I you can never be—
I had a mother who read to me.

STRICKLAND GILLMAN, The Reading Mother.

Now in memory comes my mother,
As she used, in years ago,
To regard the darling dreamers
Ere she left them till the dawn.
COATES KINSEY, Rain on the Roof.

I would weave you a song, my mother, . . .
Yours the tender hand Upon my breast;
Yours the voice Sounding ever in my ears.

MADEIRA MASON-MANHEIM, To My Mother.

Me, let the tender office long engage
To rock the cradle of repose age,
With lenient arts extend a Mother's breath,
Make languor smile, and smooth the bed of death;

Explore the thought, explain the asking eye,
And keep a while one parent from the sky!
POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 408.

So loving to my mother
That he might not betwixt the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act 1, sc. 2, l. 140.

Mother, thou sole and only, thou not these,
Keep me in mind a little when I die,
Because I was thy first-born

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Meleager.

Who ran to help me, when I fell,
And would some pretty story tell,
Or kiss the place to make it well?

My Mother.

ANN TAYLOR, My Mother.

Happy he
With such a mother! Faith in womankind
Beats with his blood, and trust in all things high

Comes easy to him, and tho' he trip and fall
He shall not blind his soul with clay.

TENNISON, The Princess. Pt. vii, l. 308.

St. Leon raised his kindling eye,
And lifts the sparkling cup on high;
"I ork to one," he said,

"Whose image never may depart,
Deep graven on this grateful heart,
Thy memory be dead."

St. Leon paused, as if he would Not breathe her name in careless mood.

Thus, lightly, to another,
Then bent his noble head, as though

To give that word the reverence due,
And gently said: "My Mother!"
Unknown, The Knight's Foos. Attributed to Winthrop Mackworth Praed and to Sir
Walter Scott, but not found in their works.

My mother was a lady, like yours you will allow.

III—Motherhood

Perhaps a better woman after all,
With chubby children hanging on my neck
To keep me low and wise.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. II, l. 515.

What art can a woman be good at? Oh, vain!
What art is she good at, but hurting her
breast

With the milk-teeth of babes, and a smile at the pain?

E. B. BROWNING, Mother and Poet.

The bearing and the training of a child
Is woman's wisdom.

TENNISON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 456.

Womanliness means only motherhood;
All love begins and ends there,—rooms enough,

But, having run the circle, rests at home.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Inn Album. Canto vii.

A mother who boasts two boys was ever accounted rich.

ROBERT BROWNING, Ivan Ivanovitch, l. 154.

Lo! at the couch where infant beauty sleeps,
Her silent watch the mournful mother keeps;
She, while the lovely babe unconscious lies,
Smiles on her slumbering child with pensive eyes.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. I, l. 225.

So for the mother's sake the child was dear,
And dearer was the mother for the child!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Sonnet: To a Friend Who Asked How I felt when the Nurse First Presented My Infant to Me.

I tell you there isn't a thing under the sun that needs to be done at all, but what a man can do better than a woman, unless it's bearing children, and they do that in a poor make-shift way; it had better ha' been left to the men.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede.

Do you perhaps think that nature gave women nipples as a kind of beauty spot, not for the purpose of nourishing their children?
FAVORITE, (Aulus Gellius, Noctes Atticæ.

² A grandam's name is little less in love,
Than is the doting title of a mother.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 299.

³ There will be a singing in your heart,
There will be a rapture in your eyes;
You will be a woman set apart,
You will be so wonderful and wise.
You will sleep, and when from dreams you start,
As of one that wakes in Paradise.
There will be a singing in your heart,
There will be a rapture in your eyes.
ROBERT W. SERVICE, The Mother.

⁴ And say to mothers what a holy charge

He governs land and sea,
He wields a mighty scepter
O'er lesser powers that be;
But a mightier power and stronger
Man from his throne has hurried,
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.
WILLIAM ROSS WALLACE, What Rules the World. (c. 1865)

They say man rules the universe,
That subject shore and main
Kneel down and bless the empery
Of his majestic reign;
But a sovereign, gentler, mightier,
Man from his throne has hurried,
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.
WILLIAM STEWART ROSS, The Hand That Rocks the Cradle. (Woman: Her Glory. Vol. ii, p. 420. 1894.)

"The hand that rocks the cradle"—but today there's no such hand.
It is bad to rock the baby, they would have us understand;
So the cradle's but a relic of the former foolish days,
When mothers reared their children in unscientific ways;
When they jounced them and they bounced them, those poor dwarfs of long ago—
The Washingtons and Jeffersons and Adamases, you know.

A mountain and a river are good neighbours.
 GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Ye crags and peaks, I'm with you once again!

O sacred forms, how proud you look!
 How high you lift your heads into the sky!
 How huge you are! how mighty and how free!
 JAMES SHIRAZIAN KNOWLES, William Tell, Act 1, sc. 2.

Mountains, ye are growing old, your ribs of granite are getting weak and rotten.
 E. M. MORGAN, Mountains.

A mountain was in labor, sending forth dreadful groans, and there was the highest expectation throughout the region. But it brought forth only a mouse. (Mons parturit, gemitus immanes ciens; Exatque in teris maxima expectatio At ille murem peperit.)

PHRAGRUS, Fables, Bk. iv, fab. 22, l. 1. The Latin rendering of Æsop's fable of The Mountain in Labor.

The mountain, groined in pangs of birth;
 Great expectation filled the earth;
 And lo! a mouse was born!

Metrical rendering of Phædrus, iv, 22, 1.

The mountain labors, and a ridiculous mouse is born. (Parturit montes, nascetur ridiculus mus.)

HOMER, Æneid, l. 124.

The old fable was made good, "A mountain is at travail and then a mouse is born." (Τὸ ὄρος ὄνυχον ἔσχευεν ὅτε μὴ σὺν ἀνθρώποις, ἀλλὰ μὴν μετὰ τῶν περὶ τὸν οὐρανὸν θεῶν.)

PHRAGRUS, Fables, Bk. iv, fab. 22, l. 1. In Æsop's fable, it is Jupiter, himself, who sends this just upon Ægeus, who expects "Some day you will think me a god."

Friends may meet,
 But mountains never greet.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. An English rendering of the Greek proverb, "Ὀφρ' ἀπὸ ὄρους ἀγέται," "Mountain will not mingle with mountain." The French have a proverb, dating from the fifteenth century, "Entre deux montagnes valée."

I found the proverb true that men have more privilege than mountains in meeting.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, The Penitents' Pilgrimage. (1618)

Friends possibly may meet, but mountains never.
 GEORGE WITHER, Dark Lantern, 29 (1653)

Mountains never shake hands. Their roots may touch: they may keep together some way up; but at length they part company, and rise into individual, insulated peaks. So it is with great men.

J. C. AND A. W. HARR, Guesses at Truth. MOUNTAIN AND MAHOMET, see ADAPTABILITY.

Mountains are the beginning and the end of all natural scenery.

RUSKIN, True and Beautiful: Mountains.

Who digs hills because they do aspire,
 Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, Act i, sc. 4, l. 5.

As mountains are for winds,
 That shake not, though they blow perpetually.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew, ii, 1, 141.

Longer shadows fall from lofty mountains
 (Majoresque cadunt altis de montibus umbræ.)

VERGIL, Eclogues, No. 1, l. 84.

II—Mountain: Ossa on Pelion

They were fain to pile Ossa on Olympus, and Pelion with it waving forests, on Ossa, so that heaven might be scaled. ("Ὄσσα δ' Ὀλύμπου μέλασσαν ὄσαν, ἀνὰ τὴν Ὀσάν Πήλιον ἀνελίφθησαν, τὴν ὀρεάν ἀμφότες εἶν.")

HOMER, Odyssey, Bk. xi, l. 315. An allusion to the myth of the Titans, who piled Mount Pelion and Mount Ossa upon Olympus in order to scale the dwelling of the gods, but were overthrown by Jupiter.

To fling Ossa upon Olympus, and to pile Pelion with all its growth of leafy woods on Ossa.

HOMER, Odyssey, xi, 315. (Bryant, tr.)

They were setting
 Ossa upon Olympus, and upon Steep Ossa heavy Pelion.

HOMER, Odyssey, xi, 315. (Chapman, tr.)

To the Olympian summit they essayed
 To heave up Ossa, and to Ossa's crown Branch-waving Pelion.

HOMER, Odyssey, xi, 315. (Cowper, tr.)

Heav'd on Olympus tottering Ossa stood;
On Ossa, Pelion nods with all his wood.
HUMPH, Odyssey, xl, 315. (Pope, tr.)

To pile Pelion upon Olympus. (Pelion im-posuisse Olympo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 4, l. 32.

Then the Almighty Father hurried his thun-derbolts, shattering Olympus, and dashed Pelion down from underlying Ossa. (Tum pater omnipotens misso periregit Olympum Fulmine et excussit subjectæ Pelion Ossæ.)

OVIN, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 134.

I would have you call to mind the strength of the ancient giants, that undertook to lay the high mountain Pelion on the top of Ossa, and set among those the shady Olympus.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 38.

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
To o'er-top old Pelion, on the skyish head
Of blue Olympus

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 274.

Thrice did they attempt to pile Ossa on Pelion, and over Ossa to roll leafy Olympus.
(Ter sunt conati Pelio Ossam Scilicet, atque Ossæ frondosum involvere Olympum)

VERON, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 281.

III—Mountain: Alp on Alp

Ah! as a pilgrim who the Alps doth pass,
Or Atlas' temples crown'd with winter's glass,

The airy Caucasus, the Apennine,
Pyrenees' cliffs where sun doth never shine,
When he some heaps of hills hath overwent,
Begins to think on rest, his journey spent,
Till, mounting some tall mountain, he do find
More heights before him than he left behind

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Flowers of Sion: Hymn of the Fairest Fair, l. 149. (1623)

So pleas'd at first the tow'ring Alps we try,
Mount o'er the vales, and seem to tread the sky;
Th' eternal snows appear already past,
And the first clouds and mountains seem the last:

But those attain'd, we tremble to survey
The growing labours of the lengthen'd way;
Th' increasing prospect tires our wand'ring eyes,
Hills peep o'er hills, and Alps on Alps arise!

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. II, l. 25. (1711)

Alps on Alps 'in clusters swelling,
Mighty, and pure, and fit to make
The ramparts of a Godhead's dwelling!

THOMAS MOORE, Rhymes on the Road, Extract l. 26.

Inexperienced travellers who, finding themselves for the first time in the Alps, imagine that they can clear ~~them~~ with every mountain, and, when they have reached the summit, are discouraged to see higher mountains in front of them.

ROUSSEAU, Emile. Bk. iv. Addison used the same comparison in the Spectator.

He was like the adventurous climber on the Alps, to whom the surmounting the most dangerous precipices and ascending to the most towering peaks only shows yet distinct heights and higher points of elevation.

SCOTT, of Napoleon, in his Life of Napoleon.

IV—Mountain: Description

Oh, thou Parnassus whom I now survey,
Not in the phrensy of a dreamer's eye,
Not in the fabled landscape of a lay,
But soaring snow-clad through thy native
sky,

In the wild pomp of mountain majesty!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 60.

To me
High mountains are a feeling, but the hum
Of human cities torture.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 72.

The Alps, the palaces of Nature.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 62.

Whose sunbright summit mingles with the sky.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 4.

I am homesick for my mountains—
My heroic mother hills—

And the longing that is on me

No solace ever stills.

BLISS CARMAN, The Cry of the Hill-born.

Hast thou a charm to stay the morning-star
In his steep course? So long he seems to pause

On thy bald, awful head, O sovran Blanc!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sunrise in the Vale of Chamouni, l. 1.

Thou, most awful Form!
Rise from forth thy silent sea of pines,
How silently! Around thee and above
Deep is the air and dark, substantial, black,
An æon mass, methinks thou piercest it
As with a wedge! But when I look again
It is thine own calm home, thy crystal shrine,
Thy habitation from eternity!
O dread and silent Mount! I gazed upon thee,
Till thou, still present to the bodily sense, Didst vanish from my thought: entranced in prayer

I worshipp'd thee invisible alone.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sunrise, l. 5.

Rise, O ever the!
Rise like a cloud of incense, from the Earth!
Thou kingly Spirit throned among the hills,
Thou dread ambassador from Earth to Heaven.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sunrise, l. 79.

Mont Blanc is the monarch of mountains;
They crown'd him long ago,
On a throne of rocks, in a robe of clouds,
With a diadem of snow.

BYRON, Manfred, Act i, sc. 1, l. 62.

Mountains are good to look upon
But do not look too long.
They are made of granite. They will break your heart.

GRACE HAZARD CONKLING, Mountains.

The mountains lie in curves so tender
I want to lay my arm about them
As God does.

OLIVE TILFORD DARGAN, Twilight.

As some tall cliff, that lifts its awful form, Swells from the vale, and midway leaves the storm,

Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,

Eternal sunshine settles on its head.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 189.

So the loud torrent, and the whirlwind's roar,
But bind him to his native mountains more.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 307.

On every mountain height is rest.
Goethe, Ein Gleiches.

Mountains have a dreamy way
Of folding up a noisy day
In quiet covers, cool and gray.

LEIGH BUCKNER HANES, Mountains in Twilight.

God give me mountains
With hills at their knees.

LEIGH BUCKNER HANES, Mountains.

Each cloud capped mountain is a holy altar;
An organ breathes in every grove.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson.

While far below men crawl in clay and clod,
Sublimely I shall stand alone with God.

MARY SINTON LEITCH, The Summit, Mount Everest.

The rocky summits, split and rent,
Foamed turret, dome, or battlement,
Or seemed fantastically set
With cupola or balustrade.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake, Canto I, st. 11.

Rock rich in green, and mountains high with pine,

That on the high equator ridgy rise,
Whence many a bursting stream auriferous plays.

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragment, Frag. 213.

What I do not presume to censure, I may have leave to lament.

EDMUND BURKE, American Taxation.

Ah! surely nothing dies but something mourns!

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto iii, st. 108.

Mourn, ye Graces and Loves, and all ye whom the Graces love. (Lugete, o Veneres Cupidinesque, Et quantumst hominum vemustiorum.)

CATULLUS, Odes, No. iii, l. 1.

Each lonely scene shall thee restore;
For thee the tear be duly shed;
Belov'd, till life could charm no more,
And mourn'd, till Pity's self be dead.

WILLIAM COLLINS, Dirge in Cymbeline.

Round, round the cypress bier

Where she lies sleeping,

On every turf a tear,

Let us go weeping!

GEORGE DARLEY, Dirge.

It is better to go to the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 2.

Forever honor'd and forever mourn'd.

HOMER, Iliad, Bk. xxii, l. 422. (Pope, tr.)

We lament by the ordinance of Nature.
(Nature imperio gemimus.)

That man was made to mourn.

BURNS, Man Was Made to Mourn.

Whom universal Nature did lament.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 60.

The air is full of farewells to the dying,
And mournings for the dead.

LONGFELLOW, Resignation.

The lonely mountains o'er,
And the resounding shore,
A voice of weeping heard, and loud lament;

From haunted spring, and dale
Edg'd with poplar pale,
The parting Genius is with sighing sent,
With flower-enwoven tresses torn
The Nymphs in twilight shade of tangled thickets mourn.

MILTON, On the Morning of Christ's Nativity,
l. 181.

1 Too innocent for coquetry, too fond for idle
scorning—

O friend, I fear the lightest heart makes sometimes heaviest mourning.

CAROLINE NORTON, Singen on the Rhine.

2 Then flash'd the living lightning from her eyes,
And screams of horror rend th' affrighted
skies.

Not louder shrieks to pitying Heav'n are cast,
When husbands, or when lapdogs, breathe their last;

Or when rich China vessels, fall'n from high.
In glitt'ring dust and painted fragments lie!

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto iii, l. 155.

3 Soft is the note, and sad the lay,
That mourns the lovely Rosabelle.

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Can. vi, st. 23.

III—Murder: According to Shakespeare

15 Murder most foul, as in the best it is;
But this most foul, strange and unnatural.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act i, sc. 5, l. 27.

18 Thus 'wás I, sleeping, by a brother's hand
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dis-patch'd:

Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhous'd, disappointed, unanel'd,
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act i, sc. 5, l. 74.

He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as
May;

And how his audit stands who knows save
heaven?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act III, sc. 3, l. 80.

At gaming, swearing, or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in't;
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven,
And that his soul may be as damn'd and black
As hell, whereto it goes.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act III, sc. 3, l. 91.

Oh me unhappy! I have found them lying
Close in each other's arms, and fast asleep.
But that I would not damn two precious souls,
Bought with my Saviour's blood, and send them, laden

With all their scarlet sins upon their backs,
Unto a fearful judgment, their two lives
Had met upon my rapier!

Lizzie Borden took an axe
And gave her Mother forty whacks;
When she saw what she had done,
She gave her Father forty-one.

UNKNOWN, Lizzie Borden. Commemorating the murder of Lizzie Borden's father and step-mother in Fall River, Mass., Aug.
1892.

There's no evidence of guilt,

Lizzie Borden,

That should make your spirit wilt,

Lizzie Borden;

Many do not think that you

Chopped your father's head in two,

It's so hard a thing to do,

Lizzie Borden.

The three men came in the dead of night,

In the wind and the rain and the ruts,

They held Mrs Shann and they took the
light,

And went up and stole them gits

UNKNOWN, The Shann Murder Case. A
Princeton undergraduate song of 1892, sung to the tune of Don't You Hear Dem Bells.
It celebrated the arrest of a local boarding-house keeper named Shann for the murder of her husband, supposedly by poison. It was found that his intestines had been removed, and Mrs. Shann alleged that three men had driven up at midnight, one had held her, while the other two mounted to the room where her husband's body lay and eviscerated it.

They cut his throat from ear to ear,

His brains they battered in;

His name was Mr. William Weare,

He dwelt in Lyon's Inn

THEODORE HOOK, William Weare. On the authority of John Lockhart. The lines, which refer to the murder of William Weare by John Thurtell in 1823, have also been ascribed to Lord William Lennox (see Sporting Review, 1839) and to William

Webb, alias "Happy Webb," a London linkman. According to Mr. E. L. Pearson, this jingle delighted Sir Walter Scott. It was at Thurtell's trial that the famous dictum was elicited that respectability consists in keeping a gig. See under RESPECTABILITY.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l 141 (1737)

Music has charms alone for peaceful minds.
POPE, Sappho to Phaoon, l 14.

Orpheus cou'd lead the savage race;
And trees uprooted left their place,
Sequacious of the lyre
But bright Cecilia rais'd the wonder high'r:
When to her organ vocal breath was giv'n,
An angel heard, and straight appear'd
Mistaking earth for heav'n

DAYTON, Song for St Cecilia's Day, St. 7

When Orpheus strikes the trembling lyre,
The streams stand still, the stones admire;
The listening savages advance,
The wolf and lamb around him trip,
The bears in awkward measures leap,
And tigers mingle in the dance
The moving woods attended as he play'd,
And Rhodopæ was left without a shade
ADDISON, A Song for St Cecilia's Day, l. 33.

Music's force can tame the furious beast.
Can make the wolf or foaming boar restrain
His rage, the lion drop his crested mane
Attentive to the song

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon Bk ii, l 67

Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain tops that freeze,
Bow themselves when he did sing.
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung, as sun and showers,
There had made a lasting spring.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII Act iii, sc. 1, l. 3.

Every thing that heard him play,
Even the fallows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep, or hearing, die.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 3 Sept., 1851. This entry marks Thoreau's discovery of his favorite musical instrument, to which he refers so often in subsequent pages of his journal.

Music hath caught a higher pace than any virtue that I know. It is the arch-reformer;
it hastens the sun to its setting; it invites him to his rising; it is the sweetest reproach, a measured satire

THOREAU, Winter: Journal, 8 Jan., 1842.

All music is what awakes from you when you are reminded by the instruments,
It is not the violins and the cornets, it is not the oboe nor the beating drums, nor the score of the baritone singer singing his sweet romanza, nor that of the men's chorus, nor that of the women's chorus.
It is nearer and farther than they.

WALT WHITMAN, A Song for Occupations.
Pt. iv.

Where gripping griefs the heart would wound,

With speed is wont to send redress.
UNKNOWN, A Song to the Lute in Music.
(PERCY, Reliques.)

When gripping grief the heart doth wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music with her silver sound . . .
With speedy help doth lead redress.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 5,
l. 128. An adaptation of the old song.

Sec Mus.: I say "silver sound," because musicians sound for silver.

Peter: O, I cry you mercy. . . . It is "music with her silver sound," because musicians have no gold for sounding.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 5,
l. 136.

Servant and master am I: servant of those dead, and master of those living. Through my spirit immortals speak the message that makes the world weep and laugh, and wonder

V—Music: Its Sweetness

1 "This is the way," laughed the great god Pan (Laughed while he sat by the river),
"The only way since gods began
To make sweet music, they could succeed."
Then, dropping his mouth to a hole in the reed,

He blew in power by the river.

E. B. BROWNING, A Musical Instrument. St. 5.

Sweet, sweet, sweet, O Pan!

Piercing sweet by the river!

Blinding sweet, O great god Pan!

The sun on the hill forgot to die,

And the lilies revived, and the dragon-fly

Came back to dream on the river.

E. B. BROWNING, A Musical Instrument. St. 6.

2 Such sweet

Soft notes as yet musician's cunning

Never gave the enraptured air.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Pied Piper. Pt. xii.

3 Music arose with its voluptuous swell.

Fading in music.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 45.

10 Heard melodies are sweet, but those unheard
Are sweeter; therefore, ye soft pipes, play on;

Not to the sensual ear, but, more endear'd,
Pipe to the spirit ditties of no tone.

KRATZ, Ode on a Grecian Urn. St. 2.

11 Who shall silence all the airs and madrigals that whisper softness in chambers?

MILTON, Areopagitica.

12 Can any mortal mixture of earth's mould
Breathe such divine enchanting ravishment?

MILTON, Comus, l. 244.

There let the pealing organ blow,

To the full voic'd quire below,

In service high, and anthems clear,

As may with sweetness, through mine ear,

Dissolve me into ecstasies,

And bring all Heav'n before mine eyes.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 161.

And ever against eating cares,

Lap me in soft Lydian airs,

Married to immortal verse

Such as the meeting soul may pierce

In notes, with many a winding bout

Of linked sweetness, long drawn out.

13 Hark! the numbers soft and clear

Gently steal upon the ear.

POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 12.

14 Here will we sit and let the sounds of music
Creep in our ears.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 55.

Wilt thou have music? hark! Apollo plays
And twenty caged nightingales do sing.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction. Sc. 2, l. 37.

This music crept by me upon the waters,
Allaying both their fury and my passion

With its sweet air.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 391.

15 If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it, that, surfeiting,

The appetite may sicken, and so die.

That strain again! it had a dying fall:
O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet sound,

That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Stealing and giving odour!

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 1, l. 1.

Matthew Arnold always contended that "sound" was a misprint for "south."

If music be the food of love,
Sing on, sing on, sing on.

Than South Sea food is music.

CHAMBERLAIN, Fatal Curiosity. Act I, sc. 2.

I pant for the music which is divine;

My heart in its thirst is a dying flower;

Forth the sound like enchanted wine;

Loosen the notes in a silver shower;

Like a herbless plume; for the gentle rain,

I gasp, I faint, till they wake again.

SHAKESPEARE, Music.

Sounds overflow the listener's brain,

So sweet, that joy is almost pain

SHAKESPEARE, Prometheus Unbound. Act II, sc. 2.

If I were to begin life again, I would devote it to music. It is the only cheap and unpunished rapture upon earth.

SWINBURNE, Bathurst. Act II, l. 13.

I shall loathe sweet tunes, whose a note grown

strong

Relents and recoils, and climbs and closes . . .

I shall hate sweet music my whole life long.

SWINBURNE, The Triumph of Time. St. 45.

The music had the heat of blood,

A passion that no words can reach;

We sat together, and understood

Our own heart's speech.

ARTHUR SYMONS, During Music.

There is sweet music here that softer falls

Than petals from blown roses on the grass . . .

Music that gentler on the spirit lies,

Than tired eyelids upon tired eyes;

Music that brings sweet sleep down from the blissful skies.

TURNER, The Lotus-Eaters: Choric Song

The mellow touch of music most doth wound

The soul, when it doth rather sigh than sound

ROBERT HERRICK, Soft Music.

Gentle and noble are their tempers framed,

That can be quickened with perfume and sounds.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Old's Banquet of Sense.

Fair Melody! kind Siren! I've no choice;

I must be thy sad servant evermore;

I cannot choose but kneel here and adore.

KEATS, Endymion Bk. IV, l. 303.

Seated one day at the organ,

I was weary and ill at ease,

And my fingers wandered idly

Over the noisy keys.

I do not know what I was playing,

Or what I was dreaming then,

But I struck one chord of music

Like the sound of a great Amen

ADLAIDE ANN PROCTER, The Lost Chord. As set to music, the 5th line reads, "I know not what I was playing."

As in an organ from one blast of wind

To many a row of pipes the soundboard breathes.

MILTON, Paradise Lost Bk. I, l. 708

I am never merry when I hear sweet music.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act V,

sc. 1, l. 69

Inconsolable to the minuet in Ariadne.

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act II, sc. 2.

A lamentable tune is the sweetest music to a woeful mind.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. II.

With a secret pain,

And smiles that seem akin to tears,

We hear the wild refrain.

WHITTIER, At Fort Royal

A quality

Which music sometimes has, being, the Art

Which is most nigh to tears and memory.

OSCAR WILDE, The Burden of It

VII—Music of the Spheres

There is music wherever there is harmony, order, or proportion; and thus far we may maintain the music of the Spheres; for these well-ordered motions and regular paces, though they give no sound to the ear, yet to the understanding they strike a note most full of harmony.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. II, sec. 9. (1642)

1 Her voice, the music of the spheres,
So loud, it deafens mortals' ears;
As wise philosophers have thought,
And that's the cause we hear it not.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. II, canto I, l. 617.

2 There's music in the sighing of a reed;
There's music in the gushing of a rill;
There's music in all things, if men had ears:
Their earth is but an echo of the spheres.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 5.
There is beauty in the howling of the blast,
There is grandeur in the growling of the gale.
W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act II.

And left so free mine ears,
That I might hear the music of the spheres,
And all the angels singing out of heaven.
GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Tears of Peace.

4 And after shewed he him the nine spheres,
And after that the melody heard he
That cometh of those spheres thrice three,
That well is of music and melody
In this world here, and cause of harmony
CHAUCER, The Parlement of Foules, l. 39.

Water and Air He for the Tenor chose,
Earth made the Base, the Treble Flame arose,
To th' active Moon a quick brisk stroke he gave,
To Saturn's string a touch more soft and grave.
The motions strait, and round, and swift, and slow,

And short and long, were mixt and woven so,
Dud in such artful Figures smoothly fall,
As made this decent measur'd Dance of all.
And this is Musick.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Davideis. Bk. I, l. 457.

6 Let me go where'er I will
I hear a sky-born music still: . . .
'Tis not in the high stars alone,
Nor in the cup of budding flowers,
Nor in the redbreast's mellow tone,
Nor in the bow that smiles in showers
But in the mud and scum of things
There alway, alway something sings.
EMERSON, Music.

8 When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy.
Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 7.

7 Ring out ye crystal spheres!
Once bless our human ears,
(If ye have power to touch our senses too)
And let your silver chime
Move in melodious time;
And let the bass of Heav'n's deep organ blow,

And with your pinfold harmony,
Make up full consort to th' angelic symphony.

MILTON, On the Morning of Christ's Nativity. St. 13.

11 Sit, Jessica. Look how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold:
There's not the smallest orb which thou behold'st

But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubins;
Such harmony is in immortal souls;
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 58.

12 When his veering gait
And every motion of his starry train
Seem governed by a strain
Of music, audible to him alone.

VIII—Music: The Flute

12 The flute is not an instrument which has a good moral effect; it is too exciting
ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. viii, ch. 6, sec. 5.

13 The soft complaining flute
In dying notes discovers
The woes of hopeless lovers,
Whose dirge is whisper'd by the warbling lute.
JOHN DRYDEN, Song for St. Cecilia's Day.

14 A velvet flute-note fell down pleasantly
Upon the bosom of that harmony, . . .
Somewhat, half song, half odor, forth did float

As if a rose might somehow be a throat.

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 32, l. 13.
- 3 Leave strumming at the doors of inns
To vagabonds and sharpeners.
Where men seek minstrels for their sins
They shall not lack for harpers.
LAURENCE HOUSMAN, Farewell to Town.
- 4 The harp that once through Tara's halls
The soul of music shed,
Now hangs as mute on Tara's walls
As if that soul were fled.
So sleeps the pride of former days,
So glory's thrill is o'er;
And hearts, that once beat high for praise,
Now feel that pulse no more.
THOMAS MOORE, The Harp that Once Through Tara's Halls.
- If the pulse of the patriot, soldier, or lover,
Have throbb'd at our lay, 'tis thy glory alone;
I was but as the wind, passing heedlessly over,
And all the wild sweetness I wak'd was thy own.
THOMAS MOORE, Dear Harp of My Country.
St. 2.
- 'Tis believ'd that this harp which I wake now for thee
Was a siren of old who sung under the sea.
THOMAS MOORE, Origin of the Harp.
- 5 The music of the zither, the flute, and the lyre enervates the mind. (Enervant animos citharæ, lotosque, lyraque.)
OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 753.
- 6 He touched his harp, and nations heard, entranced,
As some vast river of unfailing source,
Rapid, exhaustless, deep, his numbers flowed,
And opened new fountains in the human heart.
POLLOCK, The Course of Time. Bk. iv, l. 675.
- 7 We hanged our harps upon the willows.
Old Testament: Psalms, cxxvii, 2.
- 8 Hearken, my minstrels! which of ye all
Touched his harp with that dying fall,
So sweet, so soft, so faint,
It seemed an angel's whispered call
To an expiring minstrel?
SCOTT, The Bridal of Tioram. Canto i, st. 4.
- And tuned, to please a peasant's ear,
The harp a king had loved to hear.
SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel: Introduction, l. 25.

- 9 Strange! that a harp of a thousand strings
Should keep in tune so long.
ISAAC WATTS, Hymns and Spiritual Songs. Bk.
ii, No. 19.
- TO HARP ON THE SAME STRING, see under PROV-ERBS.

X—Music: The Lute

- 10 If thou would'st have me sing and play
As once I play'd and sung,
First take this time-worn lute away,
And bring one freshly strung.
THOMAS MOORE, *If Thou Would'st Have Me
Sing and Play*.
- 11 In a sadly pleasing strain
Let the warbling lute complain.
POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 5.
- 12 Do the sounds
Which slumber in the lute, belong alone
To him who buys the chords?
SCHILLER, Don Carlos Act iv, sc. 21.
- 13 As sweet and musical
As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 3, l. 342.
- Musical as is Apollo's lute.
MILTON, Comus, l. 478.
- 14 Some dead lute-player
That in dead years had done delicious things.
SWINBURNE, A Ballad of Life. St. 2.
- 15 It is the little rift within the lute
That by and by will make the music mute
And ever widening, slowly silence all.
TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 388.
- XI—Music and Discord
- 16 So discord oft in music makes the sweeter
lay.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto ii, st. 15.
- Discords make the sweetest airs,
And curses are a sort of prayers.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto i, l. 919.
- I never heard
So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 121.
- 17 You had that action and counteraction which,
in the natural and in the political world,
from the reciprocal struggle of discordant powers draws out the harmony of the universe.
EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.
- 18 As there is music uninform'd by art.
DARWIN, Epistles: To Sir Robert Howard, l. 1.

- 1 You think they are crusaders, sent
From some infernal clime,
To pluck the eyes of Sentiment,
And dock the tail of Rhyme,
To crack the voice of Melody,
And break the legs of Tune.
O. W. HOLMES, The Music-Grinders.
- 2 Fill'd the air with barbarous dissonance.
MILTON, Comus, l. 550.
- 3 Above the pitch, out of tune, and off the hinges.
RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 19.
- 4 Straining harsh discords and unpleasing
sharps.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet Act iii, sc. 5,
l. 28.
- Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh-sound-
ing,
Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore wounding.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 431.
- 5 How sour sweet music is,
When time is broke and no proportion kept!
So is it in the music of men's lives
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 5, l. 42.
- Take but degree away, untune that string,
And, bark what discord follows!
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc.
3, l. 109.
- And the vile squealing of the wry-neck'd fife.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
ii, sc. 5, l. 30.

XII—Music: The Musician

- 6 But God has a few of us whom he whispers
in the ear;
The rest may reason and welcome: 'tis we musicians know.
ROBERT BROWNING, Abt Vogler.
- Therefore to whom turn I but to thee, the in-effable Name?
Builder and maker, thou, of houses not made with hands!
ROBERT BROWNING, Abt Vogler.
- 7 From this did Paganini comb the fierce
Electric sparks, or to tenuity
Pull forth the inmost wailing of the wire—
No cat-gut could swoon out so much of
soul!
ROBERT BROWNING, *Red Cotton Night-cap
Country*. Pt. I.
- 8 When a musician bath forgot his note,
He makes as though a crumb stuck in his throat.
JOHN CLARKE, Paramiologia, 108. (1639)
- 9 Who, through long days of labor,
And nights devoid of ease,

- Still heard in his soul the music
Of wonderful melodies.
LONGFELLOW, The Day is Done.
- 10 He the best of all musicians,
He the sweetest of all singers.
LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. vi, l. 20.
- He is dead, the sweet musician!
He has gone from us forever,
He has moved a little nearer
To the Master of all music.
LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. xv, l. 56.
- 11 We are the music-makers,
And we are the dreamers of dreams,
Wandering by lone sea-breakers,
And sitting by desolate streams;
World-losers and world-forsakers,
Of whom the pale moon gleams:
Yet we are the movers and shakers
Of the world for ever, it seems.
ARTHUR O'SHAUGHNESSY, The Music-Makers.
- 12 The language of tones belongs equally to all mankind, and melody is the absolute language in which the musician speaks to every heart.
RICHARD WAGNER, Beethoven.
- 13 Is it not strange that sheep's guts should hale souls out of men's bodies?
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing Act
ii, sc. 3, l. 61.
- Music . . . horse-hairs and calves'-guts.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 32.
- The fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings on
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 3, 303.
- See to their desks Apollo's sons repair,—
Swift rides the rosin o'er the horse's hair!
In unison their various tones to tune,
Murmurs the hautboy, growls the hoarse bassoon;
In soft vibration sighs the whispering lute,
Tang goes the harpsichord, too-too the flute,
Brays the loud trumpet, squeaks the fiddle sharp,
Winds the French-horn, and twangs the tingling harp;
Till like great Jove, the leader, figuring in,
Attunes to order the chaotic din.
HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses: The Theatre, l. 20.
- A squeak's heard in the orchestra,
The leader draws across
The intestines of the agile cat
The tail of the noble horse.
GEORGE T. LANIGAN, The Amateur Orlando.
St. 8.
- 14 Come on and hear, come on and hear, Alexander's Ragtime Band.
IRVING BERLIN, Alexander's Ragtime Band.
(1911)

Alexander's Ragtime Band stamped a new character on American music.

ALEXANDER WOOLCOTT, Ironing Berlin.

Hence from their resounding prison the docile winds are loosed, and repay a melody for their liberty received. (Hinc venti dociles resonare se carcere solvunt, Et cantum acceptum pro libertate reperiunt.)

JEAN BAPTISTE DE SANTEUL, Inscription on an Organ.

There's a barrel-organ carolling across a golden street

In the city as the sun sinks low;
And the music's not immortal; but the world has made it sweet

And fulfilled it with the sunset glow.

ALFRED NOYES, The Barrel-Organ.

She played upon her music-box a fancy air by chance,

And straightway all her polka-dots began a lively dance.

PETER NEWELL, Her Polka-Dots.

I have a reasonable good ear in music.
Let's have the tongs and the bones

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 30.

Let the music knock it.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 4, l. 108.

He was a fiddler, and consequently a rogue
SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 25 July, 1711.

He could fiddle all the bugs off a sweet-potato-vine

STEPHEN VINCENT BENET, The Mountain Whip-poorwill

Gaily the troubadour Touched his guitar.

THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY, Welcome Me Home.

I'll strike the light guitar

H. S. VANDYKE, The Light Guitar.

How her fingers went when they moved by note

Through measures fine, as she marched them o'er

The yielding plank of the ivory floor.

BENJAMIN F. TAYLOR, How the Brook Went to Mill.

She ran her fingers o'er the ivory keys,
And shook a prelude from them as a bird
Shakes from its throat a song.

JAMES B. KEAYON, Twilight and Music.

Five-and-thirty black slaves,

Half-a-hundred white,

All their duty but to sing

For their Queen's delight.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Key-Board.

Ah, the gracious symphonies
Of the single-tips.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Key-Board.

Her ivory hands on the ivory keys

Strayed in a fitful fantasy,

Like the silver gleam when the poplar trees

Rustle their pale leaves listlessly.

OSCAR WILDE, In the Gold Room: A Hermonymy

'Tis the common disease of all your musicians, that they know no mean, to be entreated either to begin or end.

BEN JONSON, The Poetaster. Act ii, sc. 1.

MYSTERY

The lucrative business of mystery.

BURKE, A Vindication of Natural Society.

It happens, by a common vice of human nature, that we trust most to, and are most seriously frightened at, things which are strange and unknown. (Communi fit vitio nature, ut inusitatis atque incognitis rebus magis confidamus, vehementiusque extereamur.)

CÆSAR, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, sec. 4.

Plain truth will influence half a score of men at most in a nation, or an age, while mystery will lead millions by the nose.

HENRY ST. JOHN, Letter, 28 July, 1721

O'er all there hung a shadow and a fear;
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is haunted

THOMAS HOOD, The Haunted House.

Listen to voices in the upper air,
Nor lose thy simple faith in mysteries.

LONGFELLOW, The Castle-Builder.

If you go directly at the heart of a mystery, it ceases to be a mystery, and becomes only a question of drainage.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Where the Blue Begins, p. 9

There was the Door to which I found no Key;

There was the Veil through which I might not see.

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubáiyát St. 32. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

Shall any glazer see with mortal eyes,
Or any searcher know by mortal mind?

Veil after veil will lift—but there must be Veil upon veil behind

EDWIN ARNOLD, The Light of Asia. Bk. viii.

Sacred mysteries. (Arcana sacra.)

TACITUS, Germania. Sec. 18

Let not the conceit of intellect hinder thee from worshipping mystery.

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. v, ch. 9, sec. 6. Quoted as a proverb.

One nail drives out another, at least!

OWEN MEREDITH, The Portrait.

Drive not a second nail till the first be clinched.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1334.

² A nail in the wound. (Unguis in ulcere.)

CICERO, Pro Domo Sna. Ch. 5, sec. 12.

³ With tooth and nail.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 2. (Sylvester, tr.)

⁴ To the nail. (Ad unguem.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 5, l. 32; Ars Poetica, l. 294. In the sense of highly finished, see under MANNERS.

⁵ Speak the word, and I will help you to it upon the nail.

THOMAS NASHE, Works. Vol. iii, p. 59. (1596)

⁶ I'll never see't; for, I am sure, my nails Are stronger than mine eyes.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v, sc. 2, l. 223.

⁷ Falstaff: What, is the old king dead?

Pistol: As nail in door.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 3, l. 126. See also under DEATH.

⁸ Could I come near your beauty with my nails,

I 'd set my ten commandments in your face.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 3, l. 144. See also under FINGERS.

⁹ Thou hittest the nail on the head.

JOHN STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria, B 5. (c. 1520);

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure, ii, 1; HEYWOOD, Proverbs, l. 11; RABELAIS, Works, iii, 35.

¹⁰ Every nail driven should be as another rivet in the machine of the universe, you carrying on the work.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

¹¹ A white speck upon the nails made them as sure of a gift, as if they had it already in their pockets.

UNKNOWN, (Connoisseur. No. 59. 1755.)

¹² Cut your nails on Monday, you cut them for health;

Cut them on Tuesday, you cut them for wealth;

Cut them on Wednesday, you cut them for news;

Cut them on Thursday, a new pair of shoes;

Cut them on Friday, you cut them for sorrow;

Cut them on Saturday, a present to-morrow;

But he that on Sunday cuts his horns,

Better that he had never been born!

UNKNOWN (HENDERSON, Folk-Lore N. Coun- tiss, 18.)

Hippocrates has even left directions how we should cut our nails; that is, even with the ends of the fingers, neither shorter nor longer.

NAME

I—Name: Apothegms

¹³ I can call nothing by name if that is not his name. I call a cat a cat, and Rolet a rogue. (Je ne puis rien nommer si ce n'est pas son nom; J'appelle un chat un chat, et Rolet un fripon.)

BOILEAU, Satires Sat. l. 51.

To CALL A SPADE A SPADE, see under CANDOR.

He said true things, but called them by wrong names.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

¹⁴ Who hath not own'd, with rapture-smitten frame,

The power of grace, the magic of a name?

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 5.

¹⁵ "Whose name was writ in water!"

R. W. GILDER, Keats. See also under KEATS.

My name may have buoyancy enough to float upon the sea of time.

GLADSTONE, Elton Miscellany, Nov., 1827. Quoted.

¹⁶ And, lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest.

LEIGH HUNT, About Ben Adhem. For full quotation, see PHILANTHROPY.

¹⁷ Indeed there is a wondrous luck in names, sirs, And a main mystery, an' a man knew where To vind it.

BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub. Act iv, sc. 2.

Let us speak plain, there is more force in names Than most men dream of; and a lie may keep its throne a whole age longer if it skulk Behind the shield of some fair-seeming name.

J. R. LOWELL, A Glance Behind the Curtain, l. 251.

His opinion was that there was a strange kind of magic bias which good or bad names, as he called them, irresistibly impressed upon our characters and conduct. . . . How many Cæsars and Pompeys, he would say, by mere inspiration of the names, have been rendered worthy of them? And how many, he would add, are there, who might have done exceeding well in the world, had not their characters and spirits been totally depressed and Nicodemus'd into nothing?

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk i, ch. 19.

"Villas" now, with sounding names,
All name and doot.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Love's Landmarks.

1 There is no stone without its name. (Nullum est sine nomine saxum.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk ix, l. 973.

What is it? a learned man

Could give it a clumsy name.

Let him name it who can,

The beauty would be the same.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. II, sec. 2, st. 2.

2 The name that dwells on every tongue,
No minstrel needs.

DON JOSE MANRIQUE, Coplas de Manrique.
St. 54. (Longfellow, tr.)

3 My name is Legion: for we are many.

New Testament: Mark, v. 9.

A name and also an omen. (Nomen atque omen.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 625. (Act iv, sc. 4.)

4 I have said everything when I have named the man. (Dixi omnia, cum hominem nominavi.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk iv, epist. 22.

I name no parties.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, *What at Several
Weapons*. Act ii, sc. 3.

Canst thou bring me to the party?

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 67.

Although it has been considered an Americanism, the older English writers frequently used "party" in the sense of "person." Shakespeare so uses it more than a score of times.

5 O name for ever sad! for ever dear!

Still breath'd in sighs, still usher'd with a tear.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 31.

6 The name of the Lord is a strong tower.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 10. (Turris fortissima, nomen Domini.—Vulgate.)

But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings.

sc. 1, l. 44.

A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,

And harsh in sound to thine

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 64.

14 O good Horatio, what a wounded name,

Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 355.

When we were happy we had other names.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 4, l. 8

A name to be washed out with all men's tears

SWINBURNE, Aspects in Calydon: Albion.

15 Every godfather can give a name.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 93

Giving a name, indeed, is a poetic art; all poetry, if we go to that with it, is but a giving of names

CARLYLE, Journal, 18 May, 1832.

16 Who may, in the ambush of my name, strike
home.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i,
sc. 3, l. 41.

17 I cannot tell what the dickens his name is

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Act iii, sc. 2, l. 20. (1600)

What the dickens!

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Edward IV. Act iii, sc. 1.
(1600)

18 O, Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?

Deny thy father and refuse thy name:
Or if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 33.

I cannot love my lord, and not his name.
TENNYSON, The Marriage of Geraint, l. 92.

What's in a name? that which we call a rose
By any other name would smell as sweet.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 42.

That which we call a Snob, by any other name would still be snobbish.

The blackest ink of Fate was sure my lot,
And, when she writ my name, she made a blot.

GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, The Rehearsal. Act iii, sc. 2. (1671) Quoted by Fielding, Amelia. Bk. ii, ch. 9.

II—Name. Great Names

Some mighty man
Who beat his name on the drum of the world's car.

BAILEY, Festus: A Metropolis.

Strong towers decay,
But a great name shall never pass away.

PARK BENJAMIN, A Great Name.

But he whose name is graven in the white stone
Shall last and shine when all of these are gone.

ANNE BRADSTREET, Contemplations.

Our men scarce seem in earnest now:
Distinguished names!—but 'tis, somehow,
As if they played at being names
Still more distinguished, like the games
Of children

ROBERT BROWNING, Waring. Pt. i, sec. 6.

Round the whole world his dreaded name shall sound,
And reach to worlds, that must not yet be found.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Davidis. Bk. ii, l. 384. (1656)

Nations unborn your mighty names shall sound,
And worlds applaud that must not yet be found!

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 193. (1711)

Ill did those mighty men to trust thee with their story;

That hast forgot their names who reared thee
for their glory.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Poly-olbiem. Song iii, l. 61. Referring to Stonehenge.

Victorious names, who made the world obey;
Who while they liv'd, in deeds of arms ex-cell'd,

And after death for deities were held.

DRYDEN, The Flower and the Leaf, l. 518.

Navies nor armies can exalt the state, . . .
But one great name can make a country

It thinks their very names shine still and bright;

Apart—like glow-worms on a summer's
night.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. III, No. 5.

Yet shall thy name, conspicuous and sublime,
Stand in the spacious firmament of time,
Fixed as a star.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. II, No. 19.

A name "fast anchored in the deep abyss of time"
is like a star twinkling in the firmament, cold, silent, distant, but eternal and sublime.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk.

III—Name and Fame

See also Fame

For Good Name see Reputation

For my name and memory, I leave it to men's charitable speeches, to foreign nations, and to the next ages.

Copy of Verses of My Lord Brougham*.

He left a Consul's name to other times.

Linked with one virtue, and a thousand crimes.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto III, st. 24.

A poor traditional fame
Is all that's left to grace his name.

WILLIAM COMMER, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto XXIV.

Charm'd with the foolish whistlings of a bride.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, *Imitations of Vergil:
Georgics*. Bk. II, l. 486. (1647)

Ravish'd with the whistling of a name.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epia. IV, l. 383. (1733)

Only a herald, who that way doth pass, Finds his crackt name at length in the church-glass.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 33.

I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off.

Old Testament: Isaiah, lvi, 5.

Then, when this body falls in funeral fire,
My name shall live, and my best part aspire.

BEN JONSON, The Poetaster. Act I, sc. 1.

To see the laurel wreath, on high suspended,
That is to crown our name when life is ended.

KEATS, Sleep and Poetry, l. 35.

The surest pledge of a deathless name
Is the silent homage of thoughts unspoken.

LOWELL, The Herons of Elmwood.

Ah, with what lofty hope we came!
But we forget it, dream of fame,
And crawl, as I do here, a name.

J. R. LOWELL, For an Autograph. St. 6.

1 Oh, breathe not his name! let it sleep in the shade,
Where cold and unhonour'd his relics are laid.
THOMAS MOORE, Oh, Breathe Not His Name.

2 And like to one he seemed whose better day
Is over to himself, though foolish fame
Shouts louder year by year his empty name.
WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: Prologue: The Wanderers, l. 466.

A far babbling name,
The ceaseless seeker after praise and fame.
WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. ix, l. 189.

HENRY NEWBOLT, The Non-Combatant.

4 Perchance my name will be mingled with theirs
(For sitan et nostrum nomen miscebitur.)
OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 339.

5 O! while along the stream of time thy name
Expanded flies, and gathers all its fame,
Say, shall my little bark attendant sail,
Pursue the triumph, and partake the gale?
POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. iv, l. 383.

6 Then shall our names,
Familiar in his mouth as household words,
Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 51.

7 Yet leaving here a name, I trust,
That will not perish in the dust
SOUTHEY, My Days Among the Dead Are Passed.

8 One day I wrote her name upon the strand,
But came the waves and washed it away:
Again I wrote it with a second hand,
But came the tide, and made my pains his prey.

Vain man, said she, that dost in vain essay
A mortal thing so to immortalize!
For I myself shall like to this decay,
And eke my name be wiped out likewise.
Not so (quod I) let baser things devise
To die in dust, but you shall live by fame:
My verse your virtues rare shall eternize,
And in the heavens write your glorious name.
SPENSER, Amoretti Sonnet lxxv.

Alone I walked on the ocean strand,
A pearly shell was in my hand;
I stooped, and wrote upon the sand
My name, the year, the day.
As onward from the spot I passed,
One lingering look behind I cast,
A wave came rolling high and fast,
And washed my lines away.
HAWKIN FLAG GOULD, A Name in the Sand.

9 No sound is breathed so potent to coerce
And to conciliate, as their names who dare
For that sweet mother-land which gave them birth

Nobly to do, nobly to die.
TENNYSON, Tiresias, l. 116.

10 I won a noble fame;
But with a sudden frown,
The people snatched my crown,
And, in the mire, trod down
My lofty name.
THEODORE TILTON, Sir Marmaduke's Matchings.

11 Keeps from age to age an ever-living name.
(Æternumque tenet per sæcula nomen.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 235.

12 When once the trumpet of fame has sounded
A poor man's name, farewell his repose for ever.
VOLTAIRE, Letter to M. Capperonnier, 1768.

IV—Name: Women's Names

13 Oh! no! we never mention her,
Her name is never heard;
My lips are now forbid to speak
That once familiar word

T. H. BAYLY, Oh! No! We Never Mention Her.
There's a name that's never spoken,
And a mother's heart half-broken.
There is just another missing from the old home, that is all;
There is still a memory living,
There's a father unforgiving,
And a picture that is turn'd toward the wall.
CHARLES GRAHAM, The Picture That Is Turned Toward the Wall. (1891) Suggested by a scene from the play Blue Jeans.

14 I have a passion for the name of "Mary,"
For once it was a magic sound to me,
And still it half calls up the realms of fairy,
Where I beheld what never was to be.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 4.

15 Sweet as the sweetest of melodies
Filling my soul with ecstasy,
Sweeter than all things to me,
The sound of my sweetheart's name.
WILL D. COBB, The Sound of My Sweetheart's Name (1901)

16 I ask'd my fair one happy day,
What I should call her in my lay;
By what sweet name from Rome or Greece;
Lalage, Neæra, Chloris,
Sappho, Lesbia, or Doris,
Arethusa or Lucretia.
"Ah!" replied my gentle fair,
"Beloved, what are names but air?
Choose thou whatever suits the time!"

Call me Sappho, call me Chioris,
Call me Lalage or Doris,
Only, only call me Thine."

S. T. COLERIDGE, Names.

1 Brown's for Lalage, Jones for Lelia,
Robinson's bosom for Beatrice glows,
Smith is a Hamlet before Ophelia,
The glamour stays if the reason goes!
Every lover the years disclose
Is of a beautiful name made free.
One befriends, and all others are foes.
Anna's the name of names for me.

W. E. HENLEY, Ballade of Ladies' Names.

Ruth like a gillyflower smells and blows,
Sylvia prattles of Arcadée,
Sybil mystifies, Connie crows,
Anna's the name of names for me!
W. E. HENLEY, Ballade of Ladies' Names.

2 She who comes to me and pleadeth
In the lovely name of Edith.

LONGFELLOW, Lines in a Private Album.

3 For women's names keep murmuring like the wind
The hidden things that none for ever tells.
ERNEST REYS, Words.

4 O Sophonisba! Sophonisba, O!

JAMES THOMSON, Sophonisba Act III, sc. 2.
When this line was spoken, at the first performance of the play, an exasperated spectator stood up in his box and cried out, "O Jamie Thomson! Jamie Thomson, O!" and the line was altered to, "O Sophonisba! I am wholly thine!"

5 "What is thy name, fair maid?" quoth he.
"Penelophon, O King!" quoth she.

UNKNOWN, King Cophetua and the Beggar Maid. (Percy, Reliques.) Shakespeare, quoting this old ballad in Love's Labour's Lost (iv, 1, 65), gives the beggar maid's name as Zenelophon.

6 Your name hangs in my heart like a bell's tongue.

ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac, Act III, sc. 6.

7 I do beseech you—
Chiefly, that I might set it in my prayers—
What is your name?

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, Act III, sc. 1, l. 34.

V—Names Sweet and Ugly

8 The very names of things belov'd are dear,
And sounds will gather beauty from their sense,

As many a face thro' love's long residence
Groweth to fair instead of plain and sere.
ROBERT BROWNE, Griefs of Love, Sonnet 4.

9 What a name! Was it love or praise?
Speech half-awake or song half-awake?

I must learn Spanish, one of these days,
Only for that slow sweet name's sake.
ROBERT BROWNING, The Flower's Name.

10 Thrice happy he whose name has been well spelt

In the despatch.

BYRON, Don Juan, Canto viii, st. 18.

11 Oh, Amos Cottle!—Phœbus! what a name!
BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 399.

A measly little gum-drop name like Percival.
HARRY LEON WILSON, The Spenders, p. 344.

12 Pride lives with all; strange names our rustic
give

To helpless infants, that their own may live.
GEORGE CRAEKE, The Parish Register, Pt. I.

With unpronounceable, awful names.

BRET HARTE, The Tale of a Pony.

13 A name?—if the party had a voice,
What mortal would be a Bugg by choice,
As a Hogg, a Grubb, or a Chubb rejoice,
Or any such nauseous blazon?
Not to mention many a vulgar name,
Which would make a doorplate blush for shame,

If doorplates were not so brazen!

HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg's Her Christening.

14 Have heard her sigh and soften out the name.
WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Gebr. Pt. v, l. 145.

15 And if his name be George, I'll call him
Peter:

For new-made honour doth forget men's names.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, Act I, sc. 1, l. 186.

16 As Stephen Sly and old John Naps of Greece
And Peter Turph and Henry Pimpemell
And twenty more such names and men as these

Which never were nor no man ever saw.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Introduction. Sc. 2, l. 95.

17 And last of all an Admiral came,
A terrible man with a terrible name,—
A name which you all know by sight very well,

But which no one can speak, and no one can spell.

SOUTHEY, The March to Moscow, St. 8.

18 But Thomas, and William, and such pretty
names,

Should be cleanly and harmless as doves or
as lambs,

Those lovely and innocent creatures.

ISAAC WATTS, Innocent Play.

- 1 What with Gertrude, Ep and Ein,
When I hear the name of Stein,
I go creepy down the spine.
UNKNOWN, Precious Steins.
There's a wonderful family called Stein—
There's Gert, and there's Epp, and there's Ein;
Gert's poems are junk,
Epp's statues are junk,
And no one can understand Ein.
UNKNOWN, The Steins.

VI—Name: Nicknames

- 2 No orator can measure in effect with him who can give good nicknames.
EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.
3 A nickname is the heaviest stone that the devil can throw at a man.
HAZLITT, Essays: On Nicknames. Quoted.
Of all eloquence a nickname is the most concise; of all arguments the most unanswerable.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Essays: On Nicknames.
4 Nicknames and whippings, when they are once laid on, no one has discovered how to take off.
W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Du Paty.
5 His intimate friends called him "Candle-ends."
And his enemies, "Toasted-cheese."

7 Called me wessel, Sammy—a wessel of wrath.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 22.
8 I am called "Archibald the All-right"—for I am infallible.
W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act I.
9 Then you can call me "Timbertoes,"—thet's wut the people likes;
Sutthin' combinin' morril truth with phrases
sech ez strikes.
J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. I, No. 8.
10 Out of his surname they have coined an epithet for a knave, and out of his Christain name a synonym for the Devil.
MACAULAY, Essays: Niccolo Machiavelli.
Nick Machiavel had ne'er a trick
(Tho' he gave his name to our Old Nick),
But was below the least of these,
That pass f' th' world for holiness.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. III, canto I, l. 1213.

NAPOLEON

I—Napoleon I

1 Crushed was Napoleon by the northern Thor
Who knocked his army down with icy hammer

BYRON, Beppo St 61

And kings crept out again to feel the sun
E B BROWNING, Crowned and Buried, St 11

2 The instinct of active, brave, able men, throughout the middle class everywhere, has pointed out Napoleon as the incarnate Democrat

EMERSON, Representative Men Napoleon
Napoleon is thoroughly modern, and, at the highest point of his fortunes, has the very spirit of the newspapers

EMERSON, Representative Men Napoleon

When you have penetrated through all the circles of power and splendor, you were not dealing with a gentleman, at last, but with an impostor and a rogue

EMERSON, Representative Men Napoleon

3 Napoleon was a man! His life was the stride of a demigod

GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann, 1828

You are a man!

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, closing a conversation with Goethe at Erfurt, 2 Oct., 1808

4 Yet spirit immortal, the tomb cannot bind thee,

But, like thine own eagle that soars to the sun,

Thou springest from bondage and leavest behind thee

A name which before thee no mortal hath won

LYMAN HEATH, The Grave of Bonaparte

A little while ago I stood by the tomb of the old Napoleon, a magnificent tomb of gilt and gold, and could see the only woman who ever loved him pushed aside

R G INGERSOLL, Reverie at the Tomb of Napoleon

I wish my ashes to repose on the banks of the Seine, in the midst of the French people I have loved so well

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Codicil to His Will, dated 16 April, 1821

I don't care a twopenny damn what becomes of the ashes of Napoleon Bonaparte

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, at (FARMER AND HENLEY, Stang and Its Analogues)

5 Napoleon healed through sword and fire the sick nation

HEINE (SCHERER History of German Literature Bk II, p 116)

6 Napoleon was whipped because he carried a chip on his shoulder this is the one thing that the gods who write the laws of nations will not palliate nor excuse

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine Vol II, p 45

7 England took the eagle and Austria the eagle (L Angleterre prit l'aigle et l'Autriche l'aiglon)

VICTOR HUGO applying for the first time the word l'Aiglon to Napoleon's son Napoleon had transferred the imperial eagles of Rome to his own standard

God was bored by him

VICTOR HUGO Referring to Napoleon

8 Bonaparte's wisdom was in his thoughts, and his madness in his passions (La sagesse de Bonaparte etait dans ses pensees, et la folie dans ses passions)

JOUBERT, Pensees No 221

9 Even the great Napoleon could not dine twice (Meme le grand Napoleon ne pouvait pas diner deux fois)

ALPHONSE KARR, Le Chemin le Plus Court

10 Grand, gloomy, and peculiar, he sat upon the throne a sceptred hermit wrapped in the solitude of his own originality

CHARLES PHILLIPS, The Character of Napoleon

11 Although too much of a soldier among sovereigns, no one could claim with better right to be a sovereign among soldiers

WALTER SCOTT, Life of Napoleon

12 What! alive, and so bold, O earth?

SHELLEY, On Hearing the News of the Death of Napoleon

It is no longer an event, it is only a piece of news TALLEYRAND, when some one exclaimed "What an event!" on learning of Napoleon's death at St Helena (COOPER, Talleyrand)

13 Gentlemen we have a master this young man does everything, can do everything, and will do everything (Messieurs nous avons un maître ce jeune homme fait tout, peut tout, et veut tout)

SIXTIES, Address, to the National Assembly, speaking of Napoleon

1 No law but his own headstrong will he knew,
No counsellor but his own wicked heart

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Ode, Written during the Negotiations with Buonaparte

Pre eminently bad among the worst
SOUTHEY, The Poet's Pilgrimage to Waterloo
Pt IV, st 15

2 He thought to quell the stubborn hearts of oak,
Madman!—to chain with chains and bind with bands

That island queen who sways the floods and lands

We taught him lowlier moods

TENNYSON Buonaparte

Though more than half the world was his,
He died without a rood his own,
And borrowed from his enemies

Six feet of ground to lie upon

I—Nation Definitions

6 The true wealth of a country lies in its men and women If they're mean, unhappy and ill the country is poor

RICHARD ALDINGTON Colonel's Daughter, p 51

And you prate of the wealth of nations, as if it were bought and sold,

The wealth of nations is men, not silk and cotton and gold

RICHARD HOVEN, Peace

7 A people is but the attempt of many
To rise to the completer life of one—

And those who live as models for the mass

Are singly of more value than they all
Such man are you, and such a time is this,
That your sole fate concerns a nation more
Than much apparent welfare

ROBERT BROWNING, Luria Act v, l 334

8 I am firm in my conviction that there is no calamity which a great nation can invite which equals that which follows from a supine submission to wrong and injustice, and the consequent loss of national self-respect and honor beneath which are shielded and defended a people's safety and greatness

GROVER CLEVELAND, Message to Congress on Venezuelan question, 17 Dec, 1895 Based on draft by Richard Olney Secretary of State For contrasted texts see NEVINS Grover Cleveland, p 640

That nation is worthless which does not joyfully stake everything in defense of her honor

SCHILLER, Die Jungfrau von Orléans Act 4, sc
5, l 81

The nation's honor is dearer than the nation's comfort, yes, than the nation's life itself

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, 29 Jan 1916

9 A nation is the unity of a people King and parliament are the unity made visible

S T COLERIDGE, Table Talk

10 Individuals may form communities but it is institutions alone that can create a nation

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, at Manchester, 1866

Nationality is the miracle of political independence Race is the principle of physical analogy

BENJAMIN DISRAELI Speech, House of Commons, 9 Aug 1848

11 A nation is a thing that lives and acts like a man, and men are the particles of which it is composed

1 Men, upon the whole,
Are what they can be—nations, what they would

E B BROWNING Casa Guada Windows Pt 1
Happy are all free peoples, too strong to be dis-
possessed
But blessed are those among nations who dare to be strong for the rest!

E B BROWNING, A Court Lady, l 39

2 Nations save, but do not revenge themselves
GEORGES JACQUES DANTON (Taine, French Revolution)

3 How much more are men than nations!
EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims Progress of Culture

4 Justice is as strictly due between neighbor nations as between neighbor citizens. A highwayman is as much a robber when he plun-ders in a gang as when single, and a nation that makes an unjust war is only a great gang

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter, 14 March, 1785

5 How wide the limits stand
Between a splendid and a happy land
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l 267

A land of levity is a land of guilt
YOUNG, Night Thoughts Preface

6 The nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance
Old Testament Isaiah, xl, 15

7 No nation is permitted to live in ignorance with impunity

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings Vol xix, p 407

If a nation expects to be ignorant and free, it expects what never was and never will be

THOMAS JEFFERSON Writings Vol xiv, p 382

8 Wise nature ever, with a prudent hand,
Dispenses various gifts to ev'ry land,
To ev'ry nation frugally imparts
A genius fit for some peculiar arts

SOAME JENYNS, The Art of Dancing Canto

SHAKESPEARE, Thus Andronicus Act i, sc 1, 30

13 To rise by others' fall
I deem a losing gain,
All states with others' ruin built

To run run amain
ROBERT SOUTHWELL I Envy Not Their Hop

A nation never falls but by suicide

R W EMERSON, Journal, 1861

Until nations are generous they will never be wise, true policy is generous policy, all bitterness, selfishness, etc., may gain small ends, but lose great ones

WASHINGTON IRVING, Letter, March, 1823

14 A nation's institutions and beliefs are determined by its character

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics Pt ii, ch 16,
sec 5

15 The true greatness of nations is in those qualities which constitute the greatness of the individual

CHARLES SUMNER Oration on the True Grandeur of Nations

16 There was never a nation great until it came to the knowledge that it had nowhere in the world to go for help

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER, Studies Comments on Canada Ch 3

17 Just pride is no mean factor in a State,
The sense of greatness keeps a nation great

WILLIAM WATSON, The True Patriotism

18 No nation is fit to sit in judgment upon any other nation

WOODROW WILSON, Address, N Y, 20 April,

III—Nation Little Nations

19 The day of small nations has passed away, the day of empires has come

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech Birmingham,
13 May, 1904 See also under IMPERIALISM

20 There is no such thing as a small country
The greatness of a people is no more affected by the number of its inhabitants than the greatness of an individual is measured by his height Whoever presents a great example is great

VICTOR HUGO, Speech, at Geneva, 17 Nov., 1862

21 The nations which have put mankind and posterity most in their debt have been small states—Israel, Athens, Florence, Elizabethan England

DEAN W R INGE (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge No 181)

22 A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation

Old Testament Isaiah, lx, 22

I—Nature: Definitions

3 Nature means Necessity

P J BAILEY, Festus Dedication

By fate, not option, frugal Nature gave
One scent to hyson and to wall flower,
One sound to pine-groves and to waterfalls,
One aspect to the desert and the lake
It was her stern necessity

EMERSON, Xenophanes

4 Whatever befalls in accordance with Nature should be accounted good (Omnia autem quæsecundum naturam fiunt, sunt habenda in bonis)

CICERO, De Senectute Ch. xix, sec 71

6 And what if all of animated nature
Be but organic harps diversely fram'd,
That tremble into thought, as o'er them sweeps,

Plastic and vast, one intellectual breeze,
At once the soul of each, and God of all?

S T COLERIDGE, The Eolian Harp, l 44

6 Nature is a rag-merchant, who works up every shred and ort and end into new creations, like a good chemist whom I found the other day, in his laboratory, converting his old shirts into pure white sugar

EMERSON, Conduct of Life Considerations by the Way

7 Nature is what you may do Nature is the tyrannous circumstance, the thick skull, the sheathed snake, the ponderous rock-like jaw necessitated activity, violent direction

EMERSON, Conduct of Life Fate

Nature is no spendthrift, but takes the shortest way to her ends

EMERSON, Conduct of Life Fate

Nature is a mutable cloud which is always and never the same

EMERSON, Essays, First Series. History

Nature, as we know her, is no saint She comes eating drinking and sinning

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series Experience

8 The great mother Nature will not quite tell her secret to the coach or the steamboat, but says, One to one my dear is my rule also, and I keep my enchantments and oracles for the religious soul coming alone, or as good as alone in true-love

EMERSON, Letter to Mrs Emerson, 20 May, 1871

9 Nature, in her most dazzling aspects or stupendous parts, is but the background and theatre of the tragedy of man

JOHN MORLEY, Critical Miscellanies Byron.

III—Nature Love of Nature

18 And who loves Nature more
Than he whose painful art
Has taught and skilled his heart
To read her skill and lore?

ROBERT BRIDGES, Spring Ode ii, st 4

19 To him who in the love of Nature holds
Communion with her visible forms she speaks
A various language, for his gayer hours
She has a voice of gladness, and a smile
And eloquence of beauty, and she glides
Into his darker musings, with a mild
And healing sympathy, that steals away
Their sharpness ere he is aware

BRYANT, Thanatopsis, l 1

20 Set him before a hedgerow in a lane,

And he was happy all alone for hours

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Eduard Crookhurst

1 To sit on rocks, to muse o'er flood and fell,
To slowly trace the forest's shady scene,
Where things that own not man's dominion dwell

And mortal foot hath ne'er or rarely been,
To climb the trackless mountain all unseen,
With the wild flock that never needs a fold,
Alone o'er steep and foaming falls to lean,
This is not solitude, 'tis but to hold Converse with Nature's charms and view her stores unroll'd

BYRON, Childe Harold Canto II, st. 25

Dear Nature is the kindest mother still Though always changing, in her aspect mild,
From her bare bosom let me take my fill,
Her never wean'd though not her favour'd child
BYRON, Childe Harold Canto II, st. 37

There is a pleasure in the pathless woods,
There is a rapture on the lonely shore,
There is society where none intrudes
By the deep Sea and music in its roar,
I love not Man the less but Nature more,
From these our interview^s in which I steal
From all I may be, or have been before
To mingle with the Universe, and feel
What I can ne'er express, yet cannot all conceal
BYRON, Childe Harold Canto IV, st. 178

2 I am a part of all you see
In Nature part of all you feel.
I am the impact of the bee
Upon the blossom in the tree
I am the sap—that shall reveal
The leaf the bloom—that flows and flutes
Up from the darkness through its roots

17 'Tis not for golden eloquence I pray,
A godlike tongue to move a stony heart—
Methinks it were full well to be apart
In solitary uplands far away,
Betwixt the blossoms of a rosy spray,
Dreaming upon the wonderful sweet face
Of Nature in a wild and pathless place
FREDERICK TENNYSON, Sonnet

1 The sounding cataract
 Haunted me like a passion the tall rock,
 The mountain, and the deep and gloomy wood,
 Their colours and their forms, were then to me
 An appetite, a feeling and a love,
 That had no need of a remoter charm,
 By thought supplied

The dancing Naiads through the dewy meads
 COWPER, Table Talk, l 690

9 Till o'er the wreck emerging from the storm,
 Immortal Nature lifts her changeeful form Mounts from her funeral pyre on wings of flame,

And soars and shines another and the same ERASMUS DARWIN, Botanic Garden Pt. I, canto IV, l 389

10 For earth's little secret and innumerable ways,
 For the carol and the colour, Lord, we bring What things may be of thanks, and that Thou hast lent our days

Eves to see and ears to hear and lips to sing
 JOHN DRINKWATER, Morning Thanksgiving

11 When you defile the pleasant streams
 And the wild bird's abiding place,

You massacre a million dreams

And cast your spittle in God's face

JOHN DRINKWATER, Olton Pools. To the De-filers

12 Ever charming, ever new,
 When will the landscape tire the view?

JOHN DYER, Grongar Hill, l 102

To sit in the shade on a fine day and look upon verdure is the most perfect refreshment
 JANE AUSTEN, Mansfield Park Ch. 9

13 There is nothing so wonderful in any particular landscape as the necessity of being beautiful under which every landscape lies

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series Nature

Miller owns this field, Locke that, and Manning the woodland beyond. But none of them owns the landscape. There is a property in the horizon which no man has but he whose eye can integrate all the parts, that is, the poet. This is the best part of these men's farms, yet to this their warranty-deeds give no title

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures
 Nature

14 How cunningly nature hides every wrinkle of her inconceivable antiquity under roses and violets and morning dew!

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

The rounded world is fair to see,
Nine times folded in mystery:
Though baffled seers cannot impart
The secret of its laboring heart,
Throb thine with Nature's throbbing breast,
And all is clear from east to west.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

She paints with white and red the moors
To draw the nations out of doors.

EMERSON, Nature.

Nature never spares the opium or nepenthe, but wherever she mars her creatures with some deformity or defect, lays her poppies plentifully on the bruise, and the sufferer goes joyfully through life, ignorant of the ruin, and incapable of seeing it, though all the world point their finger at it every day.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

There's a gowd in the breast of the primrose pale,
An' siller in every blossom;
There's riches galore in the breeze of the vale,
And health in the wild wood's bosom.

JAMES HOOE, There's Gowd in the Breast.

There ev'ry bush with Nature's music rings,
There ev'ry breeze bears health upon its wings.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 220.

Which of us is not sometimes affected, almost to despair, by the splendid vision of earth and sky?

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry.

The soft south-wind, the flowers amid the grass,
The fragrant earth, the sweet sounds everywhere,
Seemed gifts too great almost for man to bear.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Story of Rhodope, St. 23.

3
We are what suns and winds and waters make us;

The mountains are our sponsors and the rills Fashion and win their nurslings with their smiles.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Hellenics.

4 Ye marshes, how candid and simple and nothing-withholding and free
Ye publish yourselves to the sky and offer yourselves to the sea!

SIMNEY LANIER, The Marshes of Glynn.

Tolerant plains, that suffer the sea and the rains
and the sun,
Ye spread and span like the catholic man who hath mightily won
God out of knowledge and good out of infinite pain
And sight out of blindness and purity out of a stain.

SIMNEY LANIER, The Marshes of Glynn.

Nature with folded hands seemed there,

Kneeling at her evening prayer!

LONGFELLOW, Voces of the Night: Prelude,
St. 11.

5
Over our manhood bend the skies;
Against our fallen and traitor lives
The great winds utter prophecies;
With our faint hearts the mountain strives;
Its arms outstretched, the druid wood
Waits with its benedictic;
And to our age's drowsy blood
Still shouts the inspiring sea.

J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal:
Prelude to Part First.

6
Wherefore did Nature pour her bounties forth
With such a full and unwithdrawing hand, Covering the earth with odours, fruits, and flocks,
Thronging the seas with spawn innumerable,
But all to please, and sate the curious taste?
MILTON, Comus, l. 710.

7
Oh, Brignall banks are wild and fair,
And Greta woods are green,
And you may gather garlands there
Would grace a summer queen.
SCOTT, Rocheby, Canto iii, st. 16.

8
Nature seems unspeakably grand, when, plunged in a long reverie, one bears the rippling of the waters upon a solitary strand, in the calm of a night still enkindled and luminous with the setting moon.

ETIENNE PIVART DE SENANCOUR, Obermann.

9
Nature's unchanging harmony.
SHELLEY, Queen Mab, Canto ii.

10
My banks they are furnish'd with bees,
Whose murmur invites one to sleep;
My grottoes are shaded with trees,
And my hills are white-over with sheep.
SHEMSTONE, A Pastoral Ballad: Pt. ii, Hope.

11
Once, when the days were ages,
And the old Earth was young,
The high gods and the sages
From Nature's golden pages
Her open secrets wrung.
R. H. STODDARD, Brahma's Answer.

12
The whole wood-world is one full peal of praise.
TENNYSON, Balin and Balan, l. 444.

13
I care not, fortune, what you me deny:
You cannot rob me of free nature's grace;
You cannot shut the windows of the sky
Through which Aurora shows her brightening face:

You cannot bar my constant feet to trace
The woods and lawns, by living stream, at eve.
THOMSON, Castle of Indolence, Canto ii, st. 3.

1
O nature! all-sufficient! over all
Enrich me with the knowledge of thy works;
Snatch me to Heaven.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 1352.

Can be forbear to join the general smile
Of Nature? can fierce passions vex his breast,
While every gale is peace, and every grove
Is melody?

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 871.

2
The sun-swept spaces which the good God made.

CHARLES HANSON TOWNE, City Children.

3
Talk not of temples, there is one
Built without bands, to mankind given;
Its lamps are the meridian sun
And all the stars of heaven,
Its walls are the cerulean sky,
Its floor the earth so green and fair,
The dome its vast immensity
All Nature worships there!

DAVID VEDDER, The Temple of Nature.

Where Nature seems to sit alone,
Majestic on a craggy throne.

JOSEPH WARTON, Ode to Fancy.

4
I believe a leaf of grass is no less than the journey-work of the stars,
And the pismire is equally perfect, and a grain of sand, and the egg of the wren,
And the tree-toad is a chef-d'œuvre for the highest,
And the running blackberry would adorn the parlors of heaven,
And the narrowest hinge in my hand puts to scorn all machinery,
And the cow crunching with depress'd head
surpasses any statue,
And a mouse is miracle enough to stagger sextillions of infidels.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 31.

5
The harp at Nature's advent strung
Has never ceased to play;
The song the stars of morning sung
Has never died away.

WHITTIER, The Worship of Nature.

Though all the bards of earth were dead,
And all their music passed away,
What Nature wishes should be said
She'll find the rightful voice to say.

WILLIAM WINTER, The Golden Silence.

6
On a fair prospect some have looked,
And felt, as I have heard them say,
As if the moving time had been
A thing as steadfast as the scene
On which they gazed themselves away.

WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell. Pt. I, st. 16.

7
The stars of midnight shall be dear
To her; and she shall lean her ear

In many a secret place
Where rivulets dance their wayward round,
And beauty born of murmuring sound
Shall pass into her face.

WORDSWORTH, Three Years She Grew.

There's not a nook within this solemn pass,
But were an apt confessional.

WORDSWORTH, The Trosacks.

8
Such blessings Nature pours,
O'erstock'd mankind enjoy but half her stores:
In distant wilds, by human eyes unseen,
She rears her flowers, and spreads her velvet
green;

Pure gurgling rills the lonely desert trace
And waste their music on the savage race.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 227.

9
The little cares that fretted me,
I lost them yesterday,

Among the fields above the sea,
Among the winds at play, . . .

Among the hushing of the corn,
Where drowsy poppies nod,

Where ill thoughts die and good are born—
Out in the fields of God

UNKNOWN, Out in the Fields. Published in the Boston Sunday Globe, 30 April, 1899, credited to St. Paul's Magazine, but not discovered there. Erroneously attributed to Elizabeth Barrett Browning. E. M. Tenison, in her Life of Louise Imogen Guiney, states that it was written by Miss Guiney "not long before her lute was broken and her pen laid aside forever." Miss Guiney went to England in 1901 and died in 1920, having previously published two collections of poems in which this one is not included. It is so obviously English—corn, for example, being used in its English sense—that it is the compiler's opinion it was written by an English author.

V—Nature: Its Cruelty

10
Nature is cruel, man is sick of blood;
Nature is stubborn, man would fain adore;
Nature is fickle, man hath need of rest;
Nature forgives no debt, and fears no grave.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Man and Nature.

Nature pardons no mistakes. Her yea is yea, and her nay, nay.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures:
Discipline.

Nature's rules have no exceptions.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics: Introduction.

11
The course of Nature seems a course of Death,
And nothingness the whole substantial thing.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Water and Wood.

12 Knowing how Nature threatens ere she springs.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, My Blue.

1 It is far from easy to determine whether she [Nature] has proved to him a kind parent or a merciless stepmother.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii, sec. 1.

To man the earth seems altogether

No more a mother, but a step-dame rather.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week 1, day 3.

2 Nature subjects the weak to the strong. (Nature est enim potioribus deteriora summittere.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xc, sec. 4.

3 For nature is one with rapine, a harm no preacher can heal;

The Mayday is torn by the swallow, the sparrow spear'd by the shrike,

And the whole little wood where I sit is a world of plunder and prey.

TENNYSON, Maid. Pt. I, sec. iv, st. 4.

4 Ah, what a warning for a thoughtless man,
Could field or grove, could any spot of earth,
Show to his eye an image of the pangs
Which it hath witnessed; render back an echo
Of the sad steps by which it hath been trod!

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vi, l. 806.

VI—Nature: Its Laws

5 Nature's great law, and law of all men's minds?—

To its own impulse every creature stirs;
Live by thy light, and earth will live by hers!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Religious Isolation. St. 4.

6 I trust in Nature for the stable laws
Of beauty and utility. Spring shall plant
And Autumn garner to the end of time.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act i.

7 For Nature in man's heart her laws doth pen.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum. Sec. 26, st. 2.

8 Nature is the true law.

JOHN FLORENCE, First Fruits, Fo. 32.

9 Against the law of nature, law of nations.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 889. See also LAW: VARIETIES.

10 Laws of Nature are God's thoughts thinking themselves out in the orbits and the tides.

C. H. PARKHURST, Sermons: Pattern in Mounts.

11 Those rules of old, discover'd, not devis'd,
Are Nature still, but Nature methodiz'd;
Nature, like Liberty, is but restrain'd
By the same laws which first herself ordain'd.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 88.

VII—Nature, The Teacher

12 The study of Nature is intercourse with the Highest Mind. You should never trifle with Nature.

JEAN LOUIS ACASSIZ, Agassiz at Penikese.

13 Go forth under the open sky, and list
To Nature's teachings.

BRYANT, Thanatopsis.

Come forth into the light of things,
Let Nature be your teacher.

WORDSWORTH, The Tables Turned.

The house is a prison, the schoolroom's a cell;
Leave study and books for the upland and dell.

JOSEPH H. GREEN, Morning Invitation to a Child.

14 Never does Nature say one thing and Wisdom another. (Numquam aliud natura, aliud sapientia dicit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 321.

Never, no never, did Nature say one thing, and Wisdom say another.

EDMUND BURKE, Letters on a Regicidal Peace. No. 3.

Nature is always wise in every part.

EDWARD HOVELL-THURLOW, Harvest Moon.

15 Go, from the creatures thy instructions take:
Learn from the birds what food the thickest yield;

Learn from the beasts the physic of the field;
Thy arts of building from the bee receive;
Learn of the mole to plough, the worm to weave;

Learn of the little nautilus to sail,
Spread the thin oar, and catch the driving gale.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 172.

16 But any man that walks the mead,

In bud or blade or bloom, may find,

According as his humours lead,
A meaning suited to his mind.

TENNYSON, The Day-Dream: Moral. St. 2.

17 For I'd rather be thy child
And pupil, in the forest wild,

Than be the king of men elsewhere,
And most sovereign slave of care;

To have one moment of thy dawn,
Than share the city's year forlorn.

H. D. THOREAU, Nature.

18 Nature has always had more power than education (La Nature a toujours été en eux plus forte que l'éducation.)

VOLTAIRE, Life of Molière.

Nature is more powerful than education.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. i, ch. 13.

19 "Is this," I cried,
"The end of prayer and preaching?"

Then down with pulpit, down with priest,
And give us Nature's teaching!"

WHITTIER, A Sabbath Scene.

1 Kind Nature's charities his steps attend;
In every babbling brook he finds a friend;
While chast'ning thoughts of sweetest use, bestowed

By wisdom, moralise his pensive road.

WORDSWORTH, Descriptive Sketches, l. 27.

His daily teachers had been woods and rills,
The silence that is in the starry sky,
The sleep that is among the lonely hills.

WORDSWORTH, Song at the Feast of Brougham Castle, l. 162.

2 One impulse from a vernal wood
May teach you more of man,
Of moral evil and of good,
Than all the sages can.

WORDSWORTH, The Tables Turned.

3 On every thorn delightful wisdom grows;
In every rill a sweet instruction flows.

YOUNG, Love of Fame Sat. i, l. 249.

Read Nature: Nature is a friend to truth;
Nature is Christian, preaches to mankind,
And bids dead matter aid us in our creed.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts, Night iv, l. 703.

VIII—Nature: The Book of Nature

4 After the sacred volumes of God and the Scriptures, study, in the second place, that great volume of the works and the creatures of God.

FRANCIS BACON, Letters: To Trinity College, Cambridge.

The volume of nature is the book of knowledge.
GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World, No. 4.

The book of Nature is the book of Fate. She turns the gigantic pages, leaf after leaf,—never re-turning one.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Did we but pay the love we owe,
And with a child's undoubting wisdom look
On all these living pages of God's book.

J. R. LOWELL, To the Dandelion.

5 Believe one who knows: you will find something more in woods than in books. Trees and stones will teach you that which you can never learn from masters. (Experto crede: aliquid amplius in silvis invenies quam in libris. Ligna et lapides docebunt te quod a magistris audire non possis.)

ST. BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX, Epistles, No. 106.
To Master Henry Murdach, afterwards
Archbishop of York.

And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running
brooks,

Sermons in stones and good in every thing.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, Act ii, sc. 1, l. 15.

London had been my prison; but my books Hills and great waters, labouring men and
brooks,

Ships and deep friendships and remembered days
Which even now set all my mind ablaze.

JOHN MASKFIELD, Biography.

6 Strange to the world, he wore a bashful look,
The fields his study, nature was his book.

ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, The Farmer's Boy: Spring, l. 31.

7 Out of the book of Nature's learned breast.

DY BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes, Week
ii, day 4. (Sylvester, tr.)

8 See thou bring not to field or stone
The fancies found in books;

Leave authors' eyes, and fetch your own,
To brave the landscape's looks.

EMERSON, Waldensumkeit.

9 His listless length at noontide would he stretch,

And pore upon the brook that babbles by.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 103.

10 Nature is a volume of which God is the author.

MOSKES HARVEY, Science and Religion.

11 What Nature has writ with her lusty wit
Is worded so wisely and kindly

That whoever has dipped in her manuscript
Must up and follow her blindly.

W. E. HENLEY, Echoes, No. 33.

12 Boughs are daily rifled
By the gusty thieves,

And the book of Nature
Getteth short of leaves.

THOMAS HOOD, The Seasons.

13 And Nature, the old nurse, took
The child upon her knee,

Saying: "Here is a story-book
Thy Father has written for thee."

"Come, wander with me," she said,
"Into regions yet untrod;

And read what is still unread
In the manuscripts of God."

LONGFELLOW, Fiftieth Birthday of Agassiz.

14 In nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, Act I,
sc. 2, l. 9.

And meditate the Book Of Nature, ever open.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 669.

15 O Reader! had you in your mind
Such stores as silent thought can bring,
O gentle Reader! you would find
A tale in every thing.

WORDSWORTH, Simon Lee, l. 63.

IX—Nature and God

What I call God, And fools call Nature.
ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book: The Pope, l. 1073.

God is seen God
In the star, in the stone, in the flesh, in the soul and the clod.

ROBERT BROWNING, Soul, St. 17.

Nature, which is the Time-vesture of God, and reveals Him to the wise, hides Him from the foolish.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 8.

[Nature], the living visible garment of God.

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, l. 50. (William P. Andrews, tr.) Quoted by CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 8.

Nature, the vicar of th' almighty Lord.

CHAUCER, The Parlement of Foules, l. 379.

Stated by Chaucer to be from Statius.

Nature, the Handmaid of God Almighty.

HOWELL, Familiar Letters: Bk. ii, To Dr. T. P.

At home with Nature, and at one with God!

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, The Angelus.

Nature is but a name for an effect
Whose cause is God.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 224.

His are the mountains and the valleys his,
And the resplendent rivers. His 't' enjoy
With a propriety that none can feel,
But who, with filial countenance inspir'd,
Can lift to heaven an unassuming eye,
And smiling say—My Father made them all!

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 742.

Full often too

Our wayward intellect, the more we learn
Of nature, overlooks her Author more.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 235.

What man has written man may read;
But God fills every root and seed
With cryptic words, too strangely set
For mortals to decipher yet.

CHARLES DALMON, Documents.

Nature is the art of God. (Deus æternus, ars sua, quæ natura est.)

DANTE, De Monarchia. Bk. i, l. 3.

See also ART AND NATURE.

And when I am stretched beneath 'he pines,
Where the evening star so holy shines,
I laugh at the lore and the pride of man,
At the sophist schools and the learned clan;
For what are they all, in their high conceit,
When man in the bush with God may meet?

EMERSON, Good-Bye.

Behold! the Holy Grail is found,
Found in each poppy's cup of gold;
And God walks with us as of old.
Behold! the burning bush still burns
For man, whichever way he turns;

And all God's earth is holy ground.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Dawn at San Diego.

He would adore my gifts instead of me,
And rest in Nature, not the God of Nature.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Pooley.

Nature is religious only as it manifests God.

MARK HOPKINS, Sermon, 30 May, 1843.

A voice is in the wind I do not know;
A meaning on the face of the high hills
Whose utterance I cannot comprehend.

A something is behind them: that is God.

MACDONALD, Within and Without. Pt. i, sc. 1.

Every formula which expresses a law of nature is a hymn of praise to God.

MARIA MITCHELL. Inscribed beneath her bust in Hall of Fame.

The perfections of Nature show that she is the image of God; her defects show that she is only his image.

PASCAL, Pensées. Ch. 12.

All are but parts of one stupendous Whole,
Whose body Nature is, and God the soul;
That changed thro' all, and yet in all the same,
Great in the earth as in th' ethereal frame,
Warms in the sun, refreshes in the breeze,
Glows in the stars, and blossoms in the trees;

As full, as perfect, in a hair as heart;
As full, as perfect, in vile man that mourns,
As the rapt Seraph that adores and burns.
To him no high, no low, no great, no small;
He fills, he bounds, connects, and equals all!

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. i, l. 267.

A work of skill, surpassing sense,
A labour of Omnipotence;
Though frail as dust it meet thine eye,
He form'd this gnat who built the sky.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Gnat.

Nature reads not our labels, "great" and "small";
Accepts she one and all.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, The Man with the Hoe: A Reply. See also GREATNESS: GREAT AND SMALL.

Slave to no sect, who takes no private road,
But looks thro' Nature up to Nature's God.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epist. iv, l. 331.

It is the modest, not the presumptuous, inquirer who makes a real and safe progress in the discovery of divine truths. One follows Nature and Nature's God; that is, he follows God in his works and in his word.

LORD BOLINGBROKE, Letter to Mr. Pope. It was in this letter, perhaps, that Pope found the famous phrase he used in the preceding quotation.

And not from Nature up to Nature's God.
But down from Nature's God look Nature through.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, Author.

The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handywork.

Old Testament: Psalms, xix, 1.

2 Call it Nature, fate, fortune; all these things are names of the one and the selfsame God.
(Naturam voca, fatum, fortunamque; sunt omnia unius et ejusdem Dei nomina.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis, Bk. iv, sec. 8.

Go thou and seek the House of Prayer!
I to the woodlands wend, and there,
In lovely Nature see the God of Love.

SOUTHEY, Written on Sunday Morning.

3 God, the Great Giver, can open the whole universe to our gaze in the narrow space of a single lane.

4 RABINDRANATH TAGORE, Jivan-smriti.

Are God and Nature then at strife,
That Nature lends such evil dreams?
So careful of the type she seems,
So careless of the single life.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam, Pt. Iv, st. 2.

5 Nature, so far as in her lies,
Imitates God, and turns her face
To every land beneath the skies,
Counts nothing that she meets with base,
But lives and loves in every place.

TENNYSON, On a Mourner, St. 1.

Nature is the glass reflecting God.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts, Night ix, l. 1005.

6 The course of nature is the art of God.
The miracles thou call'st for, this attest;
For say, could nature nature's course control?
But, miracles apart, who sees Him not?

YOUNG, Night Thoughts, Night ix, l. 1266.

Take God from Nature, nothing great is left.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts, Night ix, l. 1391.

X—Nature: Human Nature

7 Nature is often hidden, sometimes overcome, seldom extinguished.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Nature in Men.

How hard it is to hide the sparks of Nature!
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, Act iii, sc. 3, l. 79.

8 Nature stamp'd us in a heavenly mould.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope, Pt. I, l. 498.

9 Never can custom conquer nature; for she is ever unconquered. (Numquam naturam mos vinceret; est enim ea semper invicta.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum, Bk. v,
ch. 27, sec. 78.

It is difficult indeed to change nature. (Naturam quidem mutare difficile est.)

SENECA, De Ira, Bk. II, l. 20.

Nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act iv, sc. 7, l. 188.

10 Nor rural sights alone, but rural sounds,
Exhilarate the spirit, and restore
The tone of languid Nature.

COWPER, The Task, Bk. I, l. 182.

11 To Nature and yourself appeal,
Nor learn of others what to feel.

WILLIAM HOGARTH, Letter to a Friend, 1761.
Quoted.

deceive ourselves. (Jamais la nature ne nous trompe; c'est toujours nous qui nous trompons.)

ROUSSEAU, Emile, Bk. III.

16 One touch of nature makes the whole world kin.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, Act II, sc.
3, l. 175.

All argument will vanish before one touch of nature.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Poor Gen- tleman, Act v, sc. 1.

17 How sometimes nature will betray its folly,
Its tenderness, and make itself a pastime
To harder bosoms!

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, Act I, sc. 2, l. 151.

18 Man is not content to take nature as he finds her. He insists on making her over.

NECK

Would that the Roman populace had but one neck. (Utinam populus Romanus unum cer-vicem haberet!)

CALIGULA, when incensed at the people applauding his opponents. (SUETONIUS, Life.)
Seneca and Dion Cassius also credit the saying to Caligula, but it is ascribed to Nero
by other writers.

Anger wishes all mankind had only one neck;
love, that it had only one heart.

RICHTER, Flower, Fruit and Thorn, iv.

I love the sex, and sometimes would reverse

The tyrant's wish "that mankind only had
One neck, which he with one fell stroke might perce."

My wish is quite as wide, but not so bad, . . .
That womankind had but one rosy mouth,
To kiss them all at once from North to South.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 27.

Neck of nothing.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Lady's Last Stake. Act iii.

The stately neck is manhood's manliest part;
It takes the life-blood freshest from the heart.
With short, curled ringlets close around it spread,

How light and strong it lifts the Grecian head!
O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 478.

They wove the lotus band to deck
And fan with pensile wreath each neck.
THOMAS MOORE, Odes of Anacreon. No. 69.

Bending down His corrigible neck.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 14, l. 74.

I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 1, 153.

And break the neck

Of that proud man that did usurp his back.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 5, l. 88.

Falls not the axe upon the humblest neck
But first begs pardon.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 5.

And thus I set my foot on 's neck.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 92.

What is nearest touches us most. The passions rise higher at domestic than at imperial tragedies.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Mrs. Thrale.

16 Just next door 'tis cold and cheerless,
There's no carpet on the floor,

And a little heart is breaking,

In the cottage, just next door.

CHARLES K. HARRIS, Just Next Door. (1902)

1 All is well with him who is beloved of his neighbours.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentium.

2 A bad neighbor is as great a plague as a good one is a blessing; he who enjoys a good neighbor has a precious possession.

HERODOTUS, Works and Days, l. 346.

A bad neighbor brings bad luck. (Aliquid mali esse propter vicinum malum.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 772. (Act IV, sc. 4.)

Quoted as a proverb.

If you're a neighbor to a neighbor who is bad, you must learn to suffer what is bad. But if you are neighbor to a neighbor who is good, more and more reciprocal good do you both teach and learn.

MENANDER, Fragments, No. 553.

Attract, attracted to, the next in place,
Form'd and impell'd its neighbour to embrace.

POPE, Essay on Man, Epis. III, l. 9.

10 Withdraw thy foot from in thy neighbour's house; lest he be weary of thee, and so hate thee.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 17.

11 Better that man be born dumb, nay, void of reason, rather than that he employ the gifts of Providence to the destruction of his neighbor.

QUINTILLIAN, De Institutione Oratoria, Bk. XII, ch. I, sec. 1.

12 There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbours good. One person I have to make good: myself. But my duty to my neighbour is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy—if I may.

R. L. STEVENSON, A Christmas Sermon.

13 Love thy neighbor. (Ἀγάπα τὸν πλησίον.)

THALES. (STOBÆUS, Florilegium, Pt. III, l. 59.)

Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

3 A master-passion is the love of news.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Newspaper, l. 281.

4 When a dog bites a man that is not news, but when a man bites a dog that is news.

Usually attributed to CHARLES A. DANA, famous editor of the New York Sun, but the evidence favors JOHN B. BOGART, city editor of the Sun from 1873-1890. In a letter to the compiler, Mr. Frank M. O'Brien, the present editor of the Sun, says, "The late Edward P. Mitchell, Dana's right hand man for many years, told me that the author was Mr. Bogart. Mr. Mitchell was meticulous about such things, and if it had not been true I think Mr. Bogart, a most modest man, would have demurred." Stanley Walker (City Editor, p. 20) attributes the saying to Amos Cummings, another of Dana's editors.

Asked for a definition of news, I can give you no better answer than the one on which we were brought up in the Sun office. Mr. Dana used to say, "When a dog bites a man that is not news, but when a man bites a dog that is news."

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS. (HARRINGTON, Essentials of Journalism.)

News is as hard to hold as quicksilver, and it fades more rapidly than any morning-glory.

NEWTON, SIR ISAAC

I do not know what I may appear to the world, but to myself I seem to have been only like a boy playing on the seashore and diverting myself in now and then finding a smoother pebble or a prettier shell than ordinary, whilst the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me.

ISAAC NEWTON. (BREWSTER, Memoirs of Newton. Vol. ii, ch. 27.)

Collecting toys,
And trifles for choice matters, worth a sponge;
As children gath'ring pebbles on the shore.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 327.

Newton (that proverb of the mind), alas!
Declared, with all his grand discoveries recent,

That he himself felt only "like a youth
Picking up shells by the great ocean—Truth."
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vii, st. 5.

1 When Newton saw an apple fall, he found . . .
A mode of proving that the earth turn'd round
In a most natural whirl, called "gravitation";
And thus is the sole mortal who could grasp
ple.
Since Adam, with a fall or with an apple.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 1.

2 Nature and Nature's laws lay hid in Night:
God said, Let Newton be! and all was Light.
POPE, Epitaph for Sir Isaac Newton.
O'er Nature's laws God cast the veil of night:
Out-blaz'd a Newton's soul—and all was light.

11 I felt her presence, by its spell of might,
Stoop o'er me from above;
The calm, majestic presence of the Night,
As of the one I love.
LONGFELLOW, Hymn to the Night.

I heard the sounds of sorrow and delight,
The manifold soft chimes,
That fill the haunted chambers of the Night,
Like some old poet's rhymes.
LONGFELLOW, Hymn to the Night.

O holy Night! from thee I learn to bear
What man has borne before!
Thou layest thy finger on the lips of Care,
And they complain no more.
LONGFELLOW, Hymn to the Night.

Peace! Peace! Orestes-like I breathe this prayer!
Descend with broad-winged flight,
The welcome, the thrice prayed-for, the most
fair,
The best-beloved Night!
LONGFELLOW, Hymn to the Night.

AXEL MUNTHE, Story of San Michele, p. 398.

16 O Night, most beautiful and rare!
Thou giv'st the heavens their holiest hue,
And through the azure fields of air
Bring'st down the gentle dew.
THOMAS BUCHANAN READ, Night.
How beautiful this night! the balmy night

Which vernal zephyrs breathe in evening's ear
 Were discord to the speaking quietude
 That wraps this moveless scene. Heaven's ebony vault,
 Studded with stars unutterably bright,
 Through which the moon's unclouded grandeur rolls,
 Seems like a canopy which love had spread
 To curtain her sleeping world.
 SHILLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. iv, l. 1.

How beautiful is night!
 A dewy freshness fills the silent air;
 No mist obscures, nor cloud, nor speck, nor stain
 Breaks the serene of heaven:
 In full-orbed glory yonder moon divine
 Rolls through the dark blue depths.
 Beneath her steady ray
 The desert-circle spreads
 Like the round ocean, girdled with the sky.
 How beautiful is night!

III—Night: Its Sadness

A night of tears! for the gusty rain
 Had ceased, but the eaves were dripping
 yet;
 And the moon looked forth, as tho' in pain,
 With her face all white and wet.
 OWEN MEREDITH, The Portrait.

For now began
 Night with her sullen wings to double-shade
 The desert; fowls in their clay nests were couch'd,
 And now wild beasts came forth, the woods

The night is long that never finds the day.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 240.

1 This night methinks is but the daylight sick.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 124.

2 Wrap thy form in a mantle grey,
Star-inwrought!
Blind with thine hair the eyes of Day;
Kiss her until she be wearied out.

SHELLEY, To Night.

3 Day is the Child of Time,
And Day must cease to be:
But Night is without a sire
And cannot expire,
One with Eternity.

R. H. STODDARD, Day and Night.

4 Night is older than day by one day.
THALES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Thales. Sec. 36.)

O majestic Night!

Nature's great ancestor! Day's elder-born!
YOUNG, Night Thoughts Night ix, l. 549.

5 They wear out day and night. (Noctem-que diemque fatigant.)
VERGIL, Æneid Bk. viii, l. 94.

We did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 181.

6 Night holds the keys that ope the door of day.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, In a Graveyard.

7 Day full-blown and splendid—day of the immense sun, action, ambition, laughter,

The Night follows close with millions of suns, and sleep and restoring darkness.
WALT WHITMAN, Youth, Day, Old Age and Night.

NIGHTINGALE

8 The nightingale, who still with sorrowing soul,
And "Itys, Itys" cry,
Bemoans a life o'erflourishing in illa.

(Ἀχάρετος βοδὴ, φεῖ, ταλαιναῖα φρεσὶς
"Itys" "Itys atēnou" ἀμφιβυλὴ καλοῖς ἀπὸ τοῦ βίου.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1143. (Plumpton, tr.)

9 She walleth the nightingale's lament. (Θρηνηθεῖ γόου τοῦ ἀπὸ τοῦ βίου.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 157.

10 O sacred bird! let me at eve,
Thus wandering all alone,

Thy tender counsel oft receive,
Bear witness to thy pensive airs,
And pity Nature's common cares,
Till I forget my own.

MARK AKENSIDE, The Nightingale.

11 Hark! ah, the nightingale!
The tawny-throated!
Hark! from that moonlit cedar what a burst!
What triumph! hark!—what pain!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Philomela.

How thick the bursts come crowding through the leaves!

Again—thou hearest?
Eternal passion! Eternal pain!
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Philomela.

12 Everything did banish moan
Save the Nightingale alone:
She, poor bird, as all forlorn
Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn,
And there sung the doleful'st ditty,
That to hear it was great pity.
Fie, fie fie! now would she cry;
Tereu, tereu! by and by.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Philomel.

What bird so sings, yet does so wail?
O, 'tis the ravish'd nightingale—

Jug, jug, jug, jug, tereu! she cries,
And still her woes at midnight rise.
JOHN LYLY, Spring's Welcome.

13 A nightingale dies for shame if another bird sings better.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
1, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 6.

14 Oh nightingale! What doth she ail?
And is she sad or jolly?
For ne'er on earth was sound of mirth
So like to melancholy.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Song.

15 'Tis the merry nightingale
That crowds and hurries, and precipitates
With fast thick warble his delicious notes,
As he were fearful that an April night
Would be too short for him to utter forth
His love-chant, and disburthen his full soul
Of all its music!

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Nightingale, l. 43.

16 I wonder if it is a bird
That sings within the hidden tree,
Or some shy angel calling me
To follow far away?

GRACE HAZARD CONKLING, Nightingales.

17 Sweet bird, that sing'st away the early hours,
Of winters past or coming void of care,
Well pleased with delights which present are,
Fair seasons, budding sprays, sweet-smelling flowers.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, To the Nightingale.

1 But, leaning on a thorn her dainty chest,
For fear soft sleep should steal into her
breast,
Expresses in her song grief not to be expressed.

GILES FLETCHER THE YOUNGER, Christ's Victorie and Triumph.

Never nightingale so singeth:
Oh, she leans on thorny tree
And her poet-song she flingeth
Over pain to victory!

E. B. BROWNING, The Lost Bower. St. 39.

The bird forlorn
That singeth with her breast against a thorn.
THOMAS HOOD, *The Plea of the Midsummer
Fairies*, l. 269.

2 The nightingale among the thick-leaved
spring

That sits alone in sorrow, and doth sing
Whole nights away in mourning.

JOHN FLETCHER, Faithful Shepherdess. Act v.

3 Thou wast not born for death, immortal
Bird!

No hungry generations tread thee down;
The voice I hear this passing night was heard

In ancient days by emperor and clown:
Perhaps the self-same song that found a path

Through the sad heart of Ruth, when,
sick for home,

She stood in tears amid the alien corn;

The same that oft-times hath Charm'd magic casements, opening on the foam

Of perilous seas, in faery lands forlorn.

✓ KEATS, Ode to a Nightingale.

Adieu! adieu! thy plaintive anthem fades

Past the near meadows, over the still stream,
Up the hill-side; and now 'tis buried deep

In the next valley-glades:

Was it a vision, or a waking dream?

Fled is that music:—do I wake or sleep?

✓ KEATS, Ode to a Nightingale.

Where the nightingale doth sing

Not a senseless, tranced thing,

But divine melodious truth.

✓ KEATS, Ode: Bards of Passion and of Mirth.

To the red rising moon, and loud and deep

The nightingale is singing from the steep.

LONGFELLOW, Keats.

4 Soft as Memnon's harp at morning,
To the inward ear devout,

Touched by light, with heavenly warning

Your transporting chords ring out.

Every leaf in every nook,

Every wave in every brook,

Chanting with a solemn voice

Minds us of our better choice.

JOHN KEBLE, The Nightingale.

5 I had a silvery name, I had a silvery name,
I had a silvery name—do you remember

The name you cried beside the tumbling sea?

"Darling . . . darling . . . darling . . . darling . . ."

Said the Chinese nightingale.

VACHEL LINDEAY, The Chinese Nightingale.

6 Sweet bird that shunn'st the noise of folly,
Most musical, most melancholy!

Thee, chauntress, oft, the woods among,

I woo, to hear thy even-song.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 61.

"Most musical, most melancholy" bird!

A melancholy bird! Oh! idle thought!

In nature there is nothing melancholy.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Nightingale, l. 13.

7 All but the wakeful nightingale;

She all night long her amorous descant sung.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 602.

8 O nightingale, that on yon bloomy spray
Warblest at eve, when all the woods are still,

Thou with fresh hope the Lover's heart dost fill,

While the jolly hours lead on propitious May.

MILTON, Sonnet: To the Nightingale.

Thy liquid notes that close the eye of day,

First heard before the shallow cuckoo's bill,

Portend success in love.

MILTON, Sonnet: To the Nightingale.

That star-enchanted song falls through the air

From lawn to lawn down terraces of sound,

Darts in white arrows on the shadowed ground;

And all the night you sing.

✓ HAROLD MONRO, The Nightingale Near the House.

9 There's a bower of roses by Bendemeer's stream,

And the nightingale sings round it all day
long.

✓ THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet.

10 The Nightingale that in the branches sang, Ah whence and whither flown again, who knows!

OMAR KHAYYAM, Rubaiyat. St. 96. (Flis-gerald, tr.)

11 Yon nightingale, whose strain so sweetly flows,

Mourning her ravish'd young or much-
loved mate,

A soothing charm o'er all the valleys throws
And skies, with notes well tuned to her sad state.

✓ PETRARCH, To Laura in Death. Sonnet xlii.

1 The nightingale got no price at the poultry show.

Sir WALTER RALPH THE YOUNGER, Epigram.

2 The sunrise wakes the lark to sing,
The moonrise wakes the nightingale.
Come, darkness, moonrise, everything
That is so silent, sweet, and pale:
Come, so ye wake the nightingale.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Bird Raptures.

Hark! that's the nightingale,
Telling the self-same tale
Her song told when this ancient earth was young
So echoes answered when her song was sung
In the first wooded vale
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Tulight Calm St. 7.

3 The angel of spring, the mellow-throated nightingale
SAPPHO, Fragments No. 39.

4 Worlds to conquer!—But Caesar fails
To add one song To the nightingale's!
WILLIAM KEAN SEYMOUR, Cæsar Remembers.

5 The nightingale, if she should sing by day,
When every goose is cackling, would be thought

No better a musician than the wren.
How many things by season season'd are
To their right praise and true perfection!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice Act
V, sc. 1, l. 104.

6 It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierced the fearful hollow of thine ear;
Nightly she sings on yond pomegranate tree.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet Act III, sc
5, l. 2.

7 O Nightingale,
Cease from thy enamoured tale.
SHELLEY, Magico Prodigioso. Sc. 3, l. 73.

8 One nightingale in an interfluous wood
Satiate the hungry dark with melody.
SHELLEY, Woodman and the Nightingale St. 2.

9 The nightingale as soon as April bringeth
Unto her rested sense a perfect waking,
While late bare earth, proud of new clothing, springeth,
Sings out her woes, a thorn her song-book making.

And mournfully bewailing,
Her throat in tunes expresseth
What grief her breast oppresseth.
Sir PHILIP SIDNEY, O Phylomela Fair.

10 Where beneath the ivy shade,
In the dew-besprinked glade,
Many a love-lorn nightingale,
Warbles sweet her plaintive tale.
SOPHOCLES, Œdipus Colonus, l. 17. (Franklin, tr.)

The music of the moon
Sleeps in the plain eggs of the nightingale.
TENNISON, Aylmer's Field, l. 102.

11 Lead me your song, ye Nightingales! O, pour
The mazy-running soul of melody
Into my varied verse.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 594.

The sober-suited songstress.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 746.

12 Last night the nightingale woke me,
Last night, when all was still.
It sang in the golden moonlight,
From out the woodland hill.
CHRISTIAN WINTHER, Seknsucht. As translated by Théophile Marzials, for his song,
Last Night.

13 My two passions, lilacs and nightingales, are in full bloom.
WALPOLE, Letters: To George Montagu, 5
May, 1761.

14 O nightingale! thou surely art
A creature of a "fiery heart":
These notes of thine—they pierce and pierce;
Tumultuous harmony and fierce!
WORDSWORTH, O Nightingale!

NILE, THE

15 The stream of the river Nile can water the earth, and the word of the monk Nilus can delight the mind

Hermil* (Greek Anthology Bk I, epig. 100)

16 It flows through old hushed Egypt and its sands,
Like some grave mighty thought threading a dream

LEIGH HUNT, Sonnets: The Nile.

17 Son of the old moon-mountains African!
Chief of the Pyramid and Crocodile!
We call thee fruitful, and that very while
A desert fills our seeing's inward span.
KEATS, Sonnet: To the Nile.

O'er Egypt's land of Memory floods are level,
And they are thine, O Nile! and well thou knowest

That soul-sustaining airs and blasts of evil,
And fruits and poisons spring where'er thou flowest.

SHELLEY, Sonnet: To the Nile.

18 The Nile, forever new and old,
Among the living and the dead,
Its mighty, mystic stream has rolled.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. I.

19 It is said that dogs run when they drink in the river Nile, but they should be seized by crocodiles.

2 Where's my serpent of old Nile?

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i,
sc. 5, l. 25.

3 Mysterious Flood,—that through the silent
sands

Hast wandered, century on century,
Watering the length of great Egyptian lands,
Which were not, but for thee.

BAYARD TAYLOR, To the Nile.

4 For what cause, Father Nile, or in what lands hast thou hid thy head? Because of thee thy Egypt never sues for showers, nor does the parched blade bow to Jove, the rain-giver.

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. 7, l. 23

5 If would be easier to discover the sources of

A blue trip slip for an 8-cent fare,
A buff trip slip for a 6 cent fare,
A pink trip slip for a 3 cent fare,
All in the presence of the passenjare
Punch boys, punch, punch with care,
All in the presence of the passenjare

ISAAC H. BROMLEY Originally published in the New York Tribune, 27 Sept., 1875. Erroneously attributed to Mark Twain, because of his article, A Literary Nightmare, in The Atlantic Monthly, for February 1876 (p. 167), in which he describes the sufferings inflicted upon him by this jargon, which, as he states, he came across in a newspaper, a little while ago," and which he quotes inaccurately. The lines were based upon an actual sign seen by Bromley in a street car.

The piper he piped on the hill-top high
(Butter and eggs and a pound of cheese),
Till the cow said, "I die," and the goose said,
'Why?'

And the dog said nothing, but searched for fleas

Farewell, farewell, you old rhinoceros,
I'll stare at something less preposterous.
OODEN NASSI, The Rhinoceros.

2
If the man who turnips cries,
Cry not when his father dies,
'Tis a proof that he had rather
Have a turnip than his father.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Burlesque of Lopes de Vega.

3
How often, oh! how often
They whispered words so soft;
How often, oh! how often,
How often, oh! how oft.
BEN KING, How Often. Burlesque of Longfellow's The Beldge.

4
On the Coast of Coromandel
Where the early pumpkins blow,
In the middle of the woods
Lived the Yonghy-Bonghy-Bò.
Two old chairs and half a candle,
One old jug without a handle,—
These were all his worldly goods

EDWARD LEAR, The Yonghy-Bonghy-Bò.

5
How pleasant to know Mr. Lear!
Who has written such volumes of stuff!
Some think him ill-tempered and queer,
But a few think him pleasant enough.
EDWARD LEAR, Lines to a Young Lady.

6
The Owl and the Pussy-Cat went to sea
In a beautiful pea-green boat.

EDWARD LEAR, The Owl and the Pussy-Cat.

They dined on mince, with slices of quince,
Which they ate with a runcible spoon,
And hand in hand, on the edge of the sand,
They danced by the light of the moon.
EDWARD LEAR, The Owl and the Pussy-Cat

7
The Pobble who has no toes
Had once as many as we;
When they said, "Some day you may lose them all,"

He replied, "Fish fiddle-de-dee!"
And his Aunt Jobiska made him drink
Lavender water tinged with pink,
For she said, "The World in general knows
There's nothing so good for a Pobble's toes!"
EDWARD LEAR, The Pobble Who Has No Toes.

8
If you lift a guinea-pig up by the tail
His eyes drop out!
F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, A Garden Lyric.

9
In a bowl to sea went wise men three,
On a brilliant night in June:
They carried a net, and their hearts were set
On fishing up the moon.
T. L. PEACOCK, The Wise Men of Gotham.

10
Flutt'ring spread thy purple Pinions,
Gentle Cupid, o'er my Heart;
I, a Slave in thy Dominions;
Nature must give Way to Art.
POPE, Song, by a Person of Quality.

11
A most subtle question, whether a chimera buzzing in space could devour second intentions, and was debated for ten daily sittings in the Council of Constance.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. II, ch. 7. Rabelais pretends that this nonsense was the title of a book which Pantagruel, on his visit to Paris, noticed in the library of St. Victor.

12
Bombas: So have I heard on Afric's burning shore

A hungry lion give a grievous roar,
The grievous roar echoed along the shore
Kmg: So have I heard on Afric's burning shore

Another lion give a grievous roar,
And the first lion thought the last a bore!
W. B. RHODES, Bombastes Furioso.

13
The preylful princess pierced and prick'd a pretty pleasing pricklet.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, IV, 2, 58.

Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers,
A peck of pickled peppers did Peter Piper pick,
If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers,
Where's the peck of pickled peppers that Peter Piper picked?

UNKNOWN, Old nursery rhyme.

14
But in a sieve I'll thither sail,

And, like a rat without a tail,
I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act I, sc. 3, l. 9.

They went to sea in a sieve, they did;
In a sieve they went to sea;

In spite of all their friends could say,
On a winter's morn, on a stormy day,
In a sieve they went to sea.

EDWARD LEAR, The Jumbies.

Far and few, far and few,
Are the lands where the Jumbies live:
Their heads are green, and their hands are blue;
And they went to sea in a sieve.

EDWARD LEAR, The Jumbies.

Said Opie Read to E. P. Roe,
"How do you like Gabonau?"

"I like him very much indeed,"

Said E. P. Roe to Opie Read.

JULIAN STREET and JAMES MONTGOMERY
FLAGG, Read and Roe.

He killed the noble Mudjokivis.
With the skin he made him mittens,
Made them with the fur side inside,
Made them with the skin side outside.

He, to get the warm side inside,
Put the inside skin side outside;
He, to get the cold side outside,
Put the warm side fur side inside.

That's why he put the fur side inside,
Why he put the skin side outside,
Why he turned them inside outside.

GEORGE A. STRONG, The Song of Mikanwatha.

From the Squirrel skin Marcosseset
Made some mittens for our hero.
Mittens with the fur-side inside,
With the fur-side next his fingers
So's to keep the hand warm inside.

GEORGE A. STRONG, The Song of Mikanwatha.

When Bryan O'Lynn had no shirt to put on,
He took him a sheep skin to make him a' one,
"With the skinny side out, and the woolly side in,
'Twill be warm and convenient," said Bryan O'Lynn.

UNKNOWN, Bryan O'Lynn.

One, whom we see not, is; and one, who is not, we see;
Fiddle, we know, is diddle; and diddle, we take it, is dee.

SWINBURNE, The Higher Pantheism in a Nutshell.

There were three sailors of Bristol City
Who took a boat and went to sea.
But first with beef and captain's biscuits
And pickled pork they loaded ahe.

There was gorging Jack and guzzling Jimmy,
And the youngest he was little Billee.
Now when they got as far as the Equator
They'd nothing left but one split pea.

THACKERAY, Little Billee.

Mr. Finney had a turnip
And it grew behind the barn;
And it grew and it grew,
And that turnip did no harm.

UNKNOWN, Mr. Finney's Turnip. Has been attributed to Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, who denied its authorship in a letter to George Anderson, 11 July, 1881.

If all the world were paper
And all the sea were ink,
If all the trees were bread and cheese,
How should we do for drink?

NOON

At the king's gate the subtle noon
Wove filmy yellow nets of sun.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Coronation.

Clearer than the noonday.
Old Testament: Job, xi, 17.

Morning rises into noon,
May glides onward into June!
LONGFELLOW, Maidenhood.

O sweet, delusive Noon,
Which the morning climbs to find,
O moment sped too soon,
And morning left behind.
HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Noon.

Another morn Ris'n on mid-noon.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 310.

Another morn Risen on mid noon.
WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. vi, l. 197.

'Tis Noon;—a calm, unbroken sleep
Is on the blue waves of the deep.
GEORGE D. PRENTICE, To an Absent Wife.

With twelve great shocks of sound, the shameless noon
Was clash'd and hammer'd from a hundred towers.

TENNYSON, Godiva.

The noonday quiet holds the hill.
TENNYSON, Enone.

NOSE

MARCUS CATO. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. ix, sec. 5.)

There, too, full many an Aldermanic nose,
Roll'd its loud diapason after dinner.

R. H. BARNHAM, The Ghost.

The tuneful serenade of that wakeful nightingale, his nose.

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act i, sc. 1.

On deck beneath the awning,
I dozing lay and yawning;
It was the grey of dawning,
Ere yet the Sun arose;
And above the funnel's roaring,
And the fitful wind's deploring,
I heard the cabin snoring
With universal nose.

THACKERAY, The White Squall.

There ain't no way to find out why a snorer can't hear himself snore.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer Abroad. Ch. 10.

² Jolly nose! there are fools who say drink hurts the sight,
Such dullards know nothing about it;
'Tis better, with wine, to extinguish the light,
Than live always in darkness without it.

OLIVER BASSKIN. Vaux-de-vire. Quoted by Ainsworth in Jack Sheppard. Pt. ii, ch. 5.

Nose, nose, jolly red nose,
And who gave thee this jolly red nose?
Nutmegs and Ginger, Cinnamon and Cloves,
And they gave me this jolly red nose.

THOMAS RAVENSCROFT, Denderomelia, Song No. 7. (1609) Quoted by Beaumont and Fletcher, Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act i, sc. 4.

³ My father was a freedman who wiped his nose on his sleeve.

BION (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, sec. 46.)

Sit down now and pray forsooth that the mucus in your nose may not run! Nay, rather wipe your nose and do not blame God!

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 16, sec. 13.

And you'd improve its shape, God wot,
And look less like a pink pug pup
If you would wipe it down, and not
Up.

ERASMUS, Adagia. (Udall, tr.)

⁹ I can make it . . . as plain as the nose on your face.

ERASMUS, Praise of Folly, 25. (1516)

This is as plain as a nose in a man's face.

RABELAIS, Works: Bk. v, Prologue. (1552)

Invisible, As a nose on a man's face.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 142. (1594)

As clear and as manifest as the nose in a man's face.

BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iii, mem. 4, subs. 1. (1621)

¹⁰ Ah, who could have foretold that that little retroussé nose would change the laws of an empire?

(Ah, qui jamais auroit pu dire

Que ce petit nez retroussé

Changerait les lois d'un empire?)

CHARLES SIMON FAVART, Les Trois Sultanes. Referring to Soliman's favorite Sultana, Roxelane. In France a retroussé nose is still referred to as a nose à la Roxelane.

Cleopatra's nose: had it been shorter, the whole aspect of the world would have been altered.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. ii, No. 162.

If Cleopatra's nose had been flat, the face of the world would have been changed.

¹⁴ Another tumble! That's his precious nose!
THOMAS HOOD, Ode to My Infant Son.

- ¹ Bor'd through the nose by this cheat.
JAMES HOWELL, Foraine Travell, p. 44.
- Paying through the nose.
The origin of this phrase, meaning to pay an excessive price or at an exorbitant rate, is uncertain. It has been suggested that there is some connection with the slang word "rhino" and the Greek rhines, the nostrils. Grimm (Deutsche Rechts Alterthümer) states that Odin had a poll-tax in Sweden called a nose tax, because it was a penny per nose. The same legend is told of Ireland.
- ² Therefore will I put my hook in thy nose
. . . and will turn thee back.

³ A song to the oak, the brave old oak,
Who hath ruled in the greenwood long;
Here's health and renown to his broad green
crown,
And his fifty arms so strong.

There's fear in his frown when the Sun goes
down,

And the fire in the West fades out;
And he showeth his might on a wild mid-
night,

When the storms through his branches
shout.

H. F. CHORLEY, The Brave Old Oak.

Then here's to the oak, the brave old oak,
Who stands in his pride alone!
And still flourish he, a hale green tree,
When a hundred years are gone!

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragment. Frag. 222.

'Tis not the many oaths that make the truth,
But the plain single vow that is vow'd true.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
iv, sc. 2, l. 21.

¹⁶ Oaths are but words, and words but wind.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 107.

For breaking of an oath and lying,
Is but a kind of self-denying,

A saint-like virtue; and from hence

Some have broke oaths by Providence.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 133.

Oaths were not purpos'd, more than law,
To keep the Good and just in awe,

But to confine the Bad and Sinful,
Like mortal cattle in a pinfold.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto II, l. 197.

He that imposes an Oath, makes it,
Not he that for convenience takes it;
Then how can any man be said
To break an oath he never made?

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto II, l. 377.

Let him be Anathema, Maranatha.

New Testament: I Corinthians, xvi, 22.
(Maranatha: The Lord cometh.)

Oaths terminate, as Paul observes, all strife;
Some men have surely then a peaceful life!

WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation, l. 55.

They fix attention, heedless of your pain,
With oaths, like rivets, forc'd into the brain;
And ev'n when sober truth prevails throughout,
They swear it, till assurance breeds a doubt.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 63.

Oaths, used as playthings or convenient tools.

WILLIAM COWPER, Expostulation, l. 37.

And hast thou sworn on ev'ry slight pretence,

Cicero (De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 29, sec.
108), who renders it into the Latin version often quoted: Juravi lingua, mentem injuratam gero.

An oath sworn with the clear understanding in one's mind that it should be performed must be kept.

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 29, sec. 107.

Would have their tale believed for their oaths.

And are like empty vessels under seal.

GEORGE HERBERT, First Church-Song. St. 31.

10 An oath that is not to be made is not to be kept.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentium.

An unlawful oath is better broke than kept.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 126.

It is great sin to swear unto a sin,
But greater sin to keep a sinful oath.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI Act v, sc. 1, l. 182.

An oath is of no moment, being not took
Before a true and lawful magistrate.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 2, l. 22.

Perhaps thou wilt object my holy oath:

To keep that oath were more impiety

Than Jephthah's, when he sacrificed his daughter.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 1, l. 89.

We mutually pledge to each other our lives,
our fortunes, and our sacred honor

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Declaration of Indeto Go. The favorite hymn of William Jennings Bryan.

³ Henceforth I learn that to obey is best,
And love with fear the only God.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 561.

III—Obedience and Command

⁴ The man who commands efficiently must have obeyed others in the past, and the man who obeys dutifully is worthy of being some day a commander. (Qui bene imperat, paruerit aliquando necesse est, et qui modeste paret, videtur, qui aliquando imperet, dig-nus esse.)

OBLIVION

²⁰ The iniquity of oblivion blindly scattereth her poppy, and deals with the memory of men without distinction to merit of perpetunity. Who can but pity the founder of the pyramids? . . . Oblivion is not to be hired
The greater part must be content to be as though they had not been.

²¹ Those sacred Powers Tread on oblivion.

WILLIAM BROWNE, Britannia's Pastorals. Bk.
ii, song 2, l. 435.

²² Without oblivion, there is no remembrance possible. When both oblivion and memory are wise, when the general soul of man is clear, melodious, true, there may come a modern Iliad as memorial of the Past.

CARLYLE, Cromwell's Letters and Speeches: Introduction.

Oblivion is the dark page whereon memory writes her lightbeam characters, and makes them legible; were it all light, nothing could be read there, any more than if it were all darkness.

5 And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 2, 194.

A certain Pasha, dead five thousand years,
Once from his harem fled in sudden tears,
And had this sentence on the city's gate
Deeply engraven, "Only God is great." . . .

Lost is that city's glory. Every gust Lifts, with dead leaves, the unknown Pasha's dust.

And all is ruin, save one wrinkled gate
Whereon is written, "Only God is great."

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, A Turkish Legend.

For, to make deserts, God, who rules mankind,
Begins with kings, and ends the work by wind.
VICTOR HUGO, The Vanished City.

6 What 's past and what 's to come is strew'd with husks

And formless ruin of oblivion.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iv, 5, 166.

7 I met a traveller from an antique land
Who said: "Two vast and trunkless legs of stone

Stand in the desert. Near them, on the sand,

Half sunk, a shattered visage lies. . . .
And on the pedestal these words appear:
'My name is Ozymandias, king of kings':

Look on my works, ye Mighty, and despair!
Nothing beside remains. Round the decay
Of that colossal wreck, boundless and bare
The lone and level sands stretch far away."

SHELLEY, Ozymandias of Egypt.

Sole Lord of Lords and very King of Kings,
He sits within the desert, carved in stone;
Inscrutable, colossal, and alone,
And ancienter than memory of things. . . .
Dazed camels pause, and mute Bedouins stare.
This symbol of past power more than man's Presages doom.

LLOYD MUFFLIN, Sesostris.

Where high the tombs of royal Egypt heave,
The vulture shadows with arrested wings

 Some mute, inglorious Milton here may rest,
 Some Cromwell guiltless of his country's blood.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 57.

How many a rustic Milton has passed by,
 Stilling the speechless longings of his heart,
 In unmitting drudgery and care!
 How many a vulgar Cato has compelled
 His enemies, no longer tameless then,
 To mould a pun, or fabricate a nail!

SHELLEY, Queen Mab Pt. v, l. 137.

There are no mute, inglorious Miltons, save in the hallucinations of poets. The one sound test of a Milton is that he function like a Milton

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. III, p. 89

OCTOBER

1 October turned my maple's leaves to gold;
The most are gone now; here and there one lingers;

Soon these will slip from out the twig's weak hold,

Like coins between a dying miser's fingers.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Maple Leaves.

2 And suns grow meek, and the meek suns grow brief,

And the year smiles as it draws near its death.

BRYANT, October: A Sonnet.

The sweet calm sunshine of October, now
Warms the low spot; upon its grassy mound
The purple oak-leaf falls; the birchen bough
Drops its bright spoil like arrow-heads of gold.

BRYANT, October, 1866.

3 There is something in October sets the gypsy blood astir:

We must rise and follow her,
When from every hill of flame
She calls, and calls each vagabond by name.

BLISS CARMAN, Vagabond Song.

4 Hail, old October, bright and chill,
First freedman from the summer sun!
Spice high the bowl, and drink your fill!
Thank heaven, at last the summer's done!

THOMAS CONSTABLE, Old October.

5 There is no season when such pleasant and sunny spots may be lighted on, and produce so pleasant an effect on the feelings, as now in October.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, 7 Oct., 1841

6 The skies they were ashen and sober;
The leaves they were crisped and sere—
The leaves they were withering and sere;

OFFENCE

10 Neither give offence to others, nor take offence from them.

St. AMBROSE, Letter to St. Augustine. (TAYLOR, Ductor Dubitantium, i, l. 5.)

11 She hugg'd the offender and forgave the offence.

DRYDEN, Cymon and Iphigenia, l. 367.

How shall I lose the sin, yet keep the sense,
And love th' offender, yet detest th' offence?

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 191.

12 The offender never pardons.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentium.

13 What dire offence from am'rous causes springs.

POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 1.

14 No offence taken where none is meant.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 817.

If a man's armpits are unpleasant, art thou angry with him? If he has foul breath? What would be the use? The man has such a mouth, he has such armpits. Some such effluvium was bound to come from such a source.

SENeca, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 11.

17 O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act iii, sc. 3, l. 36.

The rankest compound of villainous smell that ever offended nostril.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 5, l. 94.

If their "offence be rank," should mine be rancour?

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 271.

18 In such a time as this it is not meet
That every nice offence should bear his

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 8.

All's not offence that indigestion finds
And dotage terms so.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act II, sc. 4, l. 199.

The very head and front of my offending
Hath this extent, no more.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act I, sc. 3, l. 80.

Time to me this truth has taught,

OPINION

I—Opinion: Definitions

Opinion is the genius, and, as it were, the foundation of all temporal happiness.

OWEN FELTHAM, Resolves: Of Opinion.

Opinion in good men is but knowledge in the making.

MILTON, Areopagitica.

It seems to me that the nursing mother of most false opinions, both public and private, is the too high opinion which man has of himself. (Il me semble que la mère nourrice des plus fausses opinions, et publiques et particulieres, c'est la trop bonne opinion que l'homme a de soy.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. II, ch. 17.

Truth is one forever absolute, but opinion is truth filtered through the moods, the blood,
the disposition of the spectator.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Idols.

Opinion is the mistress of fools.

W. G. BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 823.

Everything depends on opinion; ambition, luxury, greed, hark back to opinion. It is according to opinion that we suffer. (Omnia ex opinione suspensa sunt; non ambitio tan-tum ad illam respicit et luxuria et avaritia.
Ad opinionem dolemus.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epist. 78, sec. 13.

Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act II, sc. 2, l. 56.

All creeds and opinions are nothing but the result of chance and temperament.

J. H. SPENCER, John Inglesant.

Opinion is ultimately determined by the feelings, and not by the intellect.

HENRY SEWAGE, Social Statics. Pt. III, ch. 50,
sec. 3.

"There are no diseases, but only persons who are diseased," some doctors say, and I say that there are no opinions, but only opining persons.

p. 156.

II—Opinion: Apothegms

He that complies against his will,
Is of his own opinion still,
Which he may adhere to, yet disown,
For reasons to himself best known.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. III, canto III, l. 547.

Often misquoted, "A man convinced against his will." See also under ARGUMENT.

A difference of opinion, though in the merest trifles, alienates little minds.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

The only sin which we never forgive in each other is difference of opinion.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Clubs.

It were not best that we should all think alike;
it is difference of opinion that makes horse-races.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

His sole opinion, whatso'er befall,
Centring at last in having none at all.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 133.

Opinion says hot and cold, but the reality is atoms and empty space.

DEMOCRITUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pyrro.
Bk. IX, sec. 72.)

"I never offered an opinion till I was sixty," said the old Turk, "and then it was one which had been in our family for a century."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Iskander, Ch. 8.

Every opinion reacts on him who utters it.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

If thou art a person that hast good authority with the company, 'twere good to look confidently, yet not scornfully, and then mildly say, "This is my opinion."

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam.
Vol. I, p. 190.

Some men plant an opinion they seem to eradicate.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

It is not often that an opinion is worth expressing, which cannot take care of itself.

O. W. HOLMES, Medical Essays, p. 211.

A man's opinions, look you, are generally of much more value than his arguments.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Professor at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 5.

IV—Opinion: Opinion Rules the World

Opinion governs all mankind,

Like the blind's leading of the blind

BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 267. (1670)

We are all of us more or less the slaves of opinion.

WILLIAM HAMILTON, Political Essays: On Court Influence.

Opinion can do much, and indeed she is that great lady which rules the world.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, No. 39.

Opinion is that high and mighty Dame Which rules the world.

JAMES HOWELL, Vocal Forest: Introduction.

The good opinion of mankind, like the lever of Archimedes, with the given fulcrum, moves the world.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 222.

Yet it is but opinion, and that must be the world's master always.

GERVASE MARKHAM, English House-Wife, 70. (1615)

In politics it is almost a triviality to say that public opinion now rules the world.

Thou strong seducer, Opportunity.

DRYDEN, The Conquest of Granada. Act 4, sc. 3.

21
What is opportunity to the man who can't use it? An unfecundated egg, which the waves of time wash away into nonentity.

GEORGE ELIOT, Scenes from Clerical Life: Amos Barton.

1 Occasion is a great matter. Terence says well, "I came in time, which is the chief thing of all." Julius Caesar understood occasion. Pompey and Hannibal did not.

LUTHER, Table-Talk No. 848

2 Opportunity is a god (ἡ ἄριστος ἐστὶν θεὸς).
PALLAS, quoting Menander (Greek Anthology Bk. x, epig. 52)

3 O Opportunity, thy guilt is great!
'Tis thou that execut'st the traitor's treason:
Thou set'st at the wolf where he the lamb may get;

Whoever plots the sin, thou point'st the season;

'Tis thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason,

And in thy shady cell, where none may spy him,

Sits Sin, to seize the souls that wander by him

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 876

III—Opportunity: Its Knock

10

O, once in each man's life, at least,

Good luck knocks at his door;

And wit to seize the flitting guest

Need never hunger more.

But while the loitering idler waits

Good luck beside his fire,

The bold heart storms at fortune's gates,

And conquers its desire.

L. J. BATES, Good Luck.

As th' pote says, Opportunity knocks at ivry man's dure wanst. On some men's dures it hammers till it breaks down th' dure an' thin it goes in an' wakes him up if he's asleep, an' iver afterward it wurruks f'r him as a night-watchman. On other men's dures it knocks an' runs away, an' on th' dures iv some men it knocks an' whin they come out it hits them over th' head with an axe. But ivrywan has an opportunity.

FINLEY PETER DUNN, Mr. Carnegie's Gift.

11

Master of human destinies am I!

Fame, love, and fortune on my footsteps wait.

Cities and fields I walk; I penetrate

Deserts and seas remote, and passing by

Hovel and mart and palace, soon or late

I knock unbidden once at every gate!

If sleeping, wake—if feasting, rise before

I turn away. It is the hour of fate,

And they who follow me reach every state

Mortals desire, and conquer every foe

Save death; but those who doubt or hesitate,

Condemned to failure, penury and woe,

Seek me in vain and uselessly implore:

I answer not, and I return no more!

JOHN JAMES INGALLS, Opportunity First published in Trash, New York, Feb., 1891

With rustling wings, she swept from heaven and Beside me where I loitered in the way. I stood
Her brow was calm, and in her outstretched hand
She bore a gift—a virgin bud that blushed
Disparting its green sheath . . . She spake no word.

But paused a little space and looked at me
With silent scorn; then plumed her shining wings
In sudden flight, nor ever came again..

JAMES B. KEKVON, Opportunity.

12

They do me wrong who say I come no more

When once I knock and fail to find you in;

For every day I stand outside your door

And bid you wake, and rise to fight and win.

Weep not for precious chances passed away!

Weep not for golden ages on the wane!

Each night I burn the records of the day—

At sunrise every soul is born again!

WALTER MALONE, Opportunity.

The actual fact is that in this day Opportunity not only knocks at your door but is playing an avvil chorus on every man's door, and then lays for the owner around the corner with a club.

ELBERT HUMPHREY. (The Philistine.)

IV—Opportunity: Its Forelock

1 Let nothing pass that will advantage you;
hairy in front, Opportunity is bald behind.
(Rem tibi quam nosces aptam dimittere noli; Fronte capillata, post est Occasio calva.)

DIONYSIUS CATO, Disticha de Moribus, ii, 26
In Roman mythology, Occasio (Opportunity) was personified as a god or goddess standing on a rotating wheel, the feet fitted with winged sandals, the head hairy in front but bald behind. Time (Saturnus) also had a character of Opportunity, as distinguished from Length of Years, and in this character (in Greek Καιρός as distinguished from Χρόνος) was also represented as hairy in front and bald behind.

2 Who lets slip Fortune, her shall never find;
Occasion, once passed by, is bald behind.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Pyramus and Thisbe. St.
15. (1663)

Occasion . . . being bald can not easily be gotten again if she be once let slip.

WILLIAM PAINTER, Palace of Pleasure, i, 266.
(1566)

3 Zeal and duty are not slow,
But on occasion's forelock watchful wait.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 172.

4 Opportunity has hair on her forehead, but is bald behind. If you meet her seize her, for once let slip, Jove himself cannot bring her back. (Occasio prima sui parte comosa, posteriore calva. Quam si occupas, teneas elap-sum. Non istic possit Jupiter reprehendere.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 8.

5 "And who art thou?" "Time who subdueth all things." "Why dost thou stand on tiptoe?"
"I am ever running." "Why dost thou have a pair of wings on thy feet?" "I fly with the wind." . . . "Why does thy hair hang over thy face?" "For him who meets me to take me by the forelock." "And why is the back of thy head bald?" "Because none whom I have once raced by, though he sorely wishes it, may take hold of me from behind."

POSIMENUS, On a Statue of Time by Lysippus.
(Greek Anthology. Bk. xvi, epig. 275. The Planudean Appendix.) Time, here, it should be noted, is in his character of Opportunity,
the word used being Καιρός.

"Why hast thou hair upon thy brow?"

"To seize me by, when met."

"Why is thy head then bald behind?"

"Because men wish in vain,

When I have run past on winged feet

To catch me e'er again."

POSIMENUS, On a Statue of Time by Lysippus.
A metrical version.

6 For occasion hath all her hair on her forehead;

when she is past, you may not recall her. She hath no tuft whereby you can lay hold on her,
for she is bald on the hinder part of her head,
and never returneth again.

erb. St. Augustine (Opera, xxxviii) has it in somewhat different form: "Corrigant se, qui takes sunt, dum vivunt, ne postea velint et non possint." Which in turn harks back to Old Testament: Isaiah, lv, 6: "Seek ye the

DEMOSTHENES, when asked what three things made the perfect orator. See under ACT.

"Eloquence," replied the ancient orator, "is action, still action, and ever action." Action! what does that signify? Did he mean gesture? voice?
attitude? bearing? delivery? movement of ideas?
the vivacity of the images? . . . Yes, all this at once.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. II, No. 30.

I asked of my dear friend Orator Frig:

"What's the first part of oratory?" He said, "A great wig."

"And what is the second?" Then, dancing a jig
And bowing profoundly, he said, "A great wig."

"And what is the third?" Then he snored like a pig,
And puffing his cheeks out, he replied, "A great wig."

There is a Truth and Beauty in Rhetoric; but it oftener serves ill turns than good ones.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

Rhetoric is very good or stark naught . . . If I am not fully persuaded, I laugh at the orator.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Preaching.

Far more effective [than books] is the spoken word. There is something in the voice, the countenance, the bearing, and the gesture of the speaker, that concur in fixing an impression upon the mind, deeper than can even vigorous writings.

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles, Bk. II, epis. 3.

It is a thing of no great difficulty to raise objections against another man's oration,—nay, it is a very easy matter; but to produce a better in its place is a work extremely troublesome.

PLUTARCH, Of Hearing, Sec. 6.

Few speeches which have produced an electrical effect on an audience can bear the colorless photography of a printed record.

The rule of right and the eternal fitness of things.
FIELDING, Tom Jones, Bk. iv, ch. 4. (1749)

Let all things be done decently and in order.
New Testament: I Corinthians, xiv, 40.

Set thine house in order.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxxviii, 1.

For the world was built in order
And the atoms march in tune;
Rhyme the pipe, and Time the warden,
The sun obeys them, and the moon.

EMERSON, Monadnock, St. 12.

Confusion heard his voice, and wild uproar
Stood rul'd, stood vast infinitude confin'd;
Till at his second bidding darkness fled,
Light shone, and order from disorder sprang.

MILTON, Paradise Lost, Bk. iii, l. 710.

Order is Heav'n's first law; and, this contest,
Some are and must be greater than the rest,
More rich, more wise: but who infers from hence

That such are happier, shocks all common sense.

POPE, Essay on Man, Epis. iv, l. 49.

Not chaos-like together crush'd and bruise'd,
But, as the world, harmoniously confused:
Where order in variety we see,
And where, tho' all things differ, all agree.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 18.

The letters which I receive from Poland announce that order reigns in Warsaw. (Les lettres que je reçois de Pologne m'annoncent que la tranquillité regne à Varsovie.)

GENERAL FRANÇOIS SEBASTIANI, in Chamber of Deputies, 16 Sept., 1831, while Minister of Foreign Affairs, announcing the fall of Poland. (DUMAS, Mémoires. Ser. II, vol. IV, ch. 3.)

1 Order gave each thing view.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 1, l. 44.

2 The heavens themselves, the planets and this centre

Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
Office and custom, in all line of order.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida Act i, sc. 3, l. 65.

3 A place for everything and everything in its place.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 66.

4 Method is good in all things. Order governs the world. The Devil is the author of confusion.

SWIFT, Letters: To Stella, 26 Oct., 1710.

5 Large elements in order brought,
And tracts of calm from tempest made,
And world-wide fluctuation sway'd.
In vassal tides that follow'd thought.

TENNYSON, in Memoriam. Pt. cxii, st. 4.

6 As order is heavenly, where quiet is had,
So error is hell, or a mischief as bad.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Points of Hurmtery: Huswifery Admonitions.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. II, canto III, l. 709.

18 What owl sings out of that ivy bush?

JOHN DAY, Isle of Gulls. Act v. (1606)

Like an owl in an ivy bush.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. I.

When your hair's finely dress'd, I plainly do see,
You look like an owl in an ivy-tree.

UNKNOWN, Poems on Costume, 243.

19 An owl is the king of the night.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, 69. (1633)

20 Just then, with a wink and a sly normal lurch,
The owl very gravely got down from his perch, . . .

"I'm an owl; you're another. Sir Critic, good-day!"

And the barber kept on shaving.

2 As an ox goeth to the slaughter

Old Testament Proverbs, vii, 22; Jeremiah, xi, 19.

3 Oxen that rattle the yoke and chain or halt
In the leafy shade, what is that you express in your eyes?

It seems to me more than all the print I have read in my life.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself

He has the night among the gentle trees,
The dark surrounds him, and the Pleiades
Swing steady lanterns high above his head. . .
The day is dead that gave him aching knees,
The night is his among the gentle trees.

MARTHA BANNING THOMAS, The Ox.

4 The cattle are grazing,
Their heads never raising;
There are forty feeding like one!

WORDSWORTH, Written in March.

5 The ox has spoken. (Bos locutus est.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb, referring to the belief that the ox uttered omens from time to time, such as "Romans, beware!"

OYSTER

6 Nor brighter was his eye, nor moister
Than a too-long opened oyster.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Pied Piper. Sec. 4.

7 There are only two creatures I would envy—a horse in his wild state traversing the forests of Asia, and an oyster on some of the desert shores of Europe. The one has not a wish without enjoyment; the other has neither wish nor fear.

ROBERT BURNS (R. W. CROMER, Reliques of Robert Burns.)

8 The oyster is unseasonable and unwholesome in all months that have not the letter R in their names.

HENRY BUTTES, Dyets Dry Dinner. Sig N 1. (1599)

Oysters must not be eaten in those months, which in pronouncing want the letter R.

WILLIAM VAUGHAN, Directions for Health, p. 22 (1800)

A month without an R in it has me right being in the year.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. No. 16.

9 But four young Oysters hurried up,
All eager for the treat:
Their coats were brushed, their faces washed,
Their shoes were clean and neat—
And this was odd, because, you know,
They hadn't any feet.

LEWIS CARROLL, Through the Looking-Glass. Ch. 4.

10 Ah, hapless wretch! condemn'd to dwell
For ever in my native shell;
Ordain'd to move when others please,
Not for my own content or ease;
But toss'd and buffeted about,
Now in the water and now out,
'Twere better to be born a stone,
Of ruder shape, and feeling none,
Than with a tenderness like mine,
And sensibilities so fine!

COWPER, The Post, the Oyster and the Sensitive Plant, l. 5.

11 Secret and self-contained, and solitary as an oyster

DICKENS, A Christmas Carol. Stave 1.

12 "It's a wery remarkable circumstance, sir," said Sam, "that poverty and oysters always seem to go together."

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 22.

13 "Very good power o' suction, Sammy," said
Mr. Weller the elder. . . "You'd ha' made an uncommon fine oyster, Sammy, if you'd been born in that station o' life."

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 23.

14 He was a bold man who first swallowed an oyster.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND. See WARD, Diary, c. 1660

He was a bold man that first eat an oyster.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial II.

15 I will not be sworn but love may transform me to an oyster; but I'll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act II, sc. 3, l. 25.

16 It is the sick oyster which possesses the pearl.
JOHN A. SHENO, Said from My Attic, p. 30.

17 An oyster may be crossed in love!

STEELEMAN, The Critic. Act III, sc. 1.

"An oyster may be crossed in love,"—and why?
Because he mopeeth idly in his shell,
And heaves a lonely subterraneous sigh.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto XIV, st. 31.

Then love was the pearl of his oyster.

And Venus rose red out of wine.

SWINBURNE, Dolores. St. 39.

There's really no end in nature to the eating of oysters.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. No. 17. Oct., 1828.

He had often eaten oysters, but had never had enough.

W. S. GILBERT, Bab Ballads: Etiquette.

The oyster is a gentle thing

And will not come unless you sing.

UNKNOWN. (HALLIET, English Proverbs, 381.)

Oysters are ungodly, because they are eaten without grace; uncharitable, because they leave nought but shells; and unprofitable, because they swim in wine.

UNKNOWN, Parlous Jest, p. 6. (1611)

They say oysters are a cruel meat, because we eat them alive; then they are an uncharitable meat, for we leave nothing to the poor; and they are an ungodly meat, because we never say grace.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

I—Painting: Definitions

Painting is the intermediate somewhat between a thought and a thing

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk. 30 Aug. 1827.

So, if a great painter with questions you push,
"What's the first part of painting?" he'll say, "A paint-brush"

"And what is the second?" with most modest blush,

He'll smile like a cherub, and say, "A paint-brush"

"And what is the third?" he'll bow with a rush,
With a leer to his eye, he'll reply, "A paint-brush."

Perhaps this is all a painter can want:

OLIVER CROMWELL, Remark, to the young painter, Peter Lely, who was about to paint his portrait. This is the best known version, but what Cromwell really said was, "I desire you would use all your skill to paint my picture truly like me; but remark 'all these roughnesses, pimples, warts, and everything as you see me, otherwise I will never pay a farthing for it.'" (WALPOLE, Anecdotes of Painting, p. 444. Dict. of National Biog.)

"Paint me as I am," said Cromwell,
"Rough with age and gashed with wars;
Show my visage as you find it,
Less than truth my soul abhors."

IV—Painting: Criticism

What has reasoning to do with the art of painting? . . . To generalize is to be an idiot.
WILLIAM BLAKE, (Gilchrist, Life, I, 310.)

Orbaneja, the painter of Ubeda, being asked what he had painted, answered, "As it may hit;" and if he chanced to draw a cock, he wrote under it, "This is a cock."

PALM

8 As the palm-tree standeth so straight and so tall,

The more the hail beats, and the more the rains fall.

SIMON DACH, Annie of Thorow, I, 11. (Longfellow, LS.)

9 Through the laburnum's drooping gold
Rose the light shaft of Orient shroud,

And Europe's violets, faintly sweet,
Purpled the mossbeds at its feet.

FELICIA DUKOTHIA HEIMANS, The Palm-Tree. 10

On friend and foe breathe soft and calm,
As ship with ship in battle meets;
And while the sea-gods watch the fleets,
Let him who merits, bear the palm.
(Et nobis faciles parcite et hostibus;
Concurrant paribus cum ratibus rates,
Spectant numina ponti, et Palmam qui meruit, ferat.)

JOHN JORTIN, Lusus Poetici: Ad Ventos. St.

4. (W. M. F. King, tr.) "Palmam qui meruit, ferat" was the motto of Lord Nelson, and of the British Royal Naval School.

Ye gods, it doth amaze me
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the majestic world,
And bear the palm alone.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act I, sc. 2, l. 128.

You shall see him a palm in Athens again.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act V, sc. 1, l. 12.

Let all be present and expect the palm, the prize of victory. (Cuncti adsint, meriteque expectent præmia palmæ.)

VENETI, Æneid Bk. v, l. 70.

11 First the high palm-trees, with branches fair,

Out of the lowly valleys did arise,
And high shoot up their heads into the skies.

12

I love the Palm,

With his leaves of beauty, his fruit of balm.

BAYARD TAYLOR, The Arab to the Palm.

13

Of threads of palm was the carpet spun
Whereon he kneels when the day is done,
And the foreheads of Islam are bowed as one!

To him the palm is a gift divine,
Wherein all uses of man combine,—
House, and raiment, and food, and wine!

And, in the hour of his great release,
His need of the palm shall only cease
With the shroud wherein he lieth in peace.

"Allah il Allah!" he sings his psalm,
On the Indian Sea, by the isles of balm;
"Thanks to Allah, who gives the palm!"

WHITTIER, The Palm-Tree.

PAN

14 And that dismal cry rose slowly
And sank slowly through the air,
Full of spirit's melancholy
And eternity's despair!

And they heard the words it said—
"Pan is dead!—Great Pan is dead—

Pan, Pan is dead."

E. B. BROWNING, The Dead Pan. St. 25.

By the love, He stood alone in,
His sole Godhead rose complete,
And the lake gods fell down moaning
Each from off his golden seat;
All the false gods with a cry
Rendered up their duty—

Pan, Pan was dead.

E. B. BROWNING, The Dead Pan. St. 28.

And when, at length, "Great Pan is dead!" uprose the loud and dolorous cry,
A glamour with'd on the ground, a splendour faded in the sky.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Karidak. Pt. iv, st. 24.

Pan of the garden, the fold,
Pan of the bird and the beast,
Kindly, he lives as of old,
He isn't dead in the least!

PATRICK CHALMERS, Pan Pipes.

1 Yet half a beast is the great god Pan,
To laugh as he sits by the river.

E. B. BROWNING, A Musical Instrument.

2 Of Pan we sing, the best of leaders Pan,
That leads the Naiads and the Dryads forth,
And to their dances more than Hermes can,
Hear, O you groves, and hills resound his worth.

BEN JONSON, Pan's Anniversary Hymn.

Pan himself,

The simple shepherd's awe-inspiring god!
WERNER, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 886.

3 Great Pan is dead. (Πάν δ' ὄλεως τέρμεναι.)
PLUTARCH, De Defectu Oraculorum Sec. xvii.
"Plutarch is relating the legend that at the hour of the Saviour's agony, a cry of "Great Pan is dead!" swept across the waves in the hearing of certain mariners, and the oracles were silent.

A ship laden with passengers drove with the tide near the Isles of Paxi, when a loud voice was heard calling unto one Thanua. The voice then said aloud to him, "When you are arrived at Palados, take care to make it known that the great god Pan is dead."

PLUTARCH, Isis and Osiris.

Suddenly there came gasping towards them a pale Jew dripping with blood, a crown of thorns on his head, bearing a great cross of wood on his shoulder, and he cast the cross on the high table of the gods, so that the golden goblets trembled and fell, and the gods grew dumb and pale, and ever paler, till they melted in utter mist.

HERN, Reisebilder: City of Lappa. Ch. 6.

PANSY

4 Of all the pretty buds that blow
In bright or dusky weather,
Of all the flowers that come and go
The whole world over, none so sweet

This little purple pansy brings
Thoughts of the sweetest, saddest things.
MARY E. BRADLEY, Heartsease.

5 Pansies for ladies all—(I wis
That none who wear such brooches miss
A jewel in the mirror).

E. B. BROWNING, A Flower in a Letter.

6 Cornelia: I pray, what flowers are these?
Gazetta: The pansy this.

Cornelia: Oh, that's for lovers' thoughts.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools Act ii, sc. 1,
l. 248

Pray, love, remember: and there is pansies, that's for thoughts.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 176.

7 The delicate thought, that cannot find expression,

For ruder speech too fair,

That, like thy petals, trembles in possession,
And scatters on the air.

BERT HARTZ, The Mountain Heart's-Ease.

8 Heart's ease! one could look for half a day
Upon this flower, and shape in fancy out
Full twenty different tales of love and sorrow,
That gave this gentle name.

MARY HOWITT, Heart's-Ease.

9 There is a flower I wish to wear,
But not until first worn by you. . .

Heart's ease . . . of all earth's flowers most rare;

Bring it; and bring enough for two

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Heart's-Ease.

10 The pansy freak'd with jet.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 144.

11 Send thee pansies while the year is young,
Yellow as sunshine, purple as the night;

Flowers of remembrance, ever fondly sung
By all the chiefest of the Sons of Light;

And if in recollection lives regret

For wasted days and dreams that were not true,

I tell thee that the "pansy freak'd with jet"
Is still the heart's ease that the poets knew.

Take the sweetness of a gift unsought,
And for the pansies send me back a thought.

SARAH DOUGHERTY, Pansies.

12 The beautiful pansies rise
In purple, gold, and blue,

With tints of rainbow hue

Mocking the sunset skies.

THOMAS J. O'NEALE, Angel of the Flowers.

13 Heart's ease or pansy, pleasure or thought,
Which would the picture give us of them?

Surely the heart that conceived it sought
Heart's ease.

SWINBURNE, A Flower Poet by Fanny.

8 In general these parents have the most reverence who deserve it; for he that lives well cannot be despised.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 26.

The notion that parents are entitled to respect simply because they are parents is preposterous.
The stream of obligation runs strongly the other way. A child owes its parents no gratitude whatever for bringing him into the world (as Swift sardonically said, while they were thinking of something else).

3 Paris is the place in the world where, if you please, you may best unite the utile and the dulce.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 April, 1750.

4 Paris is terribly derivative of all absurd pretensions but its own.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk.

5 Beautiful carriages from Champs Elysees
Filled with fair maidens on cushions easy.

GEORGINA PARKER. Quoted by Edith Sitwell, Collected Poems, as "the worst poetry ever written."

6 Paris is well worth a Mass. (Paris vaut bien une Messe.)

HENRY IV, referring to his conversion to Catholicism in order to gain Paris and the crown of France. Fournier doubts if Henry was so undiplomatic as to have said this.

7 Paris is nothing but an immense hospitality.

VICTOR HUGO, Appeal to German Army to Spare Paris, 1870.

The café of Europe.

ABBÉ GALLANI, Epigram.

What's Paris but a circus, fair,
To tempt this west world's open purse

With tawdry trinkets, toys bizarre?

Ah, would that she were nothing worse!

JOAQUIN MILLER, A Song of Creation. Sec. 24.

8 Every fresh day's research into the city brings increasing disappointment. . . . Everything is planned, smoothed, and set to an oppressive regularity . . . in short, Paris is the plainest city in Europe.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, The Plainest City in Europe.

9 Ah Paris goes to see it. (Tout Paris va voir.)

11 Paris is the middle-aged woman's paradise.

PINERO, The Princess and the Butterfly. Act i.

I think every wife has a right to insist upon seeing Paris.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letters: To Countess Grey, 11 Sept., 1835.

12 You who have ever been to Paris, know;
And you who have not been to Paris—go!

JOHN RUSKIN, A Tour Through France. St. 12.

13 A street there is in Paris famous,

For which no rhyme our language yields,
Rue Neuve des Petits Champs its name is—

The New Street of the Little Fields.

THACKERAY, The Ballad of Boulkabosse.

14 Prince, give praise to our French ladies
For the sweet sound their speaking carries;

'Twixt Rome and Cadiz many a maid is,

But no good girl's lip out of Paris.

FRANÇOIS VILLON, Ballade des Femmes de Paris. (Swinburne, tr.)

Good talkers are only found in Paris.

FRANÇOIS VILLON, Ballade des Femmes de Paris.

PARK

15 Public money is scarcely ever so well employed as in securing bits of waste ground and keeping them as open spaces.

ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. i, ch. 10.

16 The proud park takes away the dwellings from the poor. (Abstulerat miseris tecta superbus ager.)

MARTIAL, De Spectaculis, ii. 8.

What had been the delights of the lord are now the delights of the people. (Delicie populi, que fuerant domini.)

MARTIAL, De Spectaculis, ii. 12. Of land given to public use.

17 The lungs of London.

WILLIAM WINDHAM, Debate, House of Commons. 30 June, 1808.

If the Parks be "the lungs of London," we wonder what Greenwich Fair is—a periodical breaking out, we suppose—a sort of spring rash.

DICKENS, Sketches by Bos: Greenwich Fair.

PARTING

✓ See also Farewell; Meeting and Parting

18 Some weep because they part,

And languish broken-hearted,

And others—O my heart!—

Because they never parted.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, The Difference.

Good-night! I have to my good-night
To such a host of peevish things!

Good-night unto the slender hand
All queenly with its weight of rings;
Good-night to forth uplifted eyes,
Good-night to chestnut braids of hair,
Good-night unto the perfect mouth,
And all the sweetness nestled there—
The snowy hand detaches me; then
I have to say, Good-night again.

THOMAS BAKER ALDRICH, Palestrina Carinosa.

Good-night! good-night! as we so oft have said
Beneath this rept, at midnight, in the days
That are no more, and shall no more return.
Thou hast but taken thy lamp and gone to bed;
I stay a little longer, as one stays
To cover up the embers that still burn.

LONGFELLOW, Three Friends of Mine. Pt. IV.

Now in the summit of love's topmost peak
Kiss and we part; no farther can we go

ALFRED AUGER, Sonnet: Love's Wisdom.

To meet, to know, to love—and then to part,
Is the sad tale of many a human heart.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Couplet Written in a Volume of Poems

Since there's no help, come, let us kiss and part;
Nay, I have done, you get no more of me;
And I am glad, yea, glad with all my heart,
That thus so clearly I myself can free.

Shake hands for ever, cancel all our vows,
And when we meet at any time again,
Be it not seen in either of our brows
That we one jot of former love retain.

Now at the last gasp of Love's latest breath,
When, his pulse failing, Passion speechless lies,
When Faith is kneeling by his bed of death,
And Impotence is closing up his eyes:

Now, if thou wouldst, when all have given him
Over,
From death to life thou might'st him yet recover.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Idea. Sonnet 14.

And must we part?

Well—if we must, we must—and in that case
The less said the better

SHERRIDAN, The Critic. Act II, sc. 2.

Heart to heart

And lips to lips! Yet once more, ere we part,
Clasp me and make me thine, as mine thou art!

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Gondola.

We meet to part; yet asks my sprite, Part we to meet? Ah! is it so?

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kinsale. Pt. I, st.
12.

When we two parted—in silence and tears,
Half broken-hearted to sever for years,
RHYMES, When We Two Parted.

Such partings build the heart they fondly hope to heal.

RHYMES, Child's Harold. Canto I, st. 11.

Good-bye, my dear, I must leave you
Though I would fain have stayed with you

Something tells me I am needed!

At the front to fight the foe.

WILL D. COSS, Good-Bye, Dolly Gray. (1900)

Kathleen Mavourneen, the grey dawn is breaking.

The horn of the hunter is heard on the hill;
The last flash of her light wing the bright dew is shaking—

Kathleen Mavourneen! what, slumbering
still?

Oh, hast thou forgotten how soon we must sever?

Oh, hast thou forgotten this day we must part?

It may be for years, and it may be for ever!
Oh, why art thou silent, thou voice of my heart?

LOUISA MACARTNEY CRAWFORD, Kathleen Mavourneen "Kathleen Mavourneen" was "Big Tim" Sullivan's pseudonym for a prominent note, the reference being to the line, "It may be for years, and it may be for ever."

Parting is all we know of heaven,

And all we need of hell

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. I, No. 96.

One kind kiss before we part,

Drop a tear and bid adieu

Though we sever, my fond heart

Till we meet shall pain for you.

ROBERT DOUGLASS, The Parting Kiss.

Only in the agony of parting do we look into the depths of love.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Ch. 44.

In every parting there is an image of death.

GEORGE ELIOT, Scenes of Clerical Life: Amos Barton. Ch. 10. A variation of the French proverb, "To part is to die a little" (Partir c'est mourir un peu).

Excuse me, then! you know my heart;

But dearest friends, alas! must part.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. I, fab. 51.

But fate ordains that dearest friends must part.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. II, l. 232

"Adieu," she cried, and waved her lily hand.

JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell.

So sweetly she bade me adieu,

I thought that she bade me return.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, A Pastoral Ballad. Pt. I.

I now bid you a welcome adieu.

ARTHUR WARD, The Shakers.

The day goes by like a shadow o'er the heart,

With sorrow where all was delight:

The time has come when the darkies have to
part,

Then my old Kentucky home, good-night!

GEORGE COLEMAN, *Home, My Old Kentucky
Home*.

1 The day is gone, and all its sweets are gone!
Sweet voice, sweet lips, soft hand, and softer
breast.

KEATS, Sonnet: The Day is Gone.

2 Say "au revoir" but not "good-bye,"
Though past is dead, Love cannot die.

HARRY KENNEDY, *Say "Au Revoir" but Not
"Good-bye."* (1893) Sung at the author's grave a few years later by Helen Mora, the great female baritone, whom it had made famous.

3 Thou art gone from my gaze like a beautiful dream.

GEORGE LINLEY, Thou Art Gone

4 They who go
Feel not the pain of parting; it is they
Who stay behind that suffer

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo: Pt. I, Prologue.

The one who goes is happier
Than those he leaves behind.

EDWARD POLLOCK, The Parting Hour.

5 The shore he was never to see again (Litora nunquam Ad visus reditura sinus.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civilis Bk. II, l. 5

Now a' is done that men can do,

And a' is done in vain;

My love and native land, farewell,

For I must cross the main,

BURNS, The Farewell.

And soon, too soon, we part with pain,
To sail o'er silent seas again

THOMAS MOORE, The Meeting of the Ships.

6 Honey Boy, I hate to see you leaving;

Honey Boy, you know my heart is grieving.

JACK NORWORTH, Honey Boy. (1907)

7 If we must part forever,
Give me but one kind word to think upon,
And please myself withal, whilst my heart's breaking.

THOMAS OTWAY, The Orphan. Act v, sc. 2.

8 Some jealousy of someone's heir,
Some hopes of dying broken-hearted,

A miniature, a lock of hair,

The usual vows—and then we parted.

W. M. FAIRB, The Bells of the Ball. St. 12.

9 In vain you tell your parting lover

You wish fair winds may wait him over.

Alas! what winds can happy prove,

That bear me far from what I love?

MATTHEW PRIOR, A Song.

10 He that parts us shall bring a brand from
heaven,

And fire us hence like foxes.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 22.

11 'Tis almost morning; I would have thee gone:
And yet no farther than a wanton's bird;

Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
And with a silk thread plucks it back again,
So loving-jealous of his liberty.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc.
3, l. 177.

12 Good night, good night! parting is such sweet
sorrow,

That I shall say good night till it be morrow.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act II, sc.
2, l. 185.

13 Eyes, look your last!

Arms, take your last embrace!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc.
3, l. 112.

14 I remember the way we parted,

The day and the way we met;

You hoped we were both broken-hearted,

And knew we should both forget.

SWINBURNE, An Interlude.

We twain shall not remeasure

The ways that left us twain,

Nor crush the lees of pleasure

From sanguine grapes of pain.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Rococo.

15 She went her unremembering way,

She went and left in me

The pang of all the partings gone,

And partings yet to be.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Daisy. St. 12.

16 Shall I bid her go? what and if I do?

Shall I bid her go and spare not?

Oh no, no, no! I dare not.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologies No. 5564

Though thou canst not pull thy passions out by the roots, yet it's in thy power to hold them down, for a time at least.

FEZZER, Introduzione ad Prudenziame, II, 19.

And ev'n the proudest goddess, now and then,
Would lodge a night among the sons of men;
To vulgar deities descends the fashion,
Each, like her betters, had her earthly passion.
JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. II, l. 111.

Great passions are incurable diseases: the very remedies make them worse.
GORDON, Conversations with a Philosopher.

Let never man be bold enough to say,
Thus, and no farther shall my passion stray:
The first crime, past, compels us into more,
And guilt grows fast, that was but choice,
before.

AARON HILL, Atheist. Act V.

Nothing can bring back the hour
Of splendour in the grass, of glory in the flower.
WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality, l.
181.

III—Past: Its Memory

5
Ah, the Past, the pearl-gift thrown
To hogs, time's opportunity we made
So light of, only recognized when flown!
ROBERT BROWNING, Jocoseria: Jochanan Hakkadosh.

The past is in its grave,
Though its ghost haunts us.
ROBERT BROWNING, Poems.

But how carve way if the life that lies before,
If bent on grooming ever for the past?
ROBERT BROWNING, Balcanston's Adventure.

No past is dead for us, but only sleeping, Love.
HELEN HUNT JACKSON, At Last.

7
This is the place Stand still, my steed,
Let me review the scene,
And summon from the shadowy Past
The forms that once have been.
LONGFELLOW, A Gleam of Sunlight

7a
Ah, me! what a world this was to live in two or three centuries ago, when it was getting itself discovered! . . . Then man was courting Nature, now he has married her. Every mystery is dissipated. The planet is familiar as the trodden pathway running between towns.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On Vagabonds.

8
Dead and gone, the days we had together,
Shadow-stricken all the lights that shone
Round them, flown as flies the blown-foam's feather,
Dead and gone.
SWINBURNE, Past Days.

9
Past the tender grace of a day that is dead
Will never come back to me
TENNYSON, Break, Break, Break.

So sad, so strange, the days that are no more.
TENNYSON, The Princess Pt iv, l. 35.

O Death in Life, the days that are no more.
TENNYSON, The Princess: Pt. iv, l. 40.

10
Old, unhappy, far-off things,
And battles long ago.
WORDSWORTH, The Solitary Reaper

11
'Tis greatly wise to talk with our past hours,
And ask them what report they bore to heaven.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night II, l. 376

IV—Past and Present

12
A sensible man judges of present by past events ("Brevi et auro rati solida respicietur.")
SOPHOCLES, Oedipus Tyrannus, l. 916

We read the past by the light of the present, and the forms vary as the shadows fall, or as the point of vision alters.

J A FROUD, Short Studies on Great Subjects.
Society in Italy See also under EXPERIENCE.

13
The Present is the living, sum-total of the whole Past.

CARLYLE, Essays: Characteristics.

The present contains nothing more than the past, and what is found in the effect was already in the cause.

HENRI BERGSON, Creative Evolution. Ch. I.

14
Underneath the surface of Today,
Lies Yesterday, and what we call the Past,
The only thing which never can decay.

EUGENE LEE-HAMILTON, Roman Baths.

Things bygone are the only things that last.
The present is mere grass, quick-mown away;
The Past is stone, and stands forever fast.
EUGENE LEE-HAMILTON, Roman Baths.

15
The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present, ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Second Annual Message to Congress, 1862.

16
Consult the dead upon things that were,
But the living only on things that are.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. I

17
O there are Voices of the Past,
Links of a broken chain,
Wings that can bear me back to Times
Which cannot come again;
Yet God forbid that I should lose
The echoes that remain!

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Voices of the Past.

18
Why is it that the deed of changeless fame,
Is grudged the present, granted to the past?
JAMES EDWIN ROBERTS, George Waring.

1 Past and so come, seems best; things present, worst.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 108.

2 That who stealst fire
From the fountains of the past,
To glorify the present.

TENNYSON, Ode to Memory.

3 He praises all thing that is gone;
Of present thing he praises none.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 3577. (c. 1375)

He praised the present and abused the past,
Reversing the good custom of old days.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto III, st. 79.

V—Past and Future

4 Making all futures fruits of all the pasts.

EDWIN ARNOLD, Light of Asia. Bk. v, l. 432.

What is past is past. There is a future left to all men, who have the virtue to repent and the energy to atone

BULWER-LYTTON, Lady of Lyons. Act iv, sc. 1.

5 You can never plan the future by the past.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to a Member of the National Assembly.

The best prophet of the future is the past.

BYRON, Letter, 28 Jan., 1821.

6 I watch the wheels of Nature's mazy plan,
And learn the future by the past of man.

CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 319.

Study the past, if you would divine the future.

CONFUCIUS, Analects.

The best way to suppose what may come is to remember what is past.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 249.

I know of no way of judging the future but by the past.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, in Virginia Convention, March, 1775.

7 Indemnity for the past and security for the future.

CHARLES JAMES FOX, Letter to Hon. T. Maitland. (RUSSELL, Memorials of Fox, iii, 345.)

8 The Past is like a funeral gone by,
The Future comes like an unwelcome guest.

EDMUND GOSSE, Sonnet: May-Day.

9 She knew the future, for the past she knew.

JOHN LAINGHORN, The Country Justice, l. 214.

10 Look not mournfully into the Past. It comes not back again. Wisely improve the Present. It is thine. Go forth to meet the shadowy Future, without fear, and with a manly heart.

LEWIS AND CLARK, Hyperion: Bk. I, Motto.

11 For hope shall brighten days to come,
And memory glaze the past.

THOMAS MOORE, Song.

12 The future is only the past again, entered through another gate.

PINKNEY, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act iv.

13 We will not anticipate the past; so mind, young people,—our retrospection will be all to the future

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iv, sc. 2.

14 Man hath a weary pilgrimage
As through the world he wends,
On every stage, from youth to age,
Still discontent attends;
With heaviness he casts his eye
Upon the road before.

And still remembers with a sigh

The days that are no more.

ROBERT SOUTHBY, Remembrance.

15 The past unsighd for, and the future sure.

WORDSWORTH, Lodowick, l. 100

2 Oh! St. Patrick was a gentleman
Who came of decent people;
He built a church in Dublin town,
And on it put a steeple.

HENRY BENNETT, Saint Patrick.

So, success attend St. Patrick's fist,
For he's a saint so clever;

Oh! he gave the snakes and toads a twist,
And bothered them forever!

HENRY BENNETT, Saint Patrick.

Oh, thou tormenting Irish lay!
I've got thee buzzing in my brain,
And cannot turn thee out again.

ELIZA COOK, St. Patrick's Day.

3 On the eighth day of March it was, some people say,
That Saint Patrick at midnight he first saw
the day,

While others declare 'twas the ninth he was born . . .
Till Father Mulcaby, who showed them their sins,

Said, "No one could have two birthdays, but a twins."
Says he, "Boys, don't be fightin' for eight or for nine,

Don't be always dividin', but sometimes combine;
Combine eight and nine, and seventeen is the mark,
So let that be his birthday." "Amen!" says the clerk.

I—Patriotism: Definitions

4 Patriotism is a lively sense of collective responsibility. Nationalism is a silly cock crowing on its own dunghill.

REGINALD ALDRINGTON, Colonel's Daughter, p. 49.

5 Patriotism has its roots deep in the instincts and the affections. Love of country is the ex-pression of filial love.

D. D. FIELD, Speeches: A Memorial Address.

There is no limit to the noble aspirations which the words "my country" may evoke.

DEAN W. R. INGE, (Millicent, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 134.)

6 Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (Boswell, Life, 1773.)

7 Patriotism is a kind of religion; it is the egg from which wars are hatched.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, My Uncle Sosthenes.

8 Patriotism is often an arbitrary veneration of real estate above principles.

G. J. NATHAN, Testament of a Critic, p. 16.

9 True patriotism is of no party.

SMOLLETT, The Adventures of Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 9. See also POLITICS AND PARTY.

10 There are no points of the compass on the chart of true patriotism.

2 Nothing is more shameful than ignorance of one's Fatherland. (Nihil magis pudendum quam ignarum esse suæ Patriæ.)

GABRIEL HARVEY, Notes, written in Humphrey Lloyd's Breviary of Britain.

3 We don't want to fight,

But, by Jingo, if we do,

We've got the ships, we've got the men,
We've got the money too.

G. W. HUNT, We Don't Want to Fight. An English music hall song of 1878, when the country was on the verge of intervening in the Russo-Turkish war on behalf of the Turks. The Russophobes became known as Jingoists, and the term came to be applied generally to super-patriots, itching to go to war on the slightest provocation.

WILLIAM HAVARD, Regulus. Act iii, sc. 3.

6
God gave all men all earth to love,
But since our hearts are small,
Ordained for each one spot should prove Beloved over all.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Sussex.

7
Opposed to these, a hovering band
Contended for their father-land;
Peasants, whose new-found strength had broke
From manly necks th' ignoble yoke,
And beat their fetters into swords,
On equal terms to fight their lords.

MONTGOMERY, The Patriot's Pass-Word.

Marshall'd once more, at freedom's call
They came to conquer or to fall.

Duty's claim and country's call
Shall be conscience for us all!

J. L. RENTOU, Australia's Battle Hymn.

10
Breathes there the man, with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land?

Whose heart hath ne'er within him burn'd
As home his footsteps he hath turn'd
From wandering on a foreign strand?

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto vi, st. 1.

Land of my sires! What mortal hand

Can e'er untie the filial band

That knits me to thy rugged strand!

SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto vi, st. 2.

Where's the coward that would not dare

To fight for such a land?

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto iv, st. 30.

11 I do love

My country's good with a respect more tender,
More holy and profound, than mine own life.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 112.

12
This day is call'd the feast of Crispian:
He that outlives this day, and comes safe
home,

Will stand a tip-toe when this day is named,
And rouse him at the name of Crispian.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 40.

13
One drop of blood drawn from thy country's bosom,
Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 54.

Who is here so vile that will not love his country?

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 35.

14
I vow to thee, my country—all earthly things
above—

Entire and whole and perfect, the service of my love.

CECIL SPRING-RICE, I Vow to Thee, My Country. See APPENDIX for full quotation.

19
The land we from our fathers had in trust,
And to our children will transmit, or die:
This is our maxim, this our piety.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. ii, No. 11.

Our land is the dearer for our sacrifice. The blood of our martyrs sanctifies and enriches it. Their spirit passes into thousands of hearts. How costly is the progress of the race. It is only by the giving of life that we can have life.
REV. E. J. YOUNG, Lesson of the Hour.

2 For body-killing tyrants cannot kill
The public soul—the hereditary will
That, downward as from sire to son it goes,
By shifting bosoms more intensely glows:
Its heirloom is the heart, and slaughtered men
Fight fiercer in their orphans' o'er again.

J. G. WHITTIER, Lexington.

1 There is one certain means by which I can be sure never to see my country's ruin: I will die in the last ditch.

WILLIAM III, PRINCE OF ORANGE. (HUME, History of England. Ch. 65.)

2 And shall Trelawney die, and shall Trelawney die?

Then thirty thousand Cornish boys will know the reason why.

UNKNOWN. Old ballad popular throughout Cornwall, referring to the imprisonment of the seven Bishops by James II, in 1688, Trelawney being Bishop of Bristol. (MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 8.)

And have they fixed the where, and when?
And shall Trelawney die?

Here's thirty thousand Cornish men
Will know the reason why!

ROBERT STEPHEN HAWKER, Song of the Western Men. Mr. Hawker wrote this song in 1825, taking the refrain from the old ballad referred to above. Davies Gilbert, President of the Royal Society, reprinted it as an old one, and Sir Walter Scott was deceived into thinking it "the solitary people's song of the seventeenth century."

V—Patriotism: Its Faults

3 Patriotism is not enough. I must have no hatred or bitterness towards anyone.

EDITH CAVELL, Conversation with the Rev Mr. Gahan, 11 Oct., 1915, the night before her execution at Brussels by the Germans.

Such is the patriot's boast, where'er we roam,
His first, best country, ever is at home.
And yet, perhaps, if countries we compare,
And estimate the blessings which they share,
Though patriots flatter, still shall wisdom find
An equal portion dealt to all mankind.

5 When a nation is filled with strife then do patriots flourish.

LAO-TSE, The Simple Way. No. 18.

6 You'll never have a quiet world till you knock the patriotism out of the human race.

BERNARD SHAW, O'Flaherty V. C.

7 It would therefore seem obvious that patriotism as a feeling is a bad and harmful feeling, and as a doctrine is a stupid doctrine. For it is clear that if each people and each State considers itself the best of peoples and States, they all dwell in a gross and harmful delusion.

TOLSTOY, Patriotism and Government.

8 A great and lasting war can never be supported on this principle [patriotism] alone. It must be aided by a prospect of interest, or some reward.

WASHINGTON, Letter to John Banister, Valley Forge, 21 April, 1778.

9 Patriotism has become a mere national self assertion, a sentimentality of flag-cheering with no constructive duties.

H. G. WELLS, The Future in America.

VI—Patriotism: Patriots

10 From distant climes, o'er wide-spread seas we come.

Though not with much éclat or beat of drum;
True patriots all; for be it understood

We left our country for our country's good.
GEORGE BARRINGTON (?), Prologue for the Opening of the Playhouse at Sydney, New South Wales, 16 Jan., 1796. Barrington, whose real name was Waldron, was transported to Botany Bay in 1790 for theft, and he and his fellow convicts acted in a production of Edward Young's tragedy, The Revenge, for which Barrington is said to have written the prologue. His authorship of the lines has been questioned. R. S. Lambert, in The Prince of Pickpockets, ch. 8, asserts that they were written by Henry Carter, "a gentleman of considerable literary attainments," who died in 1806.

And bold and hard adventures t' undertake,
Leaving his country for his country's sake.

HENRY FITZGERFREY, Life and Death of Sir Francis Drake. St. 213. (1600)

'Twas for the good of my country that I should be abroad. Anything for the good of one's country—I'm a Roman for that.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 89. (1706)

11 These gentry are invariably saying all they can in dispraise of their native land; and it is my opinion, grounded upon experience, that an individual who is capable of such baseness would not hesitate at the perpetration of any villainy, for next to the love of God, the love of country is the best preventive of crime.

GEORGE BORROW, The Bible in Spain. Ch. 4.

12 For what were all these country patriots born? To hunt, and vote, and raise the price of corn?

BYRON, The Age of Bronze. St. 14.

13 A steady patriot of the world alone,
The friend of every country—but his own.

GEORGE CANTRING, The New Morality.

14 Patriots are grown too shrewd to be sincere.

And we too wise to trust them.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 495.

For when was public virtue to be found
When private was not? Can he love the whole
Who loves no part? He be a nation's friend
Who is, in truth, the friend of no man there?

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 502.

1 Patriots have toil'd, and in their country's cause

Bled nobly; and their deeds, as they deserve,
Receive proud recompense.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 704.

2 Patriots in peace, assert the people's right;
With noble stubbornness resisting might.

3 The flaming patriot, who so lately scorched us in the meridian, sinks temperately to the west, and is hardly felt as he descends.

JUNIUS, Letters. Letter 54, 15 Aug. 1771.

4 Brave men and worthy patriots, dear to God,
and famous to all ages.

MILTON, Treatise of Education.

5 Who stabs at this my heart, stabs at a kingdom;

These veins are rivers, and these arteries
Are every roads; this body is your country.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Herod. Act ii.

6 I never was a good son or a good brother or a good patriot in the sense of thinking that my mother and my sister and my native country were better than other people's, because I happened to belong to them.

BERNARD SHAW, The Irrational Knot. Ch. 6.

7 None loves his king and country better,
Yet none was ever less their debtor.

SWIFT, A Pastoral Dialogue.

8 The ever lustrous name of patriot

10 "O dear Mother Outline! of wisdom most sage,

What's the first part of painting?" She said.
"Patronage."

PATRONAGE

"And what is the second, to please and engage?"

She frowned like a fury, and said: "Patronage."

"And what is the third?" She put off old age,
And smil'd like a siren, and said: "Patronage."

13 And thou shalt prove how salt a savor hath
The bread of others, and how hard the path
To climb and to descend the stranger's stairs!
DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xvii, l. 58.

14 Is not a Patron, my Lord, one who looks with unconcern on a man struggling for life in the water, and, when he has reached ground, encumbers him with help?

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to the Earl of Chesterfield, 7 Feb., 1755. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.) Johnson's explanation to Boswell of the letter was: "Sir, after making great professions, he had, for many years, taken no notice of me; but when my Dictionary was coming out, he fell a scribbling in The World about it. Upon which, I wrote him a letter expressed in civil terms, but such as might shew him that I did not mind what he said or wrote, and that I had done with him."

Patron: Commonly a wretch who supports with insolence, and is paid with flattery.

6 Peace at any price. (Paix à tout prix.)
LAMARTINE (ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, Letters and Remains, p. 105.)

The Ministry of peace at any price. (Le Ministère de la Paix à tout prix.)
ARMAND CARRÉL, referring to the Périé ministry. (National, 13 March, 1831.)

We love peace, as we abhor pusillanimity; but not peace at any price. There is a peace more destructive of the manhood of living man than war is destructive of his material body. Chans are worse than hayonets.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Specimens of Jerrold's Wit: Peace.

Though not a "peace-at-any-price" man, I am not ashamed to say that I am a peace-at-almost-any-price man.

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK, The Use of Life Ch. 11.
Lord Palmerston sneered at John Bright as a "peace-at-any-price man."

Professional pacifists, the peace-at-any-price, non-resistance, universal arbitration people, are seeking to Chinify this country.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, San Francisco.
If I must choose between peace and righteousness, I choose righteousness.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Unwise Peace Treaties.
There is a price which is too great to pay for peace, and that price can be put in one word. One cannot pay the price of self-respect.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Des Moines, 1 Feb., 1916.

7 Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.
New Testament: Luke, ii, 14.

Peace be to this house.
New Testament: Luke, x, 5 (Pax huc domui. —Vulgate.)

Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces.

Old Testament: Psalms, xcix, 7.

That peace which made thy prosperous reign to shine,
That peace thou lovest to thy imperial line,
That peace, oh, happy shade, be ever thine.
DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis. St. 9.

8 Blessed are the peace-makers.
New Testament: Matthew, v, 9. (Beati pacifici. —Vulgate.)

Your "if" is the only peace-maker; much virtue in "if."
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 4, l. 107.

I hate your if's.
STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. i, ch. 12.

9 Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him.
New Testament: Matthew, v, 25.

If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men.
New Testament: Romans, xii, 18.

10 Fair peace is becoming to men; fierce anger belongs to beasts. (Candida pax homines, trux decet ira feras.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 502.

11 An equal doom clipp'd Time's blest wings of peace.

PETARCHI, To Laura in Death. Sonnet xlviii.

12 Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace.

Old Testament: Proverbs, vii, 17.

13 Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 445.

Enrich the time to come with smooth-faced peace,

With smiling plenty and fair prosperous days!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 5, l. 33.

14 No more shall . . . Peace

Pipe on her pastoral flock a languid note,
And watch her harvest ripen.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. ii, sec. 6, st. 2.

15 Peace is always beautiful.

WALT WHITMAN, The Sleepers.

16 Who gives a nation peace, gives tranquillity to all.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Sir Horace Mann, 3 Oct., 1762.

17 It must be a peace without victory.

WOODROW WILSON, Address to U. S. Senate, 22 Jan., 1917.

Open covenants of peace openly arrived at. . . . Absolute freedom of navigation upon the seas outside territorial waters alike in peace and in war. . . . The removal, so far as possible, of all economic barriers and the establishment of an equality of trade conditions among all nasigna. . . . Adequate guarantees given and taken that national armaments will be reduced to the lowest point consistent with domestic safety.

WOODROW WILSON, First four of Fourteen Points.

III—Peace with Honor

1 Lord Salisbury and myself have brought you back peace—but a peace, I hope, with honour.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, after Berlin Congress, 16 July, 1878.

2 With peace and honour I am willing to spare anything so as to keep all ends together.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 25 May, 1663.

3 If peace cannot be maintained with honour, it is no longer peace.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL, Speech, at Greenock, Sept., 1853.

4 That it shall hold companionship in peace With honour, as in war.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act III, sc. 2, l. 49.

We have made peace

With no less honour to the Antiates Than shame to the Romans.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 6, l. 79.

5 Not thus doth Peace return!
A blessed visitant she comes;
Honour in his right hand
Doth lead her like a bride.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Corinna Aulica. Sec. 5.

6 Peace with honor.

THEOBALD, COUNT OF CHAMPAGNE, Letter to Louis the Great. c. 1125. (WALTER MAY, De Nugis Curialium, p. 220); SIR KENELM DIGBY, Letter to Lord Bristol, 27 May, 1625.

He had rather spend £10,000 on Embassies to keep or procure peace with dishonour, than £10,000 on an army that would have forced peace with honour.

SIR ANTHONY WILSON, The Court and Character of King James, p. 185. (1650)

IV—Peace: World Peace

7 To make peace in Europe possible, the last representative of the pre-war generation must die and take his pre-war mentality into the grave with him.

EDUARD BERNÉ, Interview, Dec., 1929.

8 As I read this to-day what a change! The world convulsed by war as never before. Men slaying each other like wild beasts.

ANDREW CARRUTHER, Autobiography. The abrupt close of the manuscript.

9 War will never yield but to the principles of universal justice and love, and these have no sure root but in the religion of Jesus Christ.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, Lecture on War. Peace cannot be kept by force. It can only be achieved by understanding.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Notes on Pacifism.

10 An end to these bloated armaments.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, advocating disarmament, 1862. See also under PREPAREDNESS.

11 Instead of by battles and Ecumenical Councils, the rival portions of humanity will one day dispute each other's excellence in the manufacture of little cakes.

FOURIER. (EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Man of Letters.)

12 The only foes that threaten America are the enemies at home, and these are ignorance, superstition and incompetence.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. II, p. 36.

13 The closeness of their [the nations'] intercourse will assuredly render war as absurd and impossible by-and-by, as it would be for Manchester to fight with Birmingham, or Holborn Hill with the Strand.

LEIGH HUNT, Poems: Preface.

14 They shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

Old Testament: Isaiah, II, 4; Joel, III, 10; Micah, IV, 3.

The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid.

Old Testament: Isaiah, XI, 6.

15 An association of men who will not quarrel with one another is a thing which never yet existed, from the greatest confederacy of nations down to a town-meeting or a vestry.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Taylor, 1798.

You have not been mistaken in supposing my views and feeling to be in favor of the abolition of war. . . . I hope it is practicable, by improving the mind and morals of society, to lessen the disposition to war; but of its abolition I despair.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. XVIII, p. 298.

16 An angel with a trumpet said,
"Forevermore, forevermore,
The reign of violence is o'er!"

LONGFELLOW, The Occultation of Orion. St. 4.

Were half the power that fills the world with terror,

Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts,

Given to redeem the human mind from error,

There were no need of arsenals and forts.
H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Arsenal at Springfield.

Peace! and no longer from its brazen portals
The blast of War's great organ shakes the skies!

But beautiful as songs of the immortals,
The holy melodies of love arise.
LONGFELLOW, The Arsenal at Springfield.

Buried was the bloody hatchet;
Buried was the dreadful war-club;
Buried were all warlike weapons,
And the war-cry was forgotten.
Then was peace among the nations.
LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. xiii, l. 7.

War in men's eyes shall be
A monster of iniquity
In the good time coming.
Nations shall not quarrel then,
To prove which is the stronger;
Nor slaughter men for glory's sake;—
Wait a little longer.
CHARLES MACKAY, The Good Time Coming.

No war, or battle's sound
Was heard the world around;
The idle spear and shield were high up hung.
MILTON, Hymn on the Morning of Christ's Nativity, l. 53.

To discover a system for the avoidance of war is a vital need of our civilization; but no such system has a chance while men are so unhappy that mutual extermination seems to them less dreadful than continued endurance of the light of day.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, The Conquest of Happiness, p. 15.

For lo! the days are hastening on,
By prophet-hards foretold,
When with the ever-circling years,
Comes round the age of gold;
When Peace shall over all the earth
Its ancient splendors fling
And the whole world send back the song
Which now the angels sing.
EDMUND HAMILTON SEARS, The Angels' Song.
See also under CHRISTMAS.

The time of universal peace is near;
Prove this a prosperous day, the three-nook'd
world
Shall bear the olive freely.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 6, l. 4.

Let the bugles sound the Truce of God to the whole world forever.
CHARLES SUMNER, Oration: The True Grandeur of Nations.

The battlefield as a place of settlement of disputes is gradually yielding to arbitral courts of justice.

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, *Dawn of World
Peace*. (U. S. Bureau of Education Bulletin.
No. 8.)

Ah! when shall all men's good
Be each man's rule, and universal Peace
Lie like a shaft of light across the land,
And like a lane of beams athwart the sea?
TENNYSON, The Golden Year, l. 47.

Till the war-drum throb'd no longer, and the battle-flags were fur'd
In the Parliament of man, the Federation of
the world.

ALFRED TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 127.

Who can fancy warless men?
Warless? war will die out late then. Will it ever? late or soon?
Can it, till this outworn earth be dead as yon dead world the moon?

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, l.
173.

The League of Nations is a declaration of love without the promise of marriage.
ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ. (So Say the Wise, p.
167.)

'Tis startin' a polis foolce to prevint war. . .
How'll they be ar-rmed? What a foolish question. They'll be ar-rmed with love, if coorse.

FIMLEY PETER DOWNE, On Making a Will.
Referring to W. J. Bryan's speech on League of Nations, 1920.

Beautiful that war and all its deeds of carnage, must in time be utterly lost;
That the hands of the sisters Death and Night incessantly softly wash again and ever again, this soiled world.

WALT WHITMAN, Drum-Taps: Reconciliation.

When Earth, as if on evil dreams,
Looks back upon her wars,
And the white light of Christ outstreams
From the red disk of Mars,

His fame who led the stormy van
Of battle well may cease;
But never that which crowns the man
Whose victory was Peace.

WHITTIER, William Francis Bartlett.

God for His service needeth not proud work of human skill;
They please Him best who labour most in peace to do His will.

WORDSWORTH, The Poet's Dream, l. 65.

The High Contracting Parties solemnly declare in the names of their respective peoples that they condemn recourse to war for the solution of international controversies, and renounce it as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another. The High Contracting Parties agree that the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them, shall never be sought except by pacific means.

Articles I and II of the Pact of Paris.

V—Peace: Its Faults

1 And Peace it self is War in Masquerade

DRYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 752; pt. ii, l. 369.

2 My argument is that War makes rattling good history; but Peace is poor reading.

THOMAS HARDY, The Dynasts Act ii, sc. 5

3 It is mutual cowardice that keeps us in peace
Were one-half of mankind brave, and one-half cowards, the brave would be always beating the cowards. Were all brave, they would lead a very uneasy life, all would be continually fighting; but being all cowards, we go on very well.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (Boeswell, Life, 28 April, 1778)

4 Now we suffer the ills of a long peace; luxury, more cruel than warfare, has overshadowed us. (Nunc patitur longæ pacis mala; sævior arma Læstia incubant.)

6 Nor is this peace, the nurse of drones and cowards,

Our health, but a disease

MASSEMER, The Maid of Honour. Act i, sc. 1

7 The brazen throat of war had ceased to roar:
All now was turn'd to jollity and game,
To luxury and riot, feast and dance.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 709

Peace to corrupt no less than war to waste.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 780

8 No more to watch at night's eternal shore,
With England's chivalry at dawn to ride;
No more defeat, faith, victory.—Oh, no more
A cause on earth for which we might have died.

JOHN MOWATT, Peace.

9 For peace do not hope; to be just you must break it.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Rules of the Road.

10 War its thousands slays, Peace its ten thousands

BILLY PORTER, Death, l. 178.

11 Plenty and peace breeds cowards' hardness ever

Of hardness is mother.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 21.

12 In this weak piping time of peace.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 1, l. 24.

13 Beware of the man who does not return your blow.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

There are pacifists in pleasure as well as pacifists in war. The latter are called cowards. The former are called leading moral citizens.

G. J. NATHAN, The World in Falseface.

14 Even war is better than a miserable peace.
(Miseram pacem vel bello bene mutari)

TACITUS, Annals Bk. iii, sec. 44

Down with a patched-up peace, sow seeds of wicked war! (Daice compositam pacem, sere crimina belli)

VIRGIL, Æneid Bk. vii, l. 339.

15 Why do they prate of the blessings of peace? we have made them a curse,

Pickpockets, each hand lusting for all that is not its own,

And lust of gain, in the spirit of Cain, is it better or worse

Than the heart of the citizen hissing in war on his own hearthstone?

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 1, st. 6.

When a Mammonite mother kills her babe for a burial-fee,

And Timour-Mammon grins on a pile of children's bones,

Is it peace or war? better, war! loud war by land and by sea,

War with a thousand battles, and shaking a hundred thrones!

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 1, st. 12.

16 Verily I do think
War is as hateful almost, and well-nigh
As ghastly, as this terrible Peace, whereby
We halt forever on the crater's brink,
And feed the wind with phrases.

WILLIAM WATSON, Ver Tenebrosum. It was a President of the French Senate who spoke of "The pernicious poison of a premature peace."

New Testament: Philippians, iv, 7

5 When a man finds no peace within himself it is useless to seek it elsewhere (Quand on ne trouve pas son repos en soi-même, il est inutile de le chercher ailleurs.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées, 571.

6 I shall not hold my little peace; for me
There is no peace but one.

ALICE MEYNELL, The Poet to the Birds.

7 I knew by the smoke, that so gracefully curl'd
Above the green elms, that a cottage was near,
And I said, "If there's peace to be found in
the world,

A heart that was humble might hope for it here!"

THOMAS MOORE, Ballad Stanzas. Said to refer to the old Redfield farm at Batavia, N. Y., where the poet passed a night in 1804.

8 Joy is like restless day; but peace divine

Like quiet night;

Lead me, O Lord, till perfect day shall shine
Through Peace to Light.

ANDREW ARN PROCTOR, Per Pacem ad Lucem.

9 But sometimes, through the Soul of Man,
Slow moving o'er his pain,

The moonlight of a perfect peace

Floods heart and brain.

WILLIAM SHARP, The White Peace.

10 We should have much peace if we would not busy ourselves with the sayings and doings of others.

THOMAS A. KEMP, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. I, ch. II.

Thy peace shall be in much patience.

THOMAS A. KEMP, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. III, ch. 25.

12 To be glad of life because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars, to be satisfied with your possessions but not contented with yourself until you have made the best of them, to despise nothing in the world except falsehood and meanness and to fear nothing except cowardice, to be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts, to covet nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners, to think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends, and every day of Christ, and to spend as much time as you can, with body and with spirit, in God's out-of-doors, these are little guide-posts on the footpath to peace.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Footpath to Peace

13 Peace begins just where ambition ends.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts Night v, l. 940.

PEACH

14 And the soft gold-down on her silken chin
Is like the under side of a ripe peach.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Polyphemus's Passion.

15 A little peach in the orchard grew,—
A little peach of emerald hue;

Warmed by the sun and wet by the dew,
It grew.

One day, passing that orchard through,
That little peach dawned on the view
Of Johnny Jones and his sister Sue—
Them two . . .

Hard trials for them two,
Johnny Jones and his sister Sue,
And the peach of emerald hue,

That grew

Listen to my tale of woe!

John took a bite and Sue took a chew,
And then the trouble began to brew,—
Trouble the doctor could n't subdue.

Too true!

Under the turf where the daisies grew
They planted John and his sister Sue,
And their little souls to the angels flew,— Boo-hoo!

EVONNE FIELD, The Little Peach

16 The peach will have wine, and the fig water.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditus (1577)

17 An apple is an excellent thing—until you have tried a peach!

GEORGE DU MAURIER, Trilby, p. 256.

18 Give me women as soft, and as delicate, and as velvet as my peaches! . . . with peaches and women, it's only this side next the sun that's tempting.

DUIDA, Strathmore.

As touching peaches in general, the very name in Latin, whereby they are called Persica, doth evidently show that they were brought out of Persia first.

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xv, sec. 13.

Pill [peel] a fig for your friend, and a peach for your enemy.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. From the Italian, "Al amico cura gli il fico, al inimico il perico."

The ripest peach is highest on the tree.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, The Ripest Peach.

Oh, Persica, Persica, pale and fair,
With a ripe blush on your cheek,
How pretty—how very pretty you are,
Until you begin to speak!
As for a heart and soul, my dear,
You have not enough to sin;
Outside so fair, like a peach you are,
With a stone for a heart within.
W. W. STORZ, Persica

PEACOCK

Like an imperial peacock stalk abroad
(That royal bird, whose tail's a diadem).

BYRON, Don Juan Canto vii, st. 74.

And stately peacocks with their splendid eyes.

THOMAS HOOD, Plea of the Midsummer Fairies

Like a peacock whose eyes are inclin'd to his tail.

THOMAS HOOD, A Partisan Glance.

To Paradise, the Arabs say,
Satan could never find the way
Until the peacock led him in.

CHARLES GOUFRET LELAND, The Peacock.

And like a peacock sweep along his tail.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 6.

Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock,— a stride and a stand.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 251.

Proud as peacocks.

SHERLOCKE, Haicher of Heresies. (1565)

The pride of the peacock is the glory of God.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

"Fly pride," says the peacock.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 81.

And there they placed a peacock in his pride.

TERNEYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 829.

She is a peacock in everything but beauty.

OSCAR WILDE, Pictures of Dorian Gray. Ch. 1.

PEARL

If that a pearl may in a toad's head dwell,
And may be found too in an oyster shell.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology for His Book, l. 80.

Has a pearl less whiteworm

Because of its birth?

THOMAS MOORE, Desmond's Song.

They [the Russians] came to the court balls dropping pearls and vermin.

MACAULAY, History of England Ch. 23.

Give not that which is holy unto the dogs,
neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 6.

Men should not put pearls white

To-lore rude swine.

PEDANTRY

Pedantry consists in the use of words unsuitable to the time, place, and company.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 10

He who is in some measure a pedant, though he may be wise, cannot be a very happy man.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Round Table. Vol. II, p. 28.

A profound man, who has become hollow.

VICTOR HUGO, Ninety-Three. Pt. ii, bk. iii, ch.

1. He was speaking of Sieyès, and echoing Talleyrand's epigram, also of Sieyès: Profond, hem! vous voulez dire, peut-être, creux: Perhaps you mean hollow. Jean d'Alembert has already said of French philosophers: They believe themselves profound, while they are merely hollow.

Pedantry is the dotage of knowledge.

HOLBROOK JACKSON, Anatomy of Bibliomania, p. 150.

1 An artist may visit a museum, but only a pedant can live there.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Life of Reason, iv, 129.

2 Bold in thy applause,
The Bard shall scorn pedantic laws.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto v, Introduction.

3 The vacant skull of a pedant generally furnishes out a throne and a temple for vanity.
WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Books and Writers.

4 Figures pedantical.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 408.

How fiery and forward our pedant is!

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 1, 48.

5 A reasoning, self-sufficing thing,
An intellectual All-in-all.

WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph. St. 8.

PELICAN

6 What, wouldst thou have me turn pelican, and feed thee out of my own vitals?

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 1.

7 By them there sat the loving pelican,
Whose young ones, poison'd by the serpent's sting,
With her own blood to life again doth bring.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Noah's Flood.

8 Like the kind, life-retiring pelican,
Repast them with my blood.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 146.

That blood already, like the pelican,
Hast thou tapp'd out and drunkenly caroused.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 126.

9 A wonderful bird is the pelican!
His bill will hold more than his belican.

He can take in his beak

Food enough for a week

But I'm darned if I see how the helican.

DIXON L. MERRITT, The Pelican. One of Woodrow Wilson's favorite limericks.

9. A cowardly rabble, bold only in tongue. (Vulgus ignavum et nihil ultra verba ausurum.)

TACITUS, History, Bk. iii, sec. 58.

10. The public be damned.

WILLIAM H. VANDERBILT, Retired, to Clarence Drew, a reporter for the Chicago Tribune, in 1883, when asked whether the public had been consulted about the proposed discontinuance of a fast mail train to Chicago over the New York Central Railroad.

Vanderbilt had explained that the train didn't pay. "Are you working for the public or for your stockholders?" the reporter asked. "The public be damned! I'm working for my stockholders," was Vanderbilt's reply. Henry Crows is the authority for this version of the incident. (See letters in N. Y. Times, 25 Aug., 1918; N. Y. Herald, 1 Oct., 1918; 28 Oct., 1918.)

II—People: Vox Populi, Vox Dei

14. A people's voice is a mighty power. (Θάμνη γὰρ πόλιος ἀνθρώπων πύξυς σέβεται.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 938.

15. The voice of the people is the voice of God. (Vox populi, vox dei.)

ALCUIN, Epistle to Charlemagne, c. 800. (Admonitio ad Carolum Magnum: Works, Epis. 127.) The context is: "We would not listen to those who were wont to say the voice of the people is the voice of God, for the voice of the mob is near akin to madness." (Nec audiendi sunt qui solent dicere vox populi, vox dei; cum tumultus vulgi semper insanie proxima est.) Walter Reynolds, Archbishop of Canterbury, took "Vox Populi, Vox Dei" as the text of his sermon when Edward III ascended the throne, 1 Feb., 1327. Referred to as a proverb as early as 920 by William of Malmesbury (De Gestis Pont., fo. 114.)

16. The voice of the people is in some ways divine. (Θεὸς γὰρ τίς ἐστι καὶ ἄνθρωπος.)

HERODOTUS, Works and Days, l. 764. (c. 735 B.C.)

The voice of the people has about it something divine. (Vox populi habet aliquid divinum.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum, Pt. i, bk. 6, ch. 9.

Do not wonder if the common people speak more truly than those of higher rank; for they speak with more safety.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum, Pt. i, bk. 6, ch. 9.

17. People's voice is God's voice, men say.

THOMAS HOOD, De Regimine Principum, 104. (1412)

1 Surely the voice of the public, when it calls so loudly, and only for mercy, ought to be heard.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Boswell, 1777.

2 The People's voice is odd; It is, and it is not, the voice of God.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, II, 1, 89.

3 Sacred is the speech of the people: (Sacra populi lingua est.)

SENeca, Rhetor. Controv., I, l. 10. So quoted by Büchmann (Geflügelte Worte), but the correct reading is now generally held to be, "Sacra populi digna est."

4 Scripture calling the voice of the people the voice of God. (Scriptoris dicente vox populi, vox Dei.)

POPE SYLVESTER II, Epistles. Possibly a misreading of Isaiah, lvi, 6: "A voice from the temple, a voice of God."

5 It is the folly of too many to mistake the echo of a London coffee-house for the voice of the kingdom.

SWIFT The Conduct of the Allies.

III—People: Their Virtues

6 The conscience of a people is their power.

DRYDEN, The Duke of Guise. Act I, sc. 1.

7 March without the people, and you march into night: their instincts are a finger-pointing of Providence, always turned toward real benefit.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power. Quoted as having been said by "a French deputy from the tribune."

When I see how much each virtuous and gifted person, whom all men consider, lives affectionately with scores of excellent people who are not known far from home, and perhaps with great reason reckons these people his superiors in virtue and in the symmetry and force of their qualities,—I see what cubic values America has, and in these a better certificate of civilization than great cities or enormous wealth.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.

8 About things on which the public thinks long, it commonly attains to think right.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works Vol. III, p. 90.

9 For as we come and as we go (and dead-ly soon go we!)

The people, Lord, Thy people, are good enough for me!

RUDYARD KIPLING, A Pilgrim's Way.

And, Amorite or Eremitte, or General Averagee, The people, Lord, Thy people, are good enough for me!

RUDYARD KIPLING, A Pilgrim's Way.

10 Why should there not be a patient confidence in the ultimate justice of the people? Is there any better or equal hope in the world?

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, First Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1861.

11 The common crowd is wiser because it is just as wise as it need be. (Plus sapit vulgus quia tantum, quantum opus est, sapit.)

LACTANTIUS, Divinarum Institutionum. Bk. III, sec. 5.

12 The people docile to the yoke. (Ad juga cur faciles populi.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civilis. Bk. II, l. 314.

13 For the crowd, the incredible has sometimes more power and is more credible than truth.

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 42.

15a Folks are better than angels.

EDWARD THOMPSON TAYLOR, minister of the Seamen's Bethel, in North Square, Boston, Mass., when his friends tried to comfort him, as he lay dying in 1871, by assuring him that he would soon be among the angels.

16 The mind of the people is like mud, From which arise strange and beautiful things.

W. J. TURNER, Talking with Soldiers.

IV—People: Their Faults

17 Nothing moderate is pleasing to the crowd.

BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. I, bk. 6.

It is not given to the world to be moderate.

GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann.

18 The Public is an old woman. Let her moulder and mumble.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 1835.

19 The public! why, the public's nothing better than a great baby.

THOMAS CHALMERS, Letter.

The public is just a great baby.

JOHN RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies. Sec. I, 40. Paraphrasing Chalmers.

20 The public! How many fools does it take to make a public? (Le public! Combien faut-il de sots pour faire un public?)

SERASTIN CHAMFORT, Masimes.

Why then, I say, the Public is a fool.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, II, 1, 94.

21 The herd of mankind can hardly be said to think; their notions are almost all adoptive;

and, in general, I believe it is better that it should be so, as such common prejudices contribute more to order and quiet than their own separate reasonings would do, uncultivated and unimproved as they are.

The rabble values few things according to truth, but many according to rumor. (Vulgus ex veritate pauca, ex opinione multa aestimat.)

CICERO, Pro Roscio Comada, Sec. 10.

If it has to choose who is to be crucified, the crowd will always save Barabbas.

JEAN COCTEAU, Le Rappel à l'Ordre, p. 31.

Nor is the people's judgment always true: The most may err as grossly as the few.

DRYDEN, Abdolon and Achitophel, Pt. i, l. 781.

Yet be not blindly guided by the throng; The multitude is always in the wrong.

WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated Verse, l. 183.

The public is a bad guesser.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Essays: Protestantism.

So void of pity is th' ignoble crowd,
When others' ruin may increase their store!

DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis, St. 250.

Leave this hypocritical prating about the masses. Masses are rude, lame, unmade, pernicious in their demands and influence, and need not to be flattered, but to be schooled. . . . The mass are animal, in pupillage, and near chimpanzee. But the units, whereof the mass is composed, are seeters, every one of which may be grown to a queen-bee.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

The people are to be taken in very small doses. If solitude is proud, so is society vulgar.

EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude.

The public have neither shame nor gratitude.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics No. 85.

There is not a more mean, stupid, dastardly, pitiful, selfish, spiteful, envious, ungrateful animal than the Public. It is the greatest of cowards, for it is afraid of itself.

HAZLITT, Table Talk: On Living to One's-Self.

The public pays with ingratitude.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful, were to make a monster of the multitude.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, Act II, sc. 3, l. 9.

Reason stands against it the sight of an "unprincipled, immoral, incorrigible" public; and the word of God stands in such threats and denunciations, as must strike terror into the heart of every believer.

HERMAN, Epica, Sermon (Vol. IV, 1).

There was not that variety of beasts in the ark, as of beastly natures in the multitude.

BEN JOHNSON, Exposita: Videlicet Moras.

And what the people, but a herd confus'd,
A miscellaneous rabble, who extol
Things vulgar?

MILTON, Paradise Regained, Bk. III, l. 49.

Let a man proclaim a new principle. Public sentiment will surely be on the other side.

THOMAS B. REED (W. A. ROBINSON, Life).

Who that is pleased by virtue can please the mob? It takes trickery to win the mob's approval. (Quis enim placere populo potest, cui placet virtus? Malis artibus popularis favor queritur.)

SENeca, Epistula ad Lucillum, Epis. xxix, 11.

'Faith there have been many great men, that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus Act II, sc. 2, l. 8

I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits,
And rank me with the barbarous multitudes

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, Act II, sc. 9, l. 31.

But when the Crier cried, "O Yes!" the people cried, "O No!"

R. H. BARRAGE, Ami Fanny.

O stormy people, unsad and ever untrue,
And undiscrict, and changing as a vane,
Delighting ever in rumble that is new,
For like the moon ay waxe ye and wane!

CHAUCER, The Clerk's Tale, l. 939 Unsad: i. e., unstable. Rumble, i. e., rumor.

No man who depends upon the caprice of the ignorant rabble can be accounted great. (Qui ex errore imperitiae multitudinis pendet, hic in magnis viris non est habendus.)

CICERO, De Officiis, Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 65.

Nothing is more uncertain than a dependence upon public bodies. They are moved like the wind, but rather more uncertain.

ABRAHAM CLARK, Letter to James Caldwell, 7 March, 1777.

The fickle mob ever changes along with the prince. (Mobile mutantur semper cum principe vulgus.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus de Quarto Consulatu Honorii Augusti, l. 302.

I have never wished to cater to the crowd; for what I know they do not approve, and what they approve I do not know. (Numquam volui populo placere. Nam quae ego

An habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 89.

Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro
as this multitude?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 8, l. 57.

Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust;
Such is the lightness of you common men.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 84.

The wavering mob is torn by opposite opinions. (Scinditur incertum studium in contraria volgus.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 39.

VI—People: Their Tyranny

The tyranny of a multitude is a multiplied tyranny.

EMERSON BURKE, Letter to Thomas Paine, 24 Feb., 1790.

The people are the masters.

EMERSON BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1790.

I think I hear a little bird, who sings
The people by and by will be the strongest.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 50.

The people will come to their own at last,—
God is not mocked forever.

JOHN HAY, The Sphinx of the Tuilleries.

The people's right remains; let those who dare
Dispute their power, when they the judges are.

What, shall the mob dictate my policy?
(Πόλις γὰρ τίς τις ἀπὸ τοῦ δόσεω ἀπεί.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 734.

What are the rank tongues
Of this vile herd, grown insolent with feeding,
That I should prize their noisy praise, or dread
Their noisome clamour?

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 2.

Our supreme governors, the mob.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letters: To Sir Horace Mann, 7 Sept., 1743.

VII—People: The Many-Headed Multitude

That great enemy of reason, virtue, and religion, the Multitude, that numerous piece of monstrosity . . . more prodigious than Hydra.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 1.

This many-headed monster, Multitude.
